

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

THE Customs' Consolidation Act has met with a more favourable reception, than commonly falls to the lot of penal or restrictive statutes. This is not so much to be attributed to anything new in its provisions as to the combination and arrangement of pre-existing law and practice, which it has effected. With the exception of the changes effected in pursuance of the Treasury Minute of the 14th of April last, and a few clauses engrafted on the bill, in its progress through Parliament, there is no substantial variance between the law, as now consolidated, and the practice, which prevailed under the former statutes. Although the former lex scripta remained, its provisions had, from time to time, been modified by such relaxations, as were called for by our expanding commerce, and deemed not incompatible with the security of the Revenue.

The Act has now been in force for more than six months, and it is not unworthy of remark, that, whilst it has greatly facilitated the operations of trade, no official inconvenience, has been experienced in its working, nor, indeed, has any complaint been made by any portion of the mercantile body, except as regards one or two provisions, engrafted on the bill, in its progress through the House of Commons—provisions, adopted on the suggestion of deputations from the merchants themselves. These were found so embarrassing in practice, that, they have already been dispensed with, by order of the Treasury, at the request of their originators.

It will be, probably, admitted, that the preparation of a work, to explain the law and practice of the Customs, was not inappropriately confided to the Solicitor. But, he does not, on that account, presume to claim any especial credit for his performance. In executing the task, he has not felt himself bound to adhere to the course pursued by the several authors, who had preceded him. There appeared to be no good reason, why a work on the Customs' Laws should not aspire to the rank of a regular and methodical treatise, designed, not only for the instruction of the officers, but for the assistance of the merchant in his transactions with them ; having regard, at the same time, to the convenience of the legal profession.

For one liberty taken by him some explanation may be required. It will be observed, that the chronological order of the Tariff and Consolidation Acts, chapters 106 and 107, has been reversed. As a frequent complaint against bye-gone legislation has been the multiplying of Revenue Acts, without regard to order, and the repetition of formal clauses in the Duties' Acts on each successive change in the Tariff, one of the objects of the present consolidation was to form a code of standing clauses, easy of reference, for regulating the collection and general management of the Customs, and leaving little more to be done, on each succeeding amendment of the Tariff, than the substitution of new tables of Duties. Hence, the Tariff Act is treated, as supplemental to the Consolidation Act, to which, as the governing code, precedence is given in the Commentary.

Before the passing of the Customs' Consolidation Act, the reports, those especially of the Court of Exchequer, would have furnished a considerable array of judicial decisions. It was, however, a leading object of the new Act to quiet pre-existing legal doubts and difficulties; and, as a consequence of the attainment of that object, a reference to many of the points formerly decided can be no longer necessary. Nevertheless, there remain various cases, involving principles of importance, which it would not be judicious to overlook. Hence, not only the published, but many manuscript reports, have been diligently examined and the decisions still applicable, though comparatively few, have been carefully noted.

Another feature of the present work is the circumstance of its not embracing any matter in detail beyond the strict sphere of Customs' Revenue Law. In this respect, too, it departs from the example of antecedent publications, in which, it was customary to combine, in the same volume, with those strictly applicable to the Customs, the various other statutes, which imposed on the Department duties totally unconnected with revenue. It seemed expedient to afford the commercial community the means of ascertaining their legal rights, duties and obligations, without encumbering them with a weighty appendix of statutes, in which, as a body, they can have little or no concern, reserving those statutes for another publication for the guidance of the officers of Customs, and that portion of the community whose interests may be specially affected by them. A further reason for this course is to be found in the fact, that many of the latter class of enactments are now the subject of consolidation, and, in all probability, had they been appended to this work, a moiety of the volume would have become obsolete before the close of another session, not to speak of the time, labour and expense, which would have been thus wasted. It has, however, been deemed convenient to furnish, by way of note, or abstract where necessary, such information as may be essential for present official purposes. The work, now submitted to the public, will be followed by a supplementary volume, comprising, as a prominent portion of its contents, the new law, relating to the Mercantile Marine, including the registry of shipping, and the other statutes incidental to Customs' administration, not appended to this volume.

In submitting the following pages to the public, the author is but too sensible of the deficiencies of his performance. But, in his case, at least, and, at a period, when the official duties of the department of the service, over which he presides, have become onerous, beyond all former example, he hopes for the indulgent consideration of his readers.

TABLE OF STATUTES.

"* The following List of Statutes may appear somewhat inconsistent with the fact that the whole of the Customs' laws are consolidated in one Act. A considerable number of them are merely referred to in elucidation of the various subjects treated of, and the remainder have no reference to the Customs in strictness, although that department is charged to a large extent with the administration of them.

INTRODUCTION.

THE legislative history of the Customs' Duties may be regarded as originating with the statute 3 Edward I., though those duties, or impositions analogous to them, appear to have had a long antecedent existence. Great Britain did not escape the exactions which the Roman conquerors were always prompt to impose upon vanquished and tributary kingdoms; and the revenues of the Cæsars were swelled by heavy duties on the importation and exportation of British merchandise.⁽¹⁾ Nor were the Saxon

(1) The ancient Romans showed no mercy to the nations they conquered. No sooner were the natives completely disarmed, and a little inured to the yoke, than they found how fatal it was to be subject to distant rulers, ignorant of their situation, and careless of their complaints. Provided a revenue was raised, they were little anxious about the means by which it was effected: but tyranny defeats its own object, and those countries are uniformly the most productive of revenue, where there is the least oppression, and where the greatest attention is paid to the happiness and prosperity of the people.

The taxes paid by Britain, and the other provinces of the empire, were partly levied in kind, and partly in money. Those who paid taxes in kind, were obliged to furnish about a tenth part of the produce of their lands, and to carry the quantity they were rated at, to any distance however great, according to the supposed necessities of the State, or to the monarchs slow to copy the example which the Romans had set them of this ancient method of raising a revenue.⁽¹⁾ Etheldred II., amongst the laws enacted at Wantage, in Berkshire, established duties on ships and merchandise to be paid at Billingsgate in the Port of London, according to the following rates:—Every boat arriving at that part of the Thames paid for toll or custom, one half-penny; a larger boat with sails, a penny; a keel or hulk, which was a vessel of larger size, fourpence; a vessel with wood, one piece of wood; a boat with fish coming to the bridge, one half-penny, or one penny, according to her caprice of those who were in power. So heavy a duty was laid upon cattle (in which Britain particularly abounded), that, joined to other grievances, it was the occasion of a very dangerous revolt, which was not extinguished but with the greatest difficulty. Heavy customs were paid upon goods both imported and exported. The proprietors of mines were obliged to pay a certain share of their profits, for the benefit of the State. A duty was laid upon commodities sold by auction, or in the public market, above a certain value. Capitation taxes were rigorously exacted; to which might be added a variety of other imposts on legacies, slaves, houses, pillars, hearths, air, artists, animals, and other articles too tedious to mention. "Nay, such, it was said, is the exquisite tyranny, and insatiable avarice of the Romans, that they extort taxes even from the dead" (Xiphil. ex Dione Nicolo, in Nerone); alluding to a duty upon the body of the deceased, before it was suffered to be buried." —Sinclair on Rev., p. 19.

(1) By the original constitution of the Anglo-Saxon government, there were three important duties, commonly known by the name of the trinoda necessitas, to which every proprietor of land was subject. At first, they were exacted in kind, and every individual was obliged to appear in person, when legally called upon, for the purpose of repelling the enemy, of constructing fortresses for the public defence, or repairing the bridges necessary for the internal commerce of the country. Such services, both for the advantage of the State, and the convenience of its more opulent and industrious members, were gradually converted into money; and hence arose the taxes known under the name of Here-geld, Burg-bote and Brig-bote, which it appears were occasionally levied by the Saxon monarchs.—Sinclair on Rev., p. 19.

size.⁽¹⁾ The Customs' Duties are supposed to have been, at the commencement, small sums paid by the merchant for the use of the King's Warehouses, weights, and measures.⁽²⁾ But these were extended in course of time and commuted into an impost upon merchandise itself, the consideration given by the Crown being permission to its own subjects, to travel out of the realm with their merchandise, and to foreign merchants, to import goods into the kingdom. To the foregoing, a further consideration may be added. As the arbiter of commerce, the Sovereign took upon himself the protection of merchants and their vessels from enemies and pirates; and the merchants acknowledged the value of this protection by freely submitting to the imposts levied.

In referring the legislative foundation of Customs' Duties to the reign of Edward I., the high authority of Lord Coke, concurred in by Mr. Justice Blackstone, is adopted.⁽³⁾ The duties themselves, when first laid on, were very moderate; but the necessities of King Edward led to the imposition of additional duties on aliens or foreigners, to reconcile them to which, he granted a charter, denominated charta mercatoria,⁽⁴⁾ to the merchant traders settled in England, by which valuable privileges were bestowed on them in consideration of their having agreed to pay the Customs of "prisage and butlerage," together with certain duties on wool⁽¹⁾ exported from, and on various goods imported into, the kingdom. The right of adding to the old, or of levying new Customs, exercised upon the independent authority of the Sovereign, was for many years a subject of warm contest between the Crown and the people, the former asserting the right, as inherent to the Royal Prerogative, the people insisting, that it could not rest on any other legal foundation, than an Act of the Legislature.

The opinion of Lord Coke, as to the origin of the Custom duties, has not been universally admitted; Lord Chief Baron Gilbert accounts for their institution in a different manner: he says that in the reign of Edward the First, houses were erected in every port, for keeping wares and merchandize, imported and exported, and there was a particular sum paid for the custodium, which was called the Customs, and from whence he took the word to be derived. "For," he says, "when Edward the First, Richard the First, or whatever other king first erected those houses and appointed particular sorts of payments, they could not be called customary or usual payments, for it is a solecism in language to say, that they were customary or usually paid when they first began. The subjects bore these payments very well upon their wool, woolfels and leather from the convenience that arose from the Custom-houses, which formed a place of deposit for their goods." This, according to Lord Chief Baron Gilbert, was the origin of the Customs, and he concludes his statement with the remark, "that there is no room to suppose that the Customs began by an Act of Parliament, which is lost," and which he describes "as the common refuge of lawyers when they cannot find the original of things."

After stating the arguments on either side, Mr. Chitty says:—"The better opinion seems to be, that the legal right of the Crown to demand such payments, as can with propriety be called Customs, originated in an Act of Parliament; and though similar duties were certainly exacted in the reigns of Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth, of James I. and Charles I., without the consent of Parliament, yet they were never quietly submitted to, and cannot be considered as resting on any legal foundation. The statute 1 Wm. & Mary, sess. 2. cap. 2, usually called the Bill of Rights, has effectually put an end to the exercise of any such power on the part of the Crown."⁽¹⁾

The first Act for the Consolidation of the Customs' Duties, 12 Car. 2. cap. 4. was passed immediately after the Restoration. The Table of Duties enumerated in that Act was called the "Book of Rates," and the Statute itself was dignified with the title of "The Great Statute." It was undoubtedly an important enactment. Its effect was both prospective and retrospective. It confirmed, for the king's life, the old subsidies of tonnage and poundage, and woollen cloths; and it laid the foundation of our modern Tariff broad and deep on the sanction of the legislature. An additional "Book of Rates" on goods usually imported, and not particularly rated in the former volume, with Rules and Orders, was signed in the reign of George I., by Mr. Speaker Compton, and authorised by the statute 11 Geo. I. cap. 7.

In addition to the duties enumerated in these books of rates, others were, from time to time, imposed, as the exigencies of the state required. A large increase was made to the articles charged with duty. The confusion arising from a multiplication of dutiable articles was aggravated by the careless manner in which new duties were accumulated on the old, a per centage being occasionally added to the original tax; while in other instances the commodity was estimated by a new standard, either of bulk, weight, number, or value, and charged with an additional impost, without any reference to the duties formerly imposed. The growing intricacy was still further augmented by the special appropriation of each of these duties, and by the consequent necessity of a separate calculation for each.⁽¹⁾ Delays, which em-

The case taken, is that of 20 lb of rhubarb, then subject to a duty of 20s. per pound. It will be observed, that in order to calculate the duty payable on this article, it was necessary to refer to seven different Acts of Parliament, some of them imposing duties in addition to those originally imposed; and again reducing those duties by discounts varying in amount. Others accumulating what were termed "New Subsidies" upon those previously chargeable; and others again, imposing independent duties upon the landing of the goods, together with additional duties after the landing had taken place.

abuses, which such confusion tended to encourage⁽¹⁾. To remedy these inconveniences, Mr. Pitt introduced, in 1787, the statute 27th Geo. III. cap. 13, called "The Customs' Consolidation Act." That Act was, in every respect, worthy of the financial genius of its author. It repealed all Customs' duties payable to his Majesty by virtue of any Acts of Parliament then in force on importation or exportation, or the carrying of goods coastwise together with the drawbacks allowed on exportation, and, proceeding upon the sagacious principle of clearing the ground for a new scale of duties and an improved method of collection, it swept away all the subsisting charges. Instead of those, it substituted a single duty upon each article, amounting, as nearly as possible, to the aggregate of all the various imposts then payable; and when any duty consisted of a fractional sum, the nearest integral number was charged. The series of resolutions submitted to the House of Commons for the purpose of carrying this measure into effect amounted to upwards of 3,000. A systematic simplicity and uniformity was by the same Act introduced into the Custom-house accounts in accordance with the recommendations of the Commissioners of Public Accounts. These officers, in three separate reports, had fully explained the constitution of the Customs' department, the duties of its several functionaries, and the mode of collecting the Customs, both in London and the out-ports. Finally, in lieu of the tables contained in the old "Rate Books," the new duties were set down in alphabetical order in tables annexed to the Act.

These amendments were attended with the most beneficial effects to commerce. The same cause, however, which rendered their adoption necessary, again supervened to require ameliorations in the law. Statute was accumulated upon statute to such an extent, that the laws of the Customs in 1797, are reported by a Committee of the House of Commons to have been so voluminous, as to fill "six large volumes in folio, unprovided with any index, not published, and not to be commonly obtained by purchase."⁽¹⁾ These statutes continued to increase year by year, and became ultimately so numerous, that in the year 1810, the Lords of the Treasury decided upon the necessity of having a "Digest of the Laws of the Customs" prepared; and the late Mr. Jickling, of Her Majesty's Customs, who had already voluntarily devoted nearly twenty years to the work, and for which reason he was selected, was entrusted with the task. With an amount of perseverance rarely exampled in so uninviting an occupation, Mr. Jickling applied himself to the completion of a Summary of the various statutes, with references to the acts themselves; and in 1815, he produced, as the result of this additional five years' unremitting labour, a Digest, in the shape of a large quarto volume of 1,375 closely printed pages. This work may be truly described as the fruit of a quarter of a century's labour; and was for many years the only official "Hand Book" to Customs' law and practice, with the exception of an abridgment, published in 1819, of the Laws relating to Imports and Exports, comprised in 629 pages, the joint production of Mr. Richard Frewin, one of the Chairmen of the Board, and of Mr. Jickling. From the bulk and high selling price of Mr. Jickling's Digest, its circulation was extremely limited, and its utility commensurately circumscribed.

In 1824, the idea was first entertained of bringing the non-obsolete of these provisions together, and Mr. James Deacon Hume, then Comptroller of Customs at the Port of London, undertook the task. After an uninterrupted labour of three years, he succeeded in collating the scattered enactments and bringing them into something like order, classified and arranged under ten different heads, and embodied in as many separate Acts of Parliament. This was justly deemed a great triumph of industry and skill; and it may be affirmed, without detracting from the peculiar merits of Mr. Jickling's performance, that it was the first practically successful step taken in the right direction; but in the subsequent dealings with the Customs' Laws, so far from progressing in the cause of legal reform, the rather retrograde course of resorting to separate amendment Acts was from time to time adopted. Even Mr. Hume's second Essay was a species of duplex consolidation, consisting of a re-issue of the ten original Acts, with a yearly Supplement, giving, in addition to the originals, the various amendment Acts passed annually. This was followed by a series of annual supplements, which, in their turn, became the subject of further codification, in 1845, by the late Mr. Walford, Solicitor of Customs, for which purpose he was, for many months, released from the ordinary duties of his office. But, he was not much more successful in his efforts at reform, inasmuch as, treading in the steps of Mr. Hume, he simply consolidated the existing law, by introducing into the ten original Acts, the clauses of the subsequent amendment Acts. In each of these separate statutes, the same arrangement of subject had been observed, as in Mr. Hume's pre-existing ones, the amendment clauses being classed under their respective heads. The character of Mr. Walford's Consolidation of 1845 cannot be better conveyed than by an extract from the preface to his compilation:—"To effect this, a Repealing Act has been passed, by which the then existing ten Acts and all amendments of them were repealed, and ten other Acts have also been passed, founded upon Mr. Hume's Consolidation, adopting his arrangement, and embodying in their respective places the different existing provisions by which alterations had been effected."

Thus, it appears, that the "Consolidation" of 1845, was little more than a republication of the pre-existing sections of the law almost verbatim, in the same form, in the same number of Acts, and under the same titles, as those originally adopted by Mr. Hume. Indeed, the most striking commentary on the impolicy of this species of legislation is to be found in the fact, that by this mechanical process of transcribing the sections as he found them, not only did the compiler fail to expunge the clauses, which lapse of time, the progressive changes in commercial operations, and the adaptation thereto of Customs' practice, had rendered obsolete, but actually re-enacted and revived many provisions, which had either been annulled by Treasury order, abrogated by relaxations of the executive, or, de facto, repealed by Parliament. There was, therefore, some foundation for the complaint, that the Consolidation of 1845, and the rapid succession of amendments, numbering in the course of the six ensuing years as many Acts as the originals, formed a code so voluminous and perplexing as almost to forfeit all claim to that appellation ; and, despite the old legal maxim, that the subject is presumed to know the law, and therefore bound by it, common justice demanded, that the acquisition of that knowledge should be rendered as easy of attainment as possible. Impressed with this view, the present Solicitor of Customs more than three years ago, suggested to the Board the propriety of consolidating into one Act all the existing provisions, which it might be deemed essential to retain, subject to such modifications as the progress of commerce and the course of trade had rendered indispensable, and of sweeping away, at the same time, by a general repeal, all that might be considered obsolete or redundant. This proposition was cordially received by the Commissioners, and general instructions were given by the Board to proceed with the project as opportunity served. Some explanation may, therefore, reasonably be looked for as to the cause of the delay. From the peculiar nature of the subject, its intimate connection with particular commercial operations and the necessity (though the primary object of these laws is the security of the revenue), for a practical adaptation of the Customs' code to the circumstances and requirements of trade, it is obvious, that such a work could not, with a reasonable prospect of success, have been delegated to any professional men, however eminent, who did not combine with their legal attainments, an intimate acquaintance with the actual working of the laws, regulations, and general practice of the Customs' department, and the daily avocations of the mercantile body in connexion with it. This combination could only be attained by progressive and practical experience. Hence it was, that the task naturally devolved upon the Solicitor of Customs. It is not necessary to dwell upon the series of events, which, for nearly three years, diverted his attention from this important undertaking, beyond the observation that a considerable portion of that time was devoted to the subject of the recent enquiry by the Select Committee of the House of Commons, into the "Constitution and Management of the Customs." The consideration of the reports of that Committee, as well as the directions of the Government upon them of necessity enter largely into the question; and pending the promulgation of these, it would have been premature to have proceeded extensively with the work, even had the absorbing avocations of the Solicitor's department left him leisure for the task. Thus, by force of circumstances, the main work of consolidation was delayed, until the issue of the Treasury Minute of the 14th of April last, which detailed the important amendments, which their Lordships had decided, should be effected in the law.

The Government attached great consequence to the speedy development of the general scheme, and the practical adoption of the special provisions of the Treasury Minute; promising, as the latter did, advantages to the commercial community, which it would have been inexpedient to postpone. The work, therefore, proceeded with all possible despatch; and unremitting attention was devoted by the Board and their Solicitor to the preparation of the Bill, under the directions of the Lords of the Treasury. To the anxiety of the Government to consult the best interests of the mercantile community, so far as compliance might not affect the security of the revenue, may, to a great extent, be attributed the favour with which the measure has been received by that body. The Bill has now passed into a law, not only without opposition, but, it may be added, as a just tribute to honourable candour, with a general expression of the approbation of those, who at one time entertained feelings of distrust towards that branch of the executive to whom the task of its preparation had been confided. ⁽¹⁾

Having thus traced the history of Customs' legislation from its earliest date down to the passing of the "Customs Consolidation Act of 1853," an outline of the vast extent of duty which the law imposes, may furnish the means of forming an adequate appreciation of the arduous work to be performed by the Commissioners, while affording, at the same time, a clue to the policy and purposes of the new enactment.

The first branch of the statute comprises all that concerns the appointment of Officers — their salaries, superannuations, securities for good conduct, times of attendance, and duties generally. Connected with

(1) The ingenuousness and promptitude with which the representatives of the commerce of the great port of Liverpool recorded their testimony to the anxiety of the Government and the Customs' Department to respond to every reasonable suggestion of the mercantile body, claim the author's most respectful recognition. A communication to this gratifying effect was made a few days after the passing of the Act, by Thomas Bouch, Esq. Vice-President of the Council of the Chamber of Commerce, conveying the unanimous resolution of that body, at a meeting "specially convened for the purpose," expressive of their "best thanks to James Wilson, Esq., M. P., Secretary to the Treasury; Sir Thomas Fremantle, Chairman; F. J. Hamel, Esq., Solicitor; and F. St. John, Esq., Surveyor-General to the Board of Customs." An equally prompt and honourable testimony was officially communicated to the three former gentlemen on the part of the Dock Companies, recognizing the exertions of the executive, not merely with regard to "the interests and accommodation of the commercial community of that port," but "the very many other beneficial improvements of a still more public character which have been effected by the Customs' Consolidation Act, in our fiscal law." this division of the subject may be mentioned the appointment of ports, quays, warehouses, sufferance wharves, landing and boarding stations, the licensing and control of agents, and requiring the proper securities from them. Within the same classification are placed the receipt and payment of duties and the maintenance of the necessarily voluminous accounts incident to such extensive pecuniary operations. Embraced also, under this head, but distinct from the subsequent clauses relating to procedure in the Courts of Judicature, is the foundation of an open court for the determination of disputes and controversies between the merchant importers and the officers of Customs.⁽¹⁾

The second branch of the statute contains the several provisions applicable to the importation and warehousing of goods, extending from sec. 20 to sec. 54. These comprise the law as now applicable to ships on arrival in port—the importation of goods, the report and entry of them, the various modes of entry now required of the importer, abatement for damage, certificates of production in respect of imports, the growth or manufacture of the Colonies, &c., the unshipping, landing and examination of the cargo, the regulations for warehousing and securing goods, the payment of duties on which is postponed, the removal of warehoused goods, entry for home consumption and exportation, and lastly, certain Excise provisions, engrafted on the Bill, at the instance of the Board of Inland Revenue, during its progress through Parliament.

(1) It is a curious fact, and strikingly indicative of the misapprehension under which the establishment of an open court was urged upon the Government, that although 10 months has elapsed since the passing of the Act, the exercise of the functions of this tribunal has only been evoked in a single instance; from which it is reasonable to infer, either that such a tribunal was not so much desired, or that the mercantile and other interests for whom it was professedly instituted, really have few complaints to prefer; and that solitary case was merely to settle a doubt in the trade as to the definition of an harmomium stop.—ED., 22nd April, 1854.

Having exhausted the subject of importation, its incidents and consequences, the Act proceeds to deal with the third division,—exports and their attendant circumstances. In this distribution of its provisions a varied range of duty is prescribed, embracing the entry and clearance of goods, payments of drawback, shipping of stores, the clearance of ships outwards, and the boarding of ships after clearance.

The fourth head embraces the regulations affecting the coasting trade.

The fifth division embodies those provisions, which it has been deemed judicious to retain with reference to the British Possessions.

The sixth part deals with the important subject of Bonds and other Securities, given for the due performance of the obligations imposed on various classes of persons by the Customs Code generally, the principal alteration consisting in the substitution of a more inexpensive and expeditious mode of discharging the persons and estates of Crown debtors from the liabilities incident to those securities.

The seventh head contains general provisions in respect of minor classes of forgery, false declarations, and fraudulent counterfeitings.

In the eighth division of the subject will be found the existing law as to offences against the Customs generally ; that of smuggling, holding from its character the most prominent place, and made punishable by nearly the same penal inflictions as under the former statute. It seems the fatal necessity of this crime, that, whilst every other breach of the divine and social law may be visited by penalties, accordant with the mild temper of our civilised times, the law, with respect to smuggling, cannot be disarmed of its rigours. This may be attributed to two causes : First, The strange anomaly which appears to be generally admitted, that many persons who would recoil from committing a dishonourable act towards a neighbour, and spurn with indignation the suggestion of cheating their fellow men, in the ordinary relations of business, or the common affairs of life, nevertheless feel no compunction in defrauding the Crown with reference to their statutable liabilities. So far from having any scruples as to the evasion of the imposts and taxes which the exigencies of the state demand from him in common with his fellow subjects, the contrabandist views the perpetration of such fraud, not only with complacency, but persuades himself that there is something meritorious in the achievement of success. Thus, smuggling ceases to be viewed as a crime, and moral restraint has little influence on its prevention (1). Secondly, The artifices to which the professed smuggler resorts are of so subtle a character as to present in their application, proofs of the highest degree of ingenuity. Smuggling is no longer the bold profession of the daring contrabandists who, until the close of the last century, landed their cargoes in defiance of the law and resorted to open violence on the least show of resistance. It has, as exercised by modern practitioners, degenerated into petty chicanery. Fraud is perpetrated by every species of deception that can be devised; and in proportion to the difficulties of detection consequent on such dexterous practices does the necessity for punishment become indispensable when detection ensues. If any doubt could exist as to the exceptional character of penal enactments designed to protect the revenue collected for the benefit of all, it must be found in the fact, that, however strange, a morbid sympathy for the offender is felt rather than abhorrence of his conduct; whilst those whose unpopular duty it is to protect the revenue and punish the violator of its laws are stigmatised as myrmidons of oppression. The administrators of these laws are not however, prone to indulge in wanton prosecutions. No better evidence can be afforded of the moderation which guides the executive, and of the justice of its proceedings, than their actual results. It may be stated as a fact indicative of the caution with which the criminal clauses of the Customs' code are resorted to, that between two and three thousand persons are annually convicted of the offence of smuggling, whilst not one in a hundred is acquitted, either on the merits of the case or even on technical grounds. But, whilst the notorious smuggler has been thus efficiently prosecuted, the official returns for the last seven years show fewer suits against members of the mercantile body, than any corresponding antecedent period of the last half century, such suits being instituted only in accordance with the imperative requirements of the law, under pressure of absolute necessity, and in any case of special importance, by the advice of the Law Officers of the Crown.

(1) Not many people are scrupulous about smuggling, when, without perjury, they can find any safe and easy opportunity of doing so. To pretend to have any scruple about buying smuggled goods, though a manifest encouragement to a violation of the revenue laws and to the perjury, which almost always attends it, would, in most countries, be regarded as one of those pedantic pieces of hypocrisy which, instead of gaining credit with any body, serves only to expose the person who affects to practise it to the suspicion of being a greater knave than most of his neighbours. By this indulgence of the public the smuggler is often encouraged to continue a trade which he is thus induced to consider as in some measure innocent.—Smith's Wealth of Nations.

The ninth classification comprehends the law of procedure generally, commencing by laying down the new rule as to costs between the Crown and the subject, in pursuance of which the former, in future Customs' cases, is placed on the same footing as an ordinary litigant. The clauses which specially apply to summary procedure before justices come next in order, and following upon them, are the provisions, which take away the jurisdiction of the superior courts in cases between the Crown and the subject, where the amount claimed by the former for duties and penalties does not exceed a certain sum. Here, also, are embodied the recommendations of the Treasury Minute, in accordance with which the courts of inferior jurisdiction throughout the kingdom are thrown open for the trial of cases of limited amount and minor interest between the Crown and the subject ; and, giving the most liberal interpretation to that Minute, an important change is effected as to jurisdiction with respect to actions against Customs' officers, it being now open to parties feeling themselves aggrieved to seek reparation for any official wrong in the County Courts in England, the Assistant Barristers' Courts in Ireland, and the Sheriff's Court in Scotland.

The tenth head embraces the law of reciprocity, which adopting the expansive policy of recent times, authorises the Crown, without the necessity of an antecedent convention, to make commercial concessions to foreign states, when the liberality of their conduct towards us entitles them to such consideration, and also to requite the harsh or illiberal measures of foreign powers by a retaliation habitually excused by the reciprocal claims of commerce.

The land clauses form the eleventh division. These are considerably abridged from their former bulk. The trouble imposed by them adds not a little to the burden of Customs' administration. The Custom-houses of the various ports in the United Kingdom, the coast-guard stations and watch-houses are subject to frequent alteration. Changes in the ports arising from railway communication, the fluctuations of business, the shifting of markets for foreign produce, and other causes, give rise to frequent transfers, surrenders—under-lettings and new purchases—which occasion a considerable weight of correspondence, not to speak of the number of conveyances, leases and assignments, prepared in the solicitor's department under the directions of the Board.

Lastly, the pre-existing law relating to the Isle of Man, heretofore the subject of distinct enactment, is adapted to and engrafted on the Consolidation Act. That island is now, for Customs' purposes, declared to be a part of the United Kingdom, and is subject therefore to the same general laws, though possessing a separate Tariff and some privileges, peculiar to the ancient Isle of Mona, which have been respected in this incorporation for revenue purposes.

Having thus glanced at the leading provisions of the Customs' Consolidation Act, the less technical portion of the subject remains to be considered, viz., the provisions of the coteremporaneous statute for regulating the existing Customs' duties. In referring to this important enactment, it appears difficult to appreciate the boon, which it confers upon national commerce, without tracing its affinity to those bold and beneficial amendments, which were effected in the Tariff in the years 1842 and 1846. If it be not the completion of the reforms, which the master mind of Sir Robert Peel then accomplished and of the further reforms, which he foreshadowed to succeeding statesmen, it proceeds upon the enlightened fiscal policy of that minister, and leaves comparatively little to be effected by his successors.

Before the passing of the Act, the 5 & 6 Vic. c. 47, the list of articles subject to Customs' duties amounted to not less than twelve hundred. By that Act the duties on seven hundred and fifty of those articles were considerably reduced, and, whilst the reduction caused an increased consumption, it imparted, as was sagaciously foreseen at the time, a countervailing force and elasticity to the public revenue. The general principles upon which the Tariff of 1842 proceeded, are recorded in the Parliamentary documents, by which Sir Robert Peel illustrated his propositions.

They were, "1st. the removal of prohibitions and relaxation of prohibitory duties; 2nd. reduction of duties upon raw materials for manufacture to very low duties, in some cases nominal; in none, exceeding 5 per cent. 3rd. the reduction of duties upon articles partially manufactured to a point not exceeding 12 per cent. 4th. reduction of duties upon manufactured articles to a point not exceeding 20 per cent., and 5th. the reduction of duties upon colonial produce." The act, in accordance with these principles, reduced the duties on the number of articles mentioned, to a nominal amount, but the time had not yet arrived for propounding the policy of absolute repeal. It was not, however, distant. The successes of the first experiment produced their anticipated fruits. Prejudice yielded to the conviction wrought in the public mind by facts; and the hand, that in 1842, gave the first blow to restriction, repeated the assault with re-assured vigour in 1846. The act of 1842 contained the germ of abolition to which that of 1845⁽¹⁾ gave effect and maturity. By this the duties were repealed on no less than four hundred and fifty different articles, as to some, immediately on the passing of the statute; as to others, at more deferred periods; and as to another class, new, and in most cases, more moderate duties, were substituted for the former ones. The stride of free-trade legislation in the ensuing year, was in the same direction, and, under the auspicious guidance of the statesman by whom its earliest movements had been directed. The duties on the importation of foreign corn were reduced to a nominal figure by the Act of 1846,⁽¹⁾ a measure which more than any other, decided, for the future, the policy of the national commerce. But there were other signalizing measures of the legislature to make the year 1846 memorable. By the Tariff Act of that year,⁽²⁾ the duties on no fewer than forty-six articles including oxen, horses, sheep, &c., were repealed, and those on silks, butter, cheese and nearly one hundred other commodities subjected to considerable reductions. In the same year also the principle of free trade was recognized by another statute⁽³⁾ which abolished the distinction between free and slave grown sugar and provided for the progressive equalization of the duties on British and foreign sugars, to take effect on the 5th July, 1851. To Lord John Russell's government is due the credit of this further step in the progress of free trade. By another Act of 1848,⁽⁴⁾ the period for assimilation was extended to 1854, the duties, however, being further reduced.

The value of these concessions cannot be too highly estimated; but they did not exhaust all that was susceptible of amendment in the Tariff. There was one article in particular, charged with a duty, wholly disproportioned to its wholesale price, the article tea, which from its universal consumption, has long since ceased to be a luxury, and has become one of the indispensable necessities of life. The case as against the continuance of an impost, which fell oppressively upon the poorer classes of society, was earnestly stated in a memorial from the East India Association of Glasgow to Sir Robert Peel. "The duty," said those gentlemen, "charged by our Tariff on tea is equal to £200 per cent. on the shipping cost, viz., 2s. 1d. per lb. on an article which on an average costs on board about 1s. and while a Tariff is negotiating in China for the admission of our productions, it is but reasonable to expect that the Chinese will keep in view the monstrous, duty charged in England on their staple. This charge falls chiefly on the poor, who are the largest consumers, and it falls the more heavily because they use the low priced teas." In a further memorial to the Right Honourable Henry Goulburn, the association pointed to what they considered a satisfactory arrangement. They stated it, as their opinion, that "if the duty were reduced to one shilling per lb. it would materially increase the consumption and thereby help to redeem the proportion of revenue given up, which effect would be further aided by the increased consumption of sugar; inasmuch as four or five pounds of that article are used with every pound of tea." The opinions here conveyed forced their way into minds the most fastidiously conservative of this prolific source of revenue.

In other respects, the Tariff, as it stood last year, demanded revision. Its defects, in respect to the duties chargeable on various necessities of life, will be best explained by an extract from the financial statement of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, on the 14th of April 1853; a statement not more distinguished for the soundness and depth of its financial expositions, than for its truth and fidelity to the principles of the school inaugurated by Sir Robert Peel. "In proceeding," said the Right Honourable gentleman, "to consider more generally the state of our tariff, we have been desirous to carry into effect something like a new revision of taxes, and to apply to it, wherever our means would permit, the following general rules; first, to abolish altogether the duties which are unproductive, except in cases, where there may be some special reason to retain them on account of their relation to other articles; and in the next place to abolish, as far as considerations of revenue will permit, duties on articles of manufacture, except such as are in the last stage, as finished articles, and are commonly connected with hand labour; in regard to which cases, we have thought it more prudent and proper to proceed in the mode not of abolition, but reduction; in these cases we have endeavoured to fix the duties in such a way, that as a general rule, they should not stand, as to any class of goods, higher than 10 per cent. on their value. * * * We desire further, whenever it can be done, to take the mode of substituting rated duties for duties ad valorem, and where there are at present differential duties in favour of British possessions, to merge those differential duties altogether, by lowering the foreign article to the level of the colonial, we have not thought it would be advisable, in any case, to raise the duty on the colonial article. Lastly, we have been desirous to lower the duties that press on foreign articles of food which enter largely, if not into the necessities of life, at any rate, into what may be called the luxuries and comforts of the mass of the people.”⁽¹⁾

The provisions for reducing the duties on tea constitute the most distinguishing feature of the new Tariff. In regard to these, the existing government and that which preceded it entertained concurrent opinions, both adopting the conclusion, that it would be inexpedient to reduce the duty, per saltum, to one shilling, and that a reduction at progressive intervals would be preferable. As to the other articles referred to by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Tariff Act will be found to carry out, to their fullest extent, his beneficial and enlightened propositions—the number of articles dutiable and free enumerated in it, being 474, those subject to duty being reduced to the small number of 147. The substitution of rated for ad valorem duties is an amendment more grateful, if possible, to the Customs Department, than to the most strenuous advocates of the change throughout the commercial world. It removes a fruitful cause of controversy between the merchant and the officer.

From the foregoing review of the provisions of the new statute, and of the extensive changes recently effected in the Tariff, it will be seen, that they exclusively apply to the revenue business of the Customs, and that the introduction of any matter distinct from revenue has been avoided. It may not, however, be uninteresting to pause over a few of the more important of the duties, which they have imposed upon the Commissioners of Customs. Among others they are charged, not only (as their paramount function) with the collection of a branch of the Revenue averaging more than twenty-two millions per annum, accruing upon a great variety of foreign produce and manufacture, and chargeable with various rates of duty, ascertainable by different standards, such as weight, measure, number, and value; but also with properly securing the duties on the goods deposited in the bonded warehouses without payment thereof, which are ultimately exported, and which average about one-fifth of the whole imports. The Board are also entrusted with the entire management of the export and coasting trade of the country. To execute these trusts with the efficiency and vigilance demanded by their importance, a vast local, as well as central machinery, is indispensable. Hence, the supervision and active interference of the Board extend not only over the great port of the Metropolis, but every port of the United Kingdom, of which there are no less than one hundred and twenty-two. At each, there exists a branch of the parent establishment, commensurate with the commercial exigencies of the locality, but necessarily subject, with reference to the general working of the system, to the control of the Board, without which that uniformity of practice, which is essential to the proper conduct of the department, could not be secured. The number of Customs' officers serving in the United Kingdom alone approaches six thousand, exclusive of the Coast Guard force, engaged in the protection of the Revenue. The latter force amounts to about the same number, distributed, in detachments afloat and on shore, around the coasts of the country. To the responsibility of upholding the order and efficiency of this service may be added that of maintaining and provisioning fifty-one cruisers and other vessels. A further illustration of the onerous duties thrown upon the department is supplied by the fact, that the average number of ships, which discharge their cargoes inwards in the course of a single year, amounts to about thirty-five thousand, whilst the number of duty paid entries passed at the Custom House in London alone, averages about half-a-million per annum. The daily aggregate amounts, accruing from hour to hour from the duties paid in small sums, involve about one hundred thousand collective payments yearly into the Bank of England, and very extensive operations on the monies so deposited. These are conducted on such a system that few mercantile firms can show a clearer balance sheet, at any moment, than the Receiver General of Customs.

These facts, however, but very faintly indicate the vast magnitude of the mercantile operations involved in the duties above adverted to; nor is it possible to exhibit the relative quantities of the merchandize brought under the surveillance of the officers of Customs to be dealt with for revenue, statistical, or other purposes, and, at the same time, the expansiveness of the commerce of these islands, without resorting to the mode of illustration, which has now been usually adopted for more than a century and a half. It may not be generally known, that so far back as the year 1696 a particular rate was attached to each article of merchandise, by which it should thereafter be valued on importation or exportation. These rates have been continued to the present day, in order that a test of the relative quantities of such goods might be applied at any time and for any period. They are known by the denomination "Official Values." They were doubtless as nearly accurate as possible at the time they were established, but, from the great reduction in the value of all kinds of produce and manufacture, they now form no criterion of the real value of the imports or exports of foreign or colonial merchandise. Nor does any such actual criterion exist, although fortunately with respect to British produce and manufactures, records have been kept of the real as well as the official value. From these, it appears that in the year 1841,⁽¹⁾ the official value of foreign goods imported was £64,444,268; this amount has, however, increased, according to the returns of 1853, to £123,136,135, or nearly double that of 1841; and, taking the same dates of comparison, the exports of foreign and colonial produce have increased in about the same proportion, viz., from £14,723,373 to £27,767,733, while those of British manufactures have risen from £102,179,514 to the enormous sum of £214,360,489.⁽¹⁾

The returns of shipping exhibit an equally significant result as to that interest. The year 1853 shows an increase over 1841 of no less than 4,290,730 tons in foreign going vessels entering inwards, their total tonnage having been 4,652,376 tons in 1841 against 8,943,106 tons in 1853; and of 4,680,933 tons in such vessels clearing outwards, their total tonnage having been 4,766,171 tons in 1841, and 9,447,104 tons in 1853. The coasting trade also has shared in the general increase notwithstanding the powerful and growing competition of railroads. The tonnage of vessels so employed inwards has risen from 10,869,071 tons in 1841 to 12,820,745 tons in 1853; and outwards from 11,650,252 tons in 1841 to 13,493,804 tons in 1853; the increase being 1,950,674 tons, and 1,843,552 tons respectively.

The labour imposed on the department of Customs, as connected with the subject of commerce and shipping is not only immense, but continually increasing. A wide range of additional duty is delegated to the Customs, essentially distinct from the collection and securing of the revenue, and other matters to which allusion has been made. Statesmen and legislators have from time to time been penetrating enough to discover and prompt enough to determine, that the Customs' service was best adapted to perform a multiplicity of administrative duties, some kindred to the obligations, which officially attach to it, others, bearing a less immediate relation and many altogether different. Hence, and especially in the maritime parts of the United Kingdom, the Customs' officers have been required, sometimes to co-operate in the administration, and at others, to be the exclusive administrators, of laws, which could not have been carried into effect by a distinct government agency without great expense.⁽¹⁾ The Ship Registry Act may be cited in illustration of the disposition of the state to make every possible use of the officers of Customs. Nor can the policy of its preference of those officers, as the most competent to superintend the working of the numerous and complicated provisions of that Act, be called into question. The Custom-house supplies a convenient staff of officers for the registry of ships and the entry of the bills of sale, transfers, mortgages, assignments and other instruments, affecting the property in British vessels, and a safe and commodious depository for the preservation of the records, which form so important an element in the title to shipping. The Collectors, at the various ports, are considered, from local circumstances the best fitted for the duties of registration, in the absence of specially appointed registrars. Not only policy, therefore, but economy, has dictated the propriety of charging this duty upon the Customs. These officers, already stationed at the various ports, can undertake their share in its performance at comparatively little additional expense, and thus save the necessity of a separate establishment. Nor is this addition of duty as simple as may be generally imagined. The provisions of the Registry Act give rise to a multiplicity of intricate questions, involving the title to ships, the derivative interests of owners, whether accruing by bill of sale, bequest or succession, controversies as to priority of incumbrance, mortgages, rights of infants and married women, and a multitude of other analogous matters of a legal character, arising daily at the several ports, and forwarded by the local officers to the central Board for consideration and decision. With respect to the title of shipping viewed in relation to its dependence upon this branch of Customs' duty, a remarkable fact remains to be noticed. Whatever may be the opinion of conveyancers as to the perplexity attendant on the deduction of title to real estate in this part of the kingdom, it may be fearlessly averred, that the origin and history of every British registered vessel in existence can, by the machinery of the Customs, be traced through every stage of ownership, no matter how numerous the shares in her property, or how frequently the subject of transfer, from the first moment that she rode on the bosom of her native element to that which saw her a disjointed wreck.

In further illustration of the readiness of the Legislature to devolve on the Customs the execution of duties which bear no affinity to the subject of revenue, "The Mercantile Marine Act, 1850," "The Passengers' Act," 15 & 16 Vic. cap. 44, and the "Steam Navigation Act," 14 & 15 Vic. cap. 79, may be mentioned. By these the task of examining into the seaworthiness of ships, and the comfort of passengers, has been assigned to the Customs. The policy of such assignment may be vindicated by the same arguments, on the same grounds of convenience and the same regard to economy, which have turned the Commissioners and Collectors of Customs into guardians and registrars of title to shipping. In many ports the business of emigration, even in the present flow of the human tide to distant lands, would not bear the expense of a special Emigration Officer's salary; and, though a plea might be advanced against the policy of distracting the mind of the officer of Customs from his ordinary avocations, it must be confessed, that, where no other superintendent can be procured, without considerable cost, to carry into effect the important objects referred to, the officer of Customs may be reasonably required to afford his best services. In discharging this duty he not only satisfies the requisition of the State, but responds to the most benevolent dictates of humanity.

Again, the republic of letters beholds in the officer of Customs an ever-vigilant sentinel to guard for authors the varied treasures of genius. But for him, of what avail would be the most stringent enactments for the protection of copyright? With what facility and impunity might not the foreign pirate import the plunder of mind, if the code of enactments from the 5th and 6th, down to the 15th & 16th Vic. did not secure to literature the protective services of the officer of Customs! Yet this grateful aid to the rights of British authorship has no sympathy or connection with the collection of the income of the Crown.

Let it suffice to allude briefly to some other enactments, which impose onerous duties on the department. Upon the officers of Customs devolves the charge of carrying out the provisions of the acts which regulate the admission of aliens into the United Kingdom, and their departure from our shores;—the enforcement of the laws and regulations relating to quarantine;—those which impose restraints on the equipment of vessels, or the enlistment of recruits, in this country, under hostile intentions towards foreign states in amity with our own;—the terms and conditions of international conventions, by which the rights of fishery, on the coast of England and France, are adjusted;—the requisitions of the various acts, which relate to the pilotage of ships to and from our ports, as well as those, which, in case of peril or distress, demand the active co-operation of the officers of Customs;—the statutes and orders, which provide for the supply of statistical information, as to our imports and exports, and which are transmitted periodically to the Board of Trade for publication;—and lastly, the various legal provisions, which require the co-operation of the Customs in the prevention of frauds upon the Inland Revenue. Taking into consideration the extent and variety of duties thus imposed on the Customs' department, superadded to the multifarious business, which legitimately falls within its province, and which of late years has so wonderfully increased, the author may, it is hoped, be excused for adverting to the fact, that the cost of the service, instead of being proportionately augmented, remains nearly the same, and, making a legitimate abatement for the expences attendant on the performance of extraneous functions, it may be stated that the Customs' revenue, per se, is now collected at an average cost of about 8 per cent.

Having thus reviewed the rise and progress of Customs' legislation, and endeavoured to convey a general impression of the existing law, and of the duties, imposed on the Customs' department, not only by that law, as a distinct revenue code, but by a variety of other different enactments, it can scarcely be deemed irrelevant, especially as a part of these introductory remarks, to take a retrospect of the infancy and growth of the fiscal branch of the subject. Down to a very recent period, however, the statute-book, though complicated and ponderous in matters relating to the duties themselves, leaves us in comparative ignorance of the mode and instruments of collection. The practice of farming the Customs appears to have prevailed so early as the year 1282.⁽¹⁾ Their collection was frequently entrusted to foreign merchants, either as an accountable trust or for a stipulated rent. Boricini, Guidicon and Company, of Lucca, accounted to the Exchequer for the proceeds of the new Customs on wool, wool-fels, and hides from Easter, 1281, to Easter, 1282. Many other instances might be adduced to show the frequency with which the collection was entrusted to the stewardship of foreigners. They were successively farmed by the Remberlini, the Bardi, and the Spini of Florence.⁽¹⁾

The rents, of course, varied according to the prosperity or decline of the commerce of the country. In 1329 the whole of the old and new Customs of all England were farmed to the great Florentine firm of the Bardi for a rent of £20 per day, which (not including Sundays) amounted to the inconsiderable sum of £6,260 a year. The following year the rent was raised to 1,000 marks each month, or £8,000 a year. There was another mode, not unfrequently adopted, of obtaining advances of money on the security of the Customs' duties. Foreign merchants were allowed, as a stipulated method of receiving instalments on the sums, which they lent to the sovereign, to deduct the duties chargeable on their imported merchandize, the Italians being the accommodating parties in most of these undignified transactions. Thus, in 1403, King Henry borrowed 1,000 marks from ten merchants of Genoa, and, for payment, he permitted them to retain the duties on goods to be imported, &c. Five merchants of Florence lent him money on the same conditions⁽²⁾. The reign of Elizabeth herself did not

(2) Rot. pat. sec. 4 Edw. 3 m. 7; tertia 5 Edw. 3 m. 4 Fœd. V. 8, p. 358, 359, 383. In 1421 the aggregate salaries of the officers of Customs at escape the imputation of continuing a practice, which compromised the dignity and emoluments of the British Crown and perilled the best interests of commerce. It appears that Sir Thomas Smith rented the Customs for some years at an annual sum of £14,000, ⁽¹⁾ but afterwards farmed them at the yearly sum of £42,000, and shortly afterwards at £50,000, an advance which the commercial historian shrewdly mentions, as indicating one of the prominent improvements of that reign. In 1613 the produce of the Customs reached the respectable sum of £109,572 18s. 4d., and in 1641 they were estimated at £500,000.

During the forty subsequent years the average increase, according to D'Avenant, who was Inspector-General of Customs, and consequently a good authority, was £500,000. But, an important reform was introduced within this interval. When the interests of commerce and revenue came to be more clearly understood, the mischiefs of farming out the Customs could not fail to be detected. Accordingly, in 1671, the management was transferred from the "farmers" to a Board of Commissioners. The policy of this change became soon apparent. During the reign of William the Third and Anne the Customs revenue rose so considerably, that the nett payments into the Exchequer in 1709 amounted to £1,353,483, the port of London amounted to the small sum of £547, and of those at the outports to but £247 8s. 4d.

in 1726 to £1,600,000, and in 1760 to £1,969,933 17s. 9d. In 1763 to nearly £2,000,000; in 1792 to £4,407,000; in 1815 to £11,360,000; and in 1853 to above TWENTY-TWO MILLIONS AND A HALF STERLING.

It would ill accord with the design of these introductory remarks to dilate upon the policy of the change, which substituted a Board of Commissioners instead of the old management by farmers. The interest of the farmer was essentially transient and personal. What concern could he have for the triumphs of commerce, as constituting the main foundation of the country's wealth and influence? He paid or incurred the liability to pay, a stipulated rent; and the privilege, which he gained by his leaseholdship, opened to his avarice a boundless opportunity of rapine. Commerce faltered and groaned beneath the oppressiveness of his exactions; and the more ephemeral his tenure of the spoil, the more greedy was the appetite with which he devoured it. It will be found by those who investigate the history of Customs' farming, that this is a faint and unexaggerated picture of its evils. The trade of the country had to struggle against them for a period of three centuries, and, but for the removal of them, it may be confidently asserted, that the kingdom would never have attained its present commercial supremacy. But, though the axe was wisely laid to the obdurate root of so mischievous a system, and the Crown commendably availed itself of a stewardship by Commission, the substituted machinery was at the onset far from perfect. In principle alone it was not defective. In application and practical working it was largely imbued with the abuses, which then beset most of our public departments. If the ancient farmers were unprincipled exactors, the stewards who succeeded them (and this observation applies to a period so recent as 1792,) were "indolent" sinecurists, and bore no resemblance to the laborious Commissioner of the present times.⁽¹⁾

(1) The Commissioners of 1792 are thus described by a late Chairman of the Board, in a letter addressed by that gentleman to the Right Hon. H. Goulbourn :—

"As regards the Department of Customs in 1792, the principal officers engaged in the receipt of the duties in the port of London were patent officers.

"The first Earl of Liverpool was Collector Inwards.

"The late Duke of Manchester Collector Outwards.

"The Duke of Newcastle, and afterwards the Earl of Guildford, Comptroller Inwards and Outwards.

"Lord Stowell Surveyor of Subsidies and Petty Customs.

"These noblemen took no part in the official duties, but merely exercised the right of appointing deputies and clerks.

"Both principals and deputies were remunerated by fees. The patentees received the fees denominated patent, and the deputies retained the fees called the fees of usage for their own use. In addition to these fees both deputies and clerks received fees for dispatch.

"The same system prevailed throughout the whole department. The salaries of the officers were nominal, and the principal proportion of all official income was derived from fees. These fees were constantly varying both in rate and amount, and formed a continual source of dispute and complaint between the merchant and the officer.

"This system (after having been repeatedly objected to by various Commissions of Enquiry, and finally by the Committee of Finance, in 1797) was put an end to in the year 1812 by the Act 51 Geo. III., cap. 71, by which all patent offices and fees were abolished, and compensation allowances granted to the patent officers, and fixed salaries established.

"The additional salaries granted under this arrangement amounted to about £200,000, and the temporary compensation allowances to about £40,000 per annum.

"The fees abolished, and from which the public were relieved, amounted to about £160,000 per annum.

"In addition to the amount of fees from which the public were relieved,

It may not become a person in the author's position to institute comparisons between the present and the former administrators of the Customs, nor to speculate on the constitution of the Board itself, inasmuch as these are matters rather of policy than of law. Still less may it become the Solicitor of the Board to offer any opinion in their favour as an executive body, however strongly he may be impressed with the integrity of their conduct and the efficiency of their services. But to suppress the meed of approbation, which the Government recently pronounced on the department, would be, to say the least, a mistaken, if not a reprehensible, delicacy.

“There has been an extraordinary pressure of business during the past year, the ships entering the port (of London) having increased to 11,807 from 9,964 in 1852, and the arrivals in December having been nearly fifty per cent. greater than in the same month of the preceding year. Yet, notwithstanding this sudden increase, my Lords are satisfied from the careful inquiry they have instituted, that by the vigilance and energy of the whole establishment of various allowances made by the Crown to officers for the quarantine, coal, poundage, poundage on seizures, and many other incidental allowances which did not appear on the establishment were also abolished, and the salaries of every officer placed at one view upon the establishment.

The effect of these salutary measures has been to give a great apparent increase to officers' salaries since 1791; and, upon a mere comparison of the establishment of 1792 with 1830, without the above explanation, it would appear that the pay of the officers had been most materially augmented, whereas, in point of fact, the difference is in the mode of payment; and the incomes of the officers at the present period (as compared with 1792) are in general less; and, consequently, the public are less taxed for the performance of the same duty now than in 1792.

the Customs the business of the port has never been more perfectly done. And, while my Lords will always consider it as one of their highest duties carefully to sift every complaint or charge, coming from whatever quarter it may, against the administration of any department under their control, yet, they will also feel it to be no less their duty to support with their whole weight and influence, a body of deserving public officers, who may become, from any cause whatever, the object of unfounded complaints.”⁽¹⁾

The contrast, which this testimonial affords to the Treasury reproof of 1814, recently resuscitated for purposes scarcely worth adverting to, cannot fail to be gratifying to every ingenuous mind, and particularly to the great commercial portion of the public, “Nihil me clamor iste commovet, sed consolatur, cum indicat esse quosdam cives imperitos, sed non multos.”⁽²⁾ But, to revert to the immediate subject of these pages, when the author finds, that an honest endeavour to consolidate and simplify the Customs’ Laws, has not only been recognised with favour, but with no small share of praise; when a unanimous legislature and an applauding general opinion have honoured the work with approval, he would be arrogating to himself more than his labours or his intentions warrant, if he omitted humbly to bear testimony to the fact, that, if there be merit in the new Act, and, in comparison with the former state of the law, it be found a substantive and satisfactory amendment, the Commissioners of Customs deserve a large proportion of the credit, as they have suggested most of the material reforms, that have been effected, and favoured with the heartiest approbation every proposition submitted to them in the nature of amendment. The Commissioners had, long before the passing of the Act, anticipated by their Rules and Orders very many of the ameliorations, which have now received the more significant stamp of Parliamentary sanction. The practice at the Customs had in numerous instances anticipated the formal provisions of the Law. With respect to the Act itself, one merit may, it is hoped, be claimed for it. It is succinct and intelligible. If there be defects (and the author does not presume to suppose, that there are not) they can now, at least, be easily detected; and the patency of the blemish will facilitate correction. Far be it from him to flatter himself with the idea, that the task of legislation should end with what has been already done; though he would respectfully deprecate premature interference with the law, as now consolidated, until it shall have undergone the test of practical experience. "It is most certain," says Lord Chief Justice Hale, "that when all the wisdom, and prudence, and forecast in the world is used, all human things will still be imperfect. There is no wisdom or counsel perfect, but the wisdom and counsel of God, who hath infinite knowledge to foresee all possible emergencies."⁽¹⁾ There can be no complete nor final legislation for human concerns of any kind. The condition of society is one of interminable variation; and laws must grow with, and be adapted to, its progressive expansion and change. The present commercial greatness of the British Empire would seem to him who first "paid toll at Billingsgate" a stupendous creation of fancy; and the history of the past has been read with no profit, and the mutual relations of cause and effect weighed with little foresight, if they do not justify the anticipation, that the future has in store for these favoured islands the realization of a still more gorgeous dream. Whatever in theory may have been the virtue of the economical principles of whose development those successes are the consequence, their practical triumph is attested by every day's additional experience; and however strong the faith of the most powerful and enlightened states of Europe has been in principles of a contrary tendency, it has been compelled to waver in the face of our scarcely appreciable prosperity. Belgium has caught the inspiration, which may reanimate the fortunes of her ancient seats of commerce. France has begun to distrust her long cherished creed of protection, and England will have placed the Sovereign of that illustrious land under a deep obligation, indeed, if while sojourning upon our free soil, and studying with the eye of a statesman and philosopher, the genius of our institutions, his mind received impressions in favour of unfettered trade, which may now redound to an Empire's greatness; whilst an identity of commercial action cannot fail to bind more closely two countries, between which there already auspiciously exist so many motives to union. Peace has been announced as the guiding principle of his sovereignty, but peace, internal or external, is after all, but a conditional blessing. If the arts of peace be not cultivated, if opportunities of diffusing education, improving morals, amending law, purifying justice, exalting religion, and disenthraling commerce, be disregarded, it is not that repose which teems with benedictions to mankind, but, a lethargy, scarcely less noxious, than the calamity of war.⁽¹⁾ The peace of this country has been turned into a mighty engine of national aggrandizement. It is valued not more, because it has increased our commerce and multiplied our sources of enjoyment, than, because it has incorporated us more closely with the rest of the human family. This condition of existence may be interrupted, and our trade may possibly receive some rude shocks in the conflict, whose portentous clouds already overcast the horizon, and menace the composure, of Europe; but, whatever vicissitudes may occur in the impending struggle, there is every ground for the assurance, that the commerce of the British Empire will continue to be governed by those enlightened principles, to which it is indebted for its present ascendancy;—and that it will, as it has ever done, constitute a main source of supply to the Sovereign, of that revenue by which the blessings of peace may be enhanced, or the burdens of war sustained and alleviated, “census regius, anima reipublicæ firmamentum belli et ornamentum pacis.”⁽²⁾

COMMENTARY

THE "CUSTOMS CONSOLIDATION ACT, 1853."

OBJECT OF THE ACT.

The scope and design of the Act are declared in the preamble, which recites the expediency of consolidating into one Act the several statutes, then in force, for the management and regulation of Customs, the prevention of smuggling, the encouragement of British shipping and navigation, the warehousing of goods, the granting of drawbacks and allowances of Customs, and the regulation of the trade of the British Possessions abroad and of the Isle of Man.

OFFICIAL MACHINERY.

The operative part of the Act commences by providing for the constitution of the official machinery of the Customs, enacting, that all appointments of officers shall be made by the Commissioners of the Treasury, or, under their authority, by the Commissioners of Customs; and the duties incident to every such appointment are to be performed under the control and direction of the latter. Sec. 1.

SALARIES AND SECURITIES OF OFFICERS.

The Commissioners of the Treasury, or, under their direction, of Customs, are to prescribe the remuneration to be paid to the officers, whether as periodical salaries or as pecuniary allowances, and may require each officer to give such security for his good conduct, as they may consider necessary. Ib.

TENURE OF OFFICE.

The term, for which every office shall be held, is made dependant upon the pleasure of the Commissioners of the Treasury or of Customs. Ib.

SALARIES PAYABLE FREE FROM PARLIAMENTARY DUTY; AND SUPERANNUATIONS UNASSIGNABLE.

Salaries are to be paid clear of any duty imposed by Act of Parliament, unless expressly charged thereon, and no superannuation allowance is to be assigned or disposed of by the grantee thereof, such assignment being declared void and incapable of enforcement at law or in equity.⁽¹⁾ Ib.

OCCASIONAL OFFICERS.

From the peculiar nature of the Customs service, the aid and co-operation of other persons, than the regularly appointed officers may not infrequently be required. To meet this exigency, it is provided, that every person employed on any such service (whether in pursuance of a previous order of the Commissioners of Customs, or sanctioned by the expression of their subsequent concurrence), shall be deemed the officer for such service; and the more thoroughly to identify the occasional officer or substitute with the officer whom, for the time being, he may represent, the acts of the person, thus temporarily engaged and the conduct of others in relation to him, are to be deemed of the same legal effect as if done by or in relation to the officer represented; and every Act required by law to be done at any particular place within any port, if done at any place within such port appointed by the Commissioners of Customs for such purpose, shall be deemed to be done at the particular place so required by law. Sec. 2.

EXISTING COMMISSIONS AND SECURITY BONDS.

OFFICERS, &c., TAKING UNAUTHORISED REWARDS.

The taking by officers, clerks, or other persons employed in the Customs service, of any fees or perquisites, whether pecuniary or otherwise, and however trivial, for any act of commission, omission, or default, in relation to such employment, is punishable, on proof of the offence, by dismissal from office.⁽¹⁾ Sec. 3.

DECLARATION ON APPOINTMENT TO OFFICE.

A declaration is required to be made by every officer on his admission to office; the form of which is set out in the Act. Sec. 4.

HOURS OF OFFICIAL ATTENDANCE.

Provision being made for supplying the service with every description of necessary officer, the next subject in order is that which relates to the hours of official attendance, which, as under the former law, may be appointed by warrant of the Commissioners of the Treasury. ⁽¹⁾ Every officer of Customs, from the Chairman of the Board down to the humblest servant of the department, is bound to conform to the regulations of the Treasury, as to hours of attendance; the Commissioners of Customs, as a natural incident to management, having the power of appointing the times, during such hours, at which any particular parts of the duties of the officers may be performed. Sec. 5.

HOLIDAYS.

Christmas Day, Good Friday, and any day appointed to be kept as a holiday by royal proclamation, or, in Scotland by authority of the General Assembly, and any day appointed for the celebration of the nativity of the reigning Sovereign, are the only days of suspension from business, which, in this commercial country, it has been deemed expedient to concede to those engaged in the service of the Customs. Those days are required to be kept as public holidays, by the officers and servants of the dock companies throughout the United Kingdom. Sec. 6.

COMMISSIONERS, &c., NOT LIABLE TO SERVE IN PAROCHIAL OR OTHER PUBLIC OFFICES.

The liability of the Commissioners and other officers of Customs to service in the militia, on juries, or in any corporate, parochial, or other public office, being incompatible with the due performance of their proper duties, they are specially exempted from such respective services. Sec. 7.

(1) This provision has reference to the hours of general attendance; the Act, however, prescribes certain hours within which particular operations, involving of necessity the attendance of officers, may be performed; for instance, by Sec. 49, the hours prescribed for the unshipment of goods are from eight A.M. to four P.M., between the 1st of March and the 1st of November, and from nine A.M. to four P.M. between the 1st of November, and the 1st of March, Sundays and public holidays excepted: and it is competent to the Board of Customs to extend those hours where and when necessary:—a power which they have extensively exercised.

ORDERS OF COMMISSIONERS.

Orders or other writings, requiring the signature of the Commissioners of Customs, need not be signed by more than one of them, except where the law expressly requires more; and orders or writings, requiring the signatures or signatures and seals of the Commissioners, are deemed to be duly executed if attested by the hands or hands and seals of two or more of them. All orders and regulations made by the Commissioners under any of the statutes repealed by the present Act are confirmed until altered, rescinded, or replaced by others⁽¹⁾; and all acts done in pursuance of such orders are declared valid. Sec. 8.

APPOINTMENT OF PORTS, QUAYS, AND STATIONS.

The power to appoint ports, quays, landing and boarding stations is an essential incident to the collection of the Customs revenue.⁽²⁾ This power is, accordingly, conferred upon the Com-

(1) This confirmation of course extends only to such pre-existing orders as are not repugnant to the provisions of the present law, which, wherever it is at variance with the former law, and any orders or regulations made in pursuance thereof, is paramount, and the latter remark is equally applicable to orders of the Treasury.

(2) The appointment of ports, quays, &c., was formerly a rather formidable and somewhat expensive operation. No such appointment could be made except through the intervention of Her Majesty's Court of Exchequer to which it was necessary very frequently to have recourse. Whenever by the fluctuations of commerce a port, sub-port, or creek fell into disuse, and other localities were found more convenient for the interests of trade, or where some minor alteration even in an existing port or in the limits of a legal quay became necessary, the requisite change could not be effected, however desirable, without the interposition of the Court of Exchequer, from which, on formal application, a commission was issued appointing certain Commissioners to proceed to the locus in quo, and set out pro forma the limits of the port or quay, though of course already de facto decided upon from the ascertained necessities of the case giving rise to the application. The view and formal determination of the Commissioners having been completed, the metes and bounds were set forth in a certificate under their hands and annexed to the commission, which was returned to the Court, where both commission and certificate were duly enrolled; and thereupon the port, creek, or quay was thenceforth legally constituted. This antiquated practice continued in force until 1846, when missioners of the Treasury by warrant to appoint ports or sub-ports throughout the United Kingdom or the Channel Islands, to declare their limits, and to appoint proper places within those limits to be legal quays for the lading and unlading of goods, and to declare the bounds of such quays. As a necessary incident, to the right to appoint, power is also given as occasion may require, to annul or vary the limits of such ports, sub-ports, havens, creeks, or quays, all existing appointments, and such as may from time to time be made, being confirmed until annulled or altered under the authority of the Act. Sec. 9.

BOARDING AND LANDING STATIONS, AND SUFFERANCE WHARVES.

The Commissioners of Customs may by order appoint stations for ships arriving at, or departing from, any port, to "bring-to," for the purpose of taking on board or of landing the officers of Customs⁽¹⁾, may appoint sufferance wharves for the lading and unlading of goods under such restrictions as they may approve, may direct at what part of any harbour, dock, or quay in any port ships laden with tobacco or any particular cargo shall moor or discharge such cargo, and the Commissioners of Customs, or the collector and comptroller of any port, may station officers on board any ship within the limits of any port in the United Kingdom.⁽²⁾ Sec. 13.

to avoid the needless trouble, expense, and delay attendant on such a circuitous proceeding, the Author suggested to the Commissioners of Customs the more expeditious and economical mode now in use, and with their concurrence the necessary clauses, of which the present are almost a verbatim reprint, were introduced into the Act of 9 and 10 Vict. cap. 102, secs. 13 to 18. The pecuniary saving alone consequent on this change was no less than £500 in the first two years after its adoption.

(¹) Under section 47 the master of every ship is required to bring-to at the appointed stations on arrival, and to receive on board and provide proper accommodation for officers, and by section 148 the master of every ship on departure is also required to bring-to for the landing of officers under penalty for default in either case of £20.

(²) By sections 48 (inwards), 146 (outwards), 158 (coastwise), 181 (B. P. in America), and 229, officers may board ships; and by the last named section, applicable to the United Kingdom and the Channel Islands, a penalty of £100 is imposed on any person obstructing them in their duty.

APPOINTMENT OF WAREHOUSING PORTS AND WAREHOUSES.

Equally essential for the purposes of the Customs' service, and indeed for the conveniences of commerce, is the power to appoint ports, which shall have the privilege of warehousing. This power is conferred on the Commissioners of the Treasury, who may, by warrant, make such appointments. But the direct and exclusive intervention of the Treasury goes no further than the appointment of the warehousing ports. The warehouses themselves—the disposition of the goods deposited in them—the description of merchandize, which may and may only be warehoused without payment of duty upon the first entry thereof, or for exportation only, in cases where the same may be prohibited to be imported for home use, are matters of internal regulation and detail, the management of which is necessarily vested in the Commissioners of Customs, subject, however, as, in the general course of their administration, to the directions of the Treasury. The Commissioners of Customs may also, subject to the same directions, appoint premises, as bonded sugar-houses, for the refining of sugar for removal to the Isle of Man or for exportation.⁽¹⁾ Sec. 10.

TOBACCO WAREHOUSES.

The power to appoint warehouses for the warehousing of tobacco, which was compulsory under the old law, is now permissive only.⁽²⁾ These may be provided by the Commissioners of Customs at the ports within which that article may be legally imported, and the expenses of such warehouses are to be defrayed out of the Customs duties; but the Commissioners may charge, for every package of tobacco therein warehoused, such rent as they see fit, not exceeding the amount ⁽¹⁾ payable before the passing of the Act, such rent to go into the general fund of the Customs Revenue. Ib.

QUEEN'S WAREHOUSES.

The Commissioners of Customs may also fix the amount of rent payable in respect of goods deposited in any of the Queen's Warehouses; ⁽²⁾ the sums thereby realised being also appropriated as duties of Customs. Ib.

(1) The scale of rent payable on tobacco at the time of the passing of this Act and which is now constituted the maximum rule of charge is as follows:

(2) The Queen's Warehouse, as contradistinguished from private establishments, denominated bonded warehouses, approved for the deposit of goods, for security of duties deferred or for exportation, is for the reception of goods the property of the Crown by forfeiture or otherwise, or under seizure or detention generally, and is synonymous with the term "Customs warehouse" as used in Secs. 224 and 225. The following goods may also be taken to the Queen's warehouse, viz.:—By sec. 52, foreign goods on board commissioned ships; by sec. 54, packages reported "contents unknown;" by sec. 64, goods landed by bill of sight, unless the entry be perfected within a given time, and by secs. 74 and 75, goods not landed from the import ship within fourteen days after arrival, and small parcels landed before the expiration of that time to clear the vessel.

As to rent on goods deposited in Queen's Warehouse, vide note on section 74, p. 129.

SECURITY IN RESPECT TO WAREHOUSES AND BONDED SUGAR HOUSES.

Consequent upon this privilege of warehousing, certain terms and conditions are imposed upon the warehousekeeper. The Commissioners of Customs may accordingly direct in what cases, and with what sureties, and to what amount security by bond shall be required in respect of any goods deposited in them or for security of the duties due on such goods; and they may also direct the nature and amount of the security to be given in respect of any bonded sugar house so approved of, or in respect of any sugar removed to it, or the due refinement or return of such sugar to the warehouse, its removal to the Isle of Man, or its exportation within such period, as they shall direct, or for security of the duties due on such sugar. Ib.

WAREHOUSEKEEPERS' BONDS.

A very material change having been effected by the new Act in the warehousing system, a few explanatory remarks may not be inappropriate. The object of the change is twofold.—1st. Uniformity of system, and, 2nd. Simplification and the relief of importers from the trouble and inconvenience of entering into a separate bond on each deposit in the warehouse. This alteration was, on the recommendation of the Select Committee of the House of Commons, adopted by the Government for the reasons assigned in the Treasury Minute of 14th April 1853. The importer being liable to the duties immediately on importation, it necessarily followed, that, when relieved, for his own convenience, from immediate payment, he should be called upon to give security for the duties deferred. The choice of warehouse, amongst those approved, rested with himself, and his separate bond was the only available one, until the introduction of the practice, which has gradually been engrafted on the warehousing system, of taking general security from the warehousekeeper. The latter practice, being merely permissive and not universally resorted to, a mixed system prevailed until the present law came into operation. Although by various provisions of the pre-existing statutes, the warehousekeeper, as such, was to a certain extent responsible to the Crown with reference to the internal economy and management of his warehouse, that responsibility was of a general character, and it was held, that the original importer being primarily answerable for the duties on all goods warehoused by him, was the person properly liable to suit in the first instance, for any loss or deficiency therein, even when deposited in warehouses of general security. This liability continued, however long the goods might remain in bond, and however frequently they might have changed hands. Nor could an importer relieve himself from his own separate bond on transfer of the goods, unless the security of the purchaser, under a provision of the old law⁽¹⁾ was substituted in its stead.

That provision was seldom if ever resorted to ; nor is this extraordinary, when it is considered how frequent are the changes of property in bonded goods like other marketable commodities represented by paper, dock warrants, &c., transferable like scrip, and the subject of daily and hourly trading operations. To obviate these inconveniences, as far as practicable, it was suggested, that the importer should be relieved from giving bond, that the warehouse-keeper should give general security in respect of all goods deposited with him, and, in order to avoid long arrears, that all goods should be cleared, or rewarehoused and deficiencies accounted for, every five years, and also that the warehouse-keeper should be held directly responsible to the Crown for all deficiencies. This may, at first sight, savour of hardship on the warehouse-keeper but, in reality, it imposes on him no new obligation, so far as regards the safe custody of the goods and the consequences attendant on their loss, for although the Crown's claim for duties was primarily against the importer, the warehouse-keeper's liability to the latter was not cancelled. Therefore, by the present change in the law, without impairing the Crown's claim against the importer individually, in respect of any defalcation on his part, the warehouse-keeper merely becomes directly liable to the Crown for what, by a more circuitous course, he was formerly responsible through an intermediate party in the person of the importer or owner of the goods.

Another important object contemplated by this amendment was that of placing all warehouses, as far as practicable, on a footing of equality by the abolition of the distinction, which antecedently prevailed between warehouses generally, and those denominated warehouses of "special security." It is obvious, that, if a warehouse be not a safe depository for the security of goods and the duties due thereon, the privilege of warehousing ought not to be conceded to it; and, if secure, there can be no valid ground for the maintenance of arbitrary distinctions and exclusive privileges in favour of any particular class of warehouses, possessing no peculiar pretensions to security. The following sections have been introduced into the new Act to carry into effect these views.

GENERAL SECURITY.

The proprietor or occupier of every warehouse (excepting existing warehouses of special security, in respect of which security by bond has hitherto been dispensed with,) or some person on his behalf, is required to give security by bond with two sufficient sureties, or by two bonds, each with one sufficient surety, or such other security as the Commissioners of the Treasury or of Customs may approve, for the payment of the duties of importation on, or for the due exportation of, all such goods as shall at any time be warehoused therein; and no goods shall be warehoused in any such warehouse until such security shall have been given.⁽¹⁾ This permission to divide the responsibility of the security is entirely new, and has been adopted for the greater convenience of those parties, who may prefer giving two bonds in less amount each. Sec. 11.

EXISTING APPOINTMENTS OF WAREHOUSES AND BONDS TO CONTINUE IN FORCE.

All existing approvals of warehouses and of bonded sugar houses, in respect of which security has been given, are to continue in force until revoked; and to relieve importers from the necessity of entering into separate bonds on every importation and deposit of goods, no bond is, in future, to be required from the importer; ⁽¹⁾ but, all existing bonds in respect of goods warehoused or entered to be warehoused are to continue in force, until discharged by the due delivery of the goods. Sec. 12. ⁽²⁾

REVOKING OR ALTERING TREASURY OR CUSTOMS' ORDERS.

The Commissioners of the Treasury or of the Customs may, by warrant or order, revoke, vary, or add to, any former warrant or order made by them respectively. Sec. 14.

rewarehoused, within such five years, or such further period after the warehousing or rewarehousing thereof, as the Treasury shall direct. Sec. 104. Express provision, therefore, having been made in the condition of the pre-existing bonds, to meet any alteration of time allowed by the Treasury, there would be no necessity for their renewal on that ground, even if the Act did not provide, as it does, that, all bonds entered into for the performance of any condition, order, or matter relative to the Customs, shall be valid, and may be proceeded upon, as if expressly given under the provisions of any Act relating to the Customs. Sec. 195. Under these circumstances, although the Board could insist upon renewed security under this Act, they have not deemed it expedient to put the warehousekeeper to that inconvenience.

⁽²⁾ For section 12, vide p. 78; to which, from analogy of subject, it has been transferred.

AGENTS FOR THE ENTRY AND CLEARANCE OF SHIPS, GOODS AND BAGGAGE.

The provisions of the former Regulation Act (8 & 9 Vic. c. 86) with respect to agents and the ports at which they may be licensed for the entry and clearance of ships, goods and baggage have been re-enacted by the new statute with some slight modifications. The Commissioners of the Treasury are empowered by warrant to declare in what ports agents may be licensed for the transaction of the foregoing business, with power to withdraw from such ports the system of agency, if they should deem it expedient. In every case in which the introduction of the practice is sanctioned, notice is to be given in the London Gazette, if the port be in England; the Dublin Gazette, if in Ireland; and in both, if the warrant include places in Great Britain and Ireland. But nothing in the provisions of this section is to affect the existing appointments of agents in the ports of London, Dublin, Dover, Folkestone, Southampton, and Shoreham, so long as the same shall remain unrevoked. Sec. 15.

LICENSES OF AGENTS.

The Commissioners of Customs are authorised, as heretofore, to grant licenses to agents in the ports so appointed, in such form, as they may deem proper, and to revoke the same for fraud or misconduct. In the latter event, a copy of the order of dismissal, stating the grounds thereof, is to be served upon the party, who may, if he see fit, appeal to the Board, under the provisions of the 33rd and 34th sections of the Act. But, in case of non-appeal, within three days after service of the order of dismissal, the revocation will stand confirmed. Sec. 16.

BONDS TO BE GIVEN BY AGENTS.

Every person to whom such license shall be granted (not being one of the sworn brokers of the city of London, and acting as such agent in the port of London) is to give bond, with one sufficient surety, in the sum of £1000 for the faithful and incorrupt conduct of himself and any clerk acting for him, both as regards the Customs and his employers.⁽¹⁾ All existing licenses and bonds are to be in force until revoked. Ib.

AGENTS IN COPARTNERSHIP.

Any licensed agent, or agents, carrying on their business in copartnership may, with the approval of the Commissioners of Customs, appoint a clerk to transact business for him or them, the name, residence, and date of his appointment being, as a necessary condition to the validity of his appointment, endorsed on the license, and signed by him or them in the presence of the collector or comptroller of the port; all such appointments are to be recorded in a register to be kept at the Custom House: and clerks so appointed are not to act for any other than the person so appointing them. These latter appointments may be revoked by order of the Commissioners of Customs.⁽²⁾ Ib.

(1) To remove a somewhat prevalent, but erroneous, impression, it is proper to observe, that a Custom House agent is not an officer of Customs, and only acts for those, who, not having time or inclination to transact their own business with the Customs, prefer doing so through the instrumentality of another. In confirmation of this, may be cited the dictum of Lord Abinger in the case of the Attorney General v. Anted. "Licensed agents are not in any way authorised by the Customs to receive duties for them, nor are they, indeed, in any way servants of the Customs." 12 Mee. & W. p. 520. In favour of the system of licencing agents the chief arguments which suggest themselves are, 1st.—that they insure in cases, where the importer does not act in his own person, that he shall be represented by some known and accredited substitute, thus avoiding the inconvenience and danger to the Crown and the public, which might, in the packet ports, and in the metropolis accrue from permitting unknown and comparatively irresponsible persons to deal with the property of importers or consignees: And 2nd.—that it may serve to guard against fraud, or at all events, may secure the identity of the party, if fraud be committed. By the present law this provision is expressly extended to misconduct, or dishonesty, towards the employer, as well as the Crown, and, without reflecting in the slightest degree upon the many highly respectable persons, who act as agents, was suggested by the frequent occurrence of frauds, practised by less scrupulous individuals upon the merchants as well as the Crown, in some instances in direct violation of the instructions of the employer.

(2) By section 71, persons who are not licensed, and clerks not duly appointed, are interdicted from acting as agents in ports, where they are required to be licensed, nor are they allowed to act, whether licensed or not,

LIGHTERMEN'S LICENCES AND BONDS.

Upon a somewhat analogous principle the Commissioners of Customs are empowered to direct in what ports goods cleared for drawback or from the warehouse to be conveyed by water to be put on board any ship for exportation, or to be carried from any importing ship to be landed,⁽¹⁾ shall be so carried only by persons authorised for that purpose. As in the case of agents, persons so authorised must obtain a licence from the Commissioners of Customs, who are empowered to grant such licences, in such manner, and to such persons, as they may deem proper, and to revoke the same, when they shall see fit; as an indispensable condition, the persons, to whom such licences are granted, must give bond for faithful and incorrupt conduct. All licences subsisting at the commencement of the Act are placed upon the same footing, i.e. they are to continue in force "as if the same had been granted under the authority of this Act," and, as a necessary consequence, are revocable, in like manner. Sec. 17.

without the authority of the proprietor or consignee of the goods, under a penalty of £20, which for the same offence was under the repealed Act £100, and by sec. 72, the importer's authority may be demanded by the officers. But this does not extend to any merchant or importer, nor to any consignee of goods acting for himself, nor to any clerk or servant exclusively employed by any mercantile house.

(1) As officers are stationed on board ships on their arrival within the limits of a port, and goods are not landed without the Customs' authority and in presence of the officers, it has not been deemed necessary to superadd any statutory penalty on the carriage of goods by unlicensed lightermen from the importing ship to the place of landing, the effect of which would be to establish a species of monopoly without any attendant advantage. Any person may, therefore, be employed in the lightering of goods from the import ship to the shore. As analogous to this, see also note on land carriage p. 166. But, with reference to drawback and bonded goods for exportation, it is obvious, that, considerable danger must accrue from high duty goods being kept afloat, sometimes for many days, in lighters, or other small craft, waiting opportunities of shipment, and, therefore, the law expressly interdicts the removal of this class of goods by any other than licensed lightermen, under a penalty of £20. Sec. 127, pp. 164, 165.

COLLECTION OF CUSTOMS' DUTIES.

The section of the Act which next claims attention relates to the primary and paramount object for which this important branch of the public service was established. It imposes upon the Commissioners of Customs, for the time being, the vast and responsible task of managing the business of the Customs generally, of collecting and controlling the duties properly regarded as duties of Customs, together with all drawbacks and allowances, which, either now or hereafter, may be imposed by law. These they are required to ascertain, raise, levy, collect, pay, recover, allow and appropriate, under terms, every phrase of which has a distinct significant import, and enjoins a separate and onerous responsibility. After delegating to the Board their main commission, this and the two immediately succeeding sections proceed to lay down two or three fundamental rules. For example, it is provided, that all duties and drawbacks imposed or allowed according to any specified quantity or value shall apply in the same proportion to any greater or less quantity or value,⁽¹⁾ and be paid throughout the United Kingdom in British currency and according to imperial weights and measures. Sec. 18.

It is further provided, that, when, by any Act of Parliament, new duties of Customs shall be imposed in lieu of pre-existing ones, the old duties shall, unless otherwise specially provided, continue payable until the new ones shall become chargeable. So also, duties and arrears thereof, though computed under such former Act, whether secured by bond or otherwise, are to be levied, and all drawbacks or allowances paid or allowed, as if made payable under this or any other Act in force for the time being. Sec. 19.

So, in like manner, goods deposited in warehouses under the warehousing provisions of this or any other Act, without payment of the duty on the importation thereof; or which being imported and on board any ship, shall be entered for home consumption, are to be chargeable with the then existing duties on the like sort of goods, unless where the legislature shall specially provide otherwise.⁽¹⁾ Sec. 20.

(1) This rule is furnished with reference to the Tariff for the sake of brevity, being applicable to cases where duties are chargeable pro rata, whether at value, or per weight, measure, or quantity; as for instance, where duty is charged on every £100 of the value of any goods, or on every bushel, cwt., tun, &c., the repetition in the Tariff of the words "and so in proportion for every fractional part, &c.," is obviated.

RECEIPT, PAYMENT, AND ACCOUNTS OF MONIES ARISING FROM DUTIES OF CUSTOMS.

The protection and collection of the Customs Revenue having been provided for, the proceeding next in importance is its transference to the Queen's Exchequer. This is done by the Receiver General of Customs. All monies bills, notes, and drafts received by that officer on account of the Customs Revenue in Great Britain are to be paid by him into the Bank of England, and all other monies, bills, notes, &c., resulting from Customs duties in Great Britain, which embrace the sums received by the various Collectors at the outports, &c., are also to be paid into the same Bank, and to be placed to an account there, intituled "The Account of Public Monies of the Receiver General of Customs," and all monies accruing from duties of Customs in Ireland are made payable into Her Majesty's Exchequer. Sec. 21.

ACCOUNTS TO BE KEPT IN ACCORDANCE WITH TREASURY REGULATIONS.

As it would be difficult to prescribe inflexible rules for the government of such immense pecuniary transactions, the Legislature have judiciously empowered the Commissioners of the Treasury to adopt such regulations as may from time to time be found necessary for the due keeping of the Receiver General's accounts with the Bank, and the accounts of the latter in relation thereto. The rules in force before the passing of the Act are thereby confirmed until changed or revoked; and the Receiver

(1) The several provisions embodied in this section are framed as standing clauses, a course pursued by this act in many other instances to obviate the necessity of repeating such provisions in the various acts by which alterations may from time to time be made in the Tariff, or of interfering with the general Law, which it has been deemed desirable to comprise in one Consolidation Act.

General complying with them is, of course, relieved from personal responsibility with respect to any money, &c., so paid by him into the Bank, the Governor and Company of the latter being answerable for all that is actually received by them from or on account of the Receiver General: but, in conferring these powers upon the Treasury, special provision has been made to guard against any infraction of the general law, which governs the application and appropriation of the monies arising from Customs in common with the receipts of the various other revenue departments; therefore, the provisions of the 4th and 5th Wm. IV., cap. 15. are, by special proviso, preserved. Sec. 22.

ENTRY OF PAYMENTS AND INSPECTION OF ACCOUNTS.

As a further security for due payment into the Bank, an entry of each amount paid must be made in a book provided for that purpose, and such entry is a sufficient discharge to the person paying in the money, but is subjected to daily inspection by the Comptroller General or his clerk, for the purpose of ascertaining that the Receiver General pays into the Bank all monies received by him. In the event of the Comptroller General or his clerk discovering any default, he is required immediately to report the fact to the Commissioners of Customs, who, unless it appear to have arisen from inadvertence, are to report it to the Treasury. Sec. 23.

DUTY OF THE BANK IN RESPECT TO MONEY &c., PAID IN.

The monies, notes, bills of Exchange, or drafts, so paid into the Bank are not to be paid, transferred, or disposed of, except in accordance with the regulations of the Treasury. But whenever the Solicitor of Customs shall require any bill, note, or draft, for the purpose of proceeding thereon by extent, the same shall be delivered to him or one of his clerks, on the order of the Commissioners of Customs, such delivery being noted in a book provided for such purpose. Sec. 24.

MONEY DUE IN LONDON ON DEBENTURES ETC., TO BE PAID BY RECEIVER GENERAL.

Moneys due in the port of London upon debentures,⁽¹⁾ certificates or other instruments for the payment of any money out of the duties of Customs are to be paid by the Receiver General, out of any moneys to his account in the Bank of England, under the rules and regulations in force for the time being, which payments are to be allowed by the Commissioners for auditing the public accounts. And, any such payments due at the out-ports may be paid by the Collectors, under the direction of the Commissioners of Customs. By the pre-existing law, returns of duty overpaid by importers, merchants, &c., were barred unless claimed and repaid within three years, but by this section the period is extended to six years. Sec. 25.

To facilitate the due settlement of accounts, the Commissioners of Customs may close the accounts of Collectors, notwithstanding any erroneous appropriation of duties received by them, subject, however, to the correction of such erroneous appropriations, which corrections are to be allowed by the Commissioners for auditing public accounts.⁽²⁾ Sec. 26.

HOW BALANCE TO VEST ON DEATH, REMOVAL, OR RESIGNATION OF RECEIVER-GENERAL.

On the death, resignation, or removal of the Receiver-General the balance to his account in bank is to vest in his successor when appointed, and, until such appointment, in such person as shall be authorised to discharge the duties of the office for the time being. Sec. 27.

(¹) The mode of issuing and passing debentures is prescribed by secs. 130 and 131, and the payment is limited to two years after shipment of the goods by sec. 132.

(²) When this provision first became law, the officers of Customs were charged with the receipt of dues, &c., other than Customs duties and which by inadvertence were occasionally carried to the account of consolidated Customs. As to those, this provision is superfluous; but, as there are some dues, for instance, light dues, still collected by the Customs, the provision has been retained.

As a further preventive against fraud, the forgery or uttering of any draft or instrument purporting, to be that of the Receiver or Comptroller-General, is made felony, punishable by transportation for life, and this liability extends to persons wilfully aiding in the perpetration of the offence.⁽¹⁾ Sec. 28.

DISPUTES AS TO AMOUNT OF DUTY PAYABLE BY MERCHANTS.

Connected with the subject of management, the provisions of the Act, which relate to controversies between merchants and officers of Customs, are next to be considered. A very equitable rule is prescribed for determining controversies as to the amount of duty to which the importer of goods is liable. In the event of such controversy, a deposit may be made in the hands of the Collector of the amount which he claims; and the sum so deposited is to be deemed the amount properly chargeable, unless the party making it shall bring an action in one of the superior Courts of Law against such collector⁽²⁾ within three months.⁽³⁾ On the importer making the deposit and passing a proper entry, the goods are to be delivered to him. Sec. 29.

DEPOSIT OF DUTY CLAIMED, IN CASE OF DISPUTE.

The amount so deposited is to be paid into the Consolidated Fund, and, in the event of no action being brought within the prescribed time, is to be retained, as the duty chargeable on such goods; but, if an action be brought, and it be established by the result, that a lesser sum than that deposited was the duty properly chargeable, the difference between those sums, with interest at the rate of five per cent. from the date of the deposit, is to be paid to the importer in satisfaction of his damages and expenses, except his costs of suit, which he is entitled to receive as between party and party, subject to taxation, by the proper officer of the Court. If the verdict be against the plaintiff, the defendant's taxed costs are recoverable as in an ordinary action; and if it be against the defendant, the costs are to be paid by the Commissioners of Customs. Sec. 30.

The foregoing provisions are not entirely new to this Act though of recent date, their origin cannot better be explained than by the following extract from a recent work on the Administration of the Customs,—“ The officers were formerly, not only empowered, but required to detain the merchandize of any importer who, whether right or wrong, had the misfortune to differ with the Collector as to the amount of duty imposed by the latter, and by which the merchant's goods were unprofitably locked up, pending the settlement of the dispute, however advantageous it might be to bring them into market. With the sanction of the Board, provisions were, on the suggestion of the Solicitor of Customs, introduced into the Act of 12 and 13 Vict., c. 90, whereby any importer, in case of dispute as to the duties due, is enabled, on deposit of the amount demanded, to require immediate delivery of his goods without waiting the settlement of the dispute; and, in the event of his establishing his right to delivery, either duty free or at a less rate than the amount paid, the whole or the difference, as the case may be, is at once returnable to him with interest, ad interim, at five per cent. per annum.” When this important relief was afforded, the law of costs between the Crown and the subject had not been assimilated to the practice which prevails in ordinary suits; a change which has been effected by this Act. It will, however, be observed, that in the cases contemplated by the section under consideration, the right of appeal in case of controversy is limited to the Superior Courts, although in other cases, which will be considered under their proper heads, that right is extended, as far as possible, to every Court in the kingdom, superior or subordinate. The soundness of the policy, which dictates the reservation in this instance will, however, be perfectly obvious, when it is considered that the cases to which this section applies, are those in which the most intricate questions arise, as to the construction of the tariff, and that, not merely with reference to the terms of the tariff itself, but the operation of treaties, conventions and other incidental circumstances, which frequently demand the exercise of the nicest discrimination and the most profound judgment. Nor, does the amount of duty in dispute in any isolated case afford any criterion by which to determine the propriety of trying the issue in a superior court. That amount may be far below the maximum sum to which the jurisdiction of the inferior courts, with reference to the amounts recoverable, may be limited, but it must be borne in mind, that a decision, in such a case, if adopted as a precedent, would form the governing rule of construction for subsequent cases of the like kind, in which it may be conceived, without exaggeration, that questions of great liability might be involved; and probably, as no such decision would be deemed satisfactory, the expediency of referring such questions at once to a tribunal of sufficient authority to carry with it the stamp of finality, requires no further comment.

OPEN COURT OF COMMISSIONER.

The two preceding sections have reference to controversies as to the amount of 'duty payable. The succeeding ones, from (31 to 40 inclusive,) have a much more varied character and object. They were introduced into the statute less on account of any well founded grounds of complaint, as to the mode in which the Commissioners have been accustomed to adjudicate in matters of dispute between the mercantile body and the Customs' officers, than to satisfy a somewhat general and popular desire recently excited in the public mind for the institution of an open tribunal. It seemed an especial desideratum with those who advocated the institution of a court for determining disputes between the officers of Customs and others, that, instead of being disposed of upon the written representations of the parties, the officer and the merchant should "be heard face to face." Hence the inauguration of a Court of Appeal as unrestricted and open as the most earnest advocates of publicity can desire.

If in the port of London⁽¹⁾ any dispute shall arise between masters or owners of ships, merchants, importers, consignees, shippers, exporters, or agents, licensed or otherwise, and the officers of Customs, as to the seizure or detention of any ship or goods, or any apparently accidental omission or default, or, as to the withdrawal of an agent's license, the Commissioners may hear and determine such dispute. Sec. 31.

(1) Similar provision for outports, sec. 37.

If the dispute between the party and the officer be of such a nature as to involve a penalty or forfeiture, the Commissioners are authorised to remit or mitigate either to such amount as may in their judgment appear a sufficient satisfaction for the breach or irregularity complained of.⁽¹⁾ Sec. 32.

It is in two classes of cases, especially, (but these embracing almost every conceivable ground of complaint) that the functions of the new tribunal are to be called into operation. The one comprising matters, which have been already disposed of by the Board under sections 31 and 32; the other embracing every ground of complaint, which the aggrieved party may have occasion to advance against an officer of Customs. As regards the former, the new Court has been constituted on the principle of a Court of Appeal; as concerns the latter, it is made a Court of first instance, giving the complainant the privilege, without waiting for any antecedent ex parte inquiry, of bringing the accused officer before the Commissioners' court, and of supporting his charge by any number of witnesses he may think proper to produce; the only preliminary condition required of him, whether the proceeding be in the way of appeal or of a primary nature, being, that he shall make an application in writing to the Commissioners. Sec. 33.

(1) The power given to the Commissioners by this section is new, not in respect to the remission of penalties or forfeitures, which they exercised under the former law, but, to the fact, that the sum, to which the penalty may now be remitted, becomes a substantive and distinct penalty per se, and enforceable as such in the ordinary course of proceeding. The same remark applies to forfeitures, which by this section the Commissioners are empowered to commute into a pecuniary fine. Until the introduction of this salutary change, the Commissioners could only impose fines provisionally, and, if the offenders refused to comply, those fines could not be enforced, as such, there being no alternative left to the Commissioners, but that of foregoing the fine altogether, or of prosecuting the offender for the full penalty.

On receipt of such application the Commissioners of Customs are to depute one of their Board to hold a Court, to which the parties concerned, their agents, and witnesses, as well as the public, are to have free access.⁽¹⁾ The presiding Commissioner is to hear the evidence on both sides, and to report it, for the information of the full Board, in a narrative form⁽²⁾; and the general course of proceeding, as to the taking of evidence and the conduct of the inquiry, is to be in as close conformity as possible with that adopted by Justices at Sessions. Sec. 34.

As already observed, the presiding Commissioner is not himself to adjudicate,⁽³⁾ his province being, to bring before the Board the evidence, with his report of the substance of it, and his individual impression of the weight and effect of the arguments advanced on either side. The Board of Commissioners on

(1) Vide general regulations as to Open Court. Note (1), p. 99.

(2) This mode of taking evidence is in accordance with the much approved practice of the Court of Chancery on oral examinations, under the Chancery Amendment Act, sec. 32. It corresponds closely with the course of proceeding before justices and is thus described in a recent treatise on the Acts for the Amendment of the Practice of the Court of Chancery, "The examination shall take place in the presence of the parties, their counsel, solicitors, or agents; and the witnesses shall be subject to cross-examination and re-examination; and such examination and cross-examination shall be conducted as nearly as may be in the mode now in use in Courts of Common Law with respect to a witness about to go abroad. The section directs the mode of taking the depositions. This shall not be in the form of question and answer, but in that of a narrative, conveying the substance, meaning and true spirit of the evidence given by the witness instead of his precise words. Notwithstanding the general direction as to the narrative form in which the evidence shall be taken, the examiner is authorised to put down any particular question and answer if he should see any special reason for doing so: and he shall notice on the face of the deposition, or state his opinion, to the counsel, solicitor, or parties of any objection, without himself deciding on the materiality of any question."—O'Dowd's New Practice of the Court of Chancery. 3rd edit., p. 22.

receiving and considering the evidence taken, and the presiding Commissioner's report, are either to determine upon prosecuting the offender or to decide the case upon the evidence as it stands, and make their order thereon, which order is to be communicated in open Court on a day mentioned for the purpose. If by such order the Board elect to deal summarily with the case, their adjudication is to have the same force as a conviction, and on production of such order, under the hands of any two or more of them, to any justice of the peace, he is required to enforce it, for which purpose certain sections of the Act of the 11th and 12th Vict. c. 43 are made part of the statute.⁽¹⁾ But that no possible ground of complaint of any summary decision of the Board may subsist without a remedy, the Act provides, that, if the party against whom

" Having heard the matter of the complaint or appeal (as the case may

“ We, being two of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Customs, do “ adjudge (here insert adjudication), and that if this order be not complied

If the order be for the payment of a penalty or fine, the adjudication may run thus:—"The said A. B. to pay to the clerk of the Court of Commissioners of Customs the sum of £_____." If for the forfeiture of any ship or goods, or for any other purpose than the payment of a penalty or fine, it must be varied accordingly.

It may be proper to serve a copy of the order on the defendant, before any step be taken to enforce it, and, after the expiration of a week, unless the defendant shall in the meantime have signified his refusal to abide by the order, it may be brought to a justice, who is required to deal with it precisely, as if it had been an order or decision of his own; but, if the defendant, within the prescribed period, signify his refusal in the manner pointed out by the Act, the order will not be acted on; in which case, the Commissioners will be placed in the same position with reference to the defendant, as if no proceeding had been had, or order made, and may direct such other proceeding in accordance with the Act, as they may approve. The defendant is also free, by such refusal, to proceed, if so advised, by action in any Court of competent jurisdiction.

such order is made, be dissatisfied, he may, within a week after judgment is pronounced, give notice of his refusal to abide by it, in which case the Board may direct a prosecution, or the complainant may bring his action, as if no such order had been made.⁽¹⁾ But, if any party chooses to forego the power of formal appeal to the Commissioners given by the Act, he is to be at liberty instead, to state his case personally, or by his agent, to one of the Commissioners of Customs. Sec. 35.

This latter provision, which was introduced into the Act, whilst passing through Parliament, is clearly superfluous, the privilege it guarantees, having been always freely conceded.

Incident to the conduct of such inquiries is authority to enforce decorous behaviour in Court, and the power exercised by magistrates for that purpose is conferred on the Commissioners. Sec. 36.

OPEN COURTS AT THE OUTPORTS.

A corresponding Court to that in London for investigating cases of a similar nature between the same classes of persons⁽²⁾ is also established in every outport, substituting the collector, comptroller or other officer of Customs deputed for that purpose, in the place of a Commissioner. Sec. 37.

In any of the cases above enumerated, inquiries and examinations may be conducted by the Commissioners of Customs, or by surveyors-general, collectors, or such other persons, as the Commissioners shall appoint; and, upon every inquiry, they will have the power of administering oaths; and persons falsely swearing are made guilty of perjury, and subject to the penalties thereof.⁽³⁾ Sec. 38.

The power of summoning witnesses is conferred on the Commissioners, collectors, or other officers conducting such inquiries, and persons refusing to attend or give evidence in pursuance of such summons, are subject to a penalty of £20.⁽⁴⁾ Sec. 39.

Finally, the Commissioners of Customs are invested with the

(1) "Under the powers contained in the 40th section of the Customs Consolidation Act, 1853, the Commissioners of Customs have made the following rules and regulations as to complaints and disputes between merchants and others, and the officers of Customs, the public investigation thereof, and inquiries touching matters relating to the Customs, and the conduct of officers or others concerned therein :—

"I. A room on the ground floor at the eastern end of the Customs house, London, shall be appropriated to the hearing of complaints and appeals under the Customs Consolidation Act, 1853.

"II. One Commissioner will sit in the Court, at 11 o'clock on Tuesdays and Fridays in every week, when necessary, to conduct such enquiries, as may have been demanded, and on such other days as the Commissioners may appoint, on special application, in cases requiring more urgent despatch.

"III. In order to such inquiry it will be sufficient for the party requiring it to apply to the Board by letter, addressed either to the Commissioners or their secretary, stating his place of abode or business, the case to which he refers, and the substance of his complaint ; or, if it have reference to any decision of the Board, the reasons of his dissatisfaction with such determination.

"IV. On receipt of such application the case will be heard on the next possible open court day, without further notice to the party, who will be required to attend with his witnesses, if any, on such day, at eleven o'clock, unless in cases where on special application, any earlier day is appointed, in which case he shall have notice thereof personally, if he attend for that purpose, or by letter addressed to him at the place of abode or business stated in his application.

"V. Any party demanding such enquiry will be entitled to have a summons, requiring the attendance of any witnesses necessary to establish his case, on application to the Board.

"VI. Any party feeling himself aggrieved and who may be desirous of stating his case to one of the Commissioners, instead of demanding an inquiry in open court, may do so on applying to the secretary of the Board.

"VII. All parties concerned are referred to the provisions of the law in extenso, contained in sections 31 to 40 of the said Act.

"VIII. With regard to the outports, the like rules are to be observed as far as practicable. The collector, comptroller, or other officer deputed for that purpose, presiding at the inquiry instead of a Commissioner—and complaints may be made by letter addressed to the Collector. But any complainant will be at liberty, and is requested, if time will admit, to address his application to the Commissioners, in order that they may have the earliest intimation of the case, and issue any directions which may appear desirable for facilitating the enquiry."

"Copies of this notice are to be publicly posted in the respective Custom houses, for the information of all persons concerned."

IMPORTATION AND WAREHOUSING OF GOODS.

The right to import merchandise from one country to another has been from the most remote dates of history modified and controlled by the municipal laws of the country, into which the importation has taken place. It is, in this country, the subject of regulation by statute; and few branches of commercial legislation have been subjected to a greater succession of changes. The new Act, however, as compared with the recently repealed laws, introduces no material alteration. It authorises the importation of all goods, not prohibited⁽¹⁾ by this or any co-existing law to be imported, and permits, as a general rule, the warehousing of dutiable goods in approved warehouses,⁽²⁾ without payment of duty on their first entry.⁽³⁾ To this rule there are, however, some exceptions. Power is given to the Commissioners of the Treasury to direct, from time to time, on what goods duty shall be paid on their first importation, and such goods are not to be warehoused either for home consumption or exportation. With respect to corn, grain, meal, and flour, and wood goods from the British Possessions, the law requires the payment of duty on their first importation, and absolutely prohibits the warehousing of those articles. Sec. 41.

Rep. 383. Attorney General v. Weeks, Bunb. 223. See also the late case of the Attorney General v. Ansted, in which it was held, that the importer of goods from a foreign country is liable on the importation to the duties of Customs, payable thereon, and this liability is not affected by the Warehousing Act 3 and 4 William IV. c. 57 (nor on the same principle by the corresponding sections of the Customs Consolidation Act, 1853), the effect of which is only to give the merchant, in the case of goods warehoused under it, time for payment of the duties, until the goods are entered for home consumption. And, if the merchant have obtained the goods from a bonded warehouse, without making any entry for home consumption and without the duties having been paid, he is liable to an information of debt for the duties, and it is no answer to it, that a Custom-house agent employed by him to make the entry and pay the duties, misappropriated the money and fraudulently obtained the goods. Attorney General v. Ansted 12 Moo. & W. 520.

DEFINITION OF TIME OF IMPORTATION AND ARRIVAL.

Questions will frequently arise, as to what shall be deemed in law the precise "time of importation"⁽¹⁾ of goods, to determine which, the Act defines it to be the time at which the importing ship comes within the limits of the port, where she shall in due course be reported and the goods shall be discharged. And the "time of arrival" of a ship is that, at which the report of such ship shall be, or ought to have been, made.⁽²⁾ Sec. 42.

DEFINITION OF IMPORTATION DIRECT.

Goods are not deemed to be imported direct from any place, unless put on board the importing ship there, as the first shipment, or, unless they have been actually landed there. Sec. 43.

PROHIBITIONS AND RESTRICTIONS INWARDS.

If any goods subject to prohibition or restriction on importation be imported contrary to the prohibitions or restrictions contained in the table in which they are enumerated, they are liable to

(1) Time of report defined, sec. 50.

(2) This distinction between the time of importation and of arrival is essential, inasmuch as some of the provisions of the law will be found to have reference to what is to be done, after the ship comes into port, but before report; whilst others apply only to what is to be done after report. Under the statutable definition, the time of arrival is twenty-four hours after the ship comes within the limits of the port, unless she report earlier, in which case, the time of report becomes the time of arrival.

forfeiture, and may be destroyed or otherwise disposed of, as the Commissioners of Customs may direct. Sec. 44.

Notwithstanding the most earnest endeavours to simplify the prohibitory provisions of the act, it became impossible to abstain altogether from the use of the involved tabular style of the antecedent enactments. To assist, however, in removing any practical difficulty as to the meaning of the various prohibitions and restrictions inwards, the following familiar exposition is given instead of the statutable table, to be found in sec. 44.

The table is divided into three parts :—

First. Prohibitions absolute.

With reference to this, there can be no doubt. It comprises copyright works,⁽¹⁾ false money, coin below the established standard, essences of coffee, chicory, tea, and tobacco, malt, indecent books, prints, and other obscene articles, snuff work, tobacco stalks, and tobacco stalk flour.⁽²⁾

Second. Prohibitions of goods, except in transit, and subject to such regulations and restrictions as the Treasury may direct.

This division embraces goods permitted only to enter British ports in continuance of their voyage to other countries, and which must be reported “in transitu.” These are foreign manufactures

(¹) Lists are to be published as required by section 46; and the same in the British Possessions, by section 160. It may be appropriate here to notice the statutable provisions affecting copyright in furtherance of the objects of which the aid of the Customs is enlisted. Several Acts have been passed on the subject of copyright, some, exclusively, relating to the conditions upon which that right may be protected, as between authors and those invading it, and, in no respect, calling into action the official machinery of the Customs. In other instances, and especially with reference to the importation of pirated works, the legislature have thought proper to add to the ordinary duties of the Customs department the task of assisting in the protection of copyright when attempted to be infringed by pirated importations. The provisions which more particularly demand the attention of the officers of Customs are 5 and 6 Vict. c. 45, s. 17; 7 Vict. c. 12, more particularly sec. 10; 9 and 10 Vict. c. 58, and 15 Vict. c. 12.

(²) Prohibited goods are also liable to forfeiture under section 209, and persons concerned in their illegal importation are subject to penalties under sec. 322. Vide secs. 203, 212 and 213.

and packages of them bearing names, brands, and marks, calculated to pass them off as of home manufactures. ⁽¹⁾

Clocks and watches, of any metal, bearing any stamp in imitation of the legal British assay, or any mark giving them the character of home manufactures. ⁽²⁾

Parts of articles, unaccompanied by the other component parts which, if complete, would be subject to ad valorem duty. ⁽³⁾

(1) The obvious design of this provision is to protect the British trade from the injury and possible loss of character, consequent on the introduction of spurious imitations of our industrial products; but the old law went much further, inasmuch as it contemplated the injury to British manufacturers, which might ensue from the transshipment of such goods in British ports and into British vessels for foreign markets from the strong ground these circumstances would naturally afford for assuming that such manufactures were British. Hence, under the repealed law, articles of foreign manufacture, and packages of such articles imported into the United Kingdom, or the British Possessions, bearing any names, brands, or marks of, or purporting to be those of manufacturers resident in the United Kingdom, were absolutely prohibited, forfeited, and, in express words, interdicted from being imported or warehoused for exportation. This applied in the broadest manner to all foreign goods attempted to be imported or put off as British, whether by the use of actual names, brands, or marks of particular home manufacturers, or such as merely purported to be so, whereby a British character was assumed, but in deference to the opinion and recommendation of the Select Committee of the House of Commons, "That it is not necessary to enforce the regulations of 8 and "9 Vict. c. 86, sec. 163, as to the transit of foreign manufactures with "imitation British marks," (Final Report, head 7, Title, "Transit System"); the law has been thus modified. But, anticipating the possible necessity for some check on this species of traffic, care has been taken, whilst permitting, as a general rule, the transit of such goods through our ports, to render this relaxation of the law subservient to such regulations and restrictions, as the Treasury may deem it expedient to impose. Imports bearing the name or mark of known British manufacturers and imported by them are admitted.—B. O. 1847.

(2) The objects of this provision are two-fold: the prevention of fraud on the Crown and the public, by passing off foreign metals under the character of British assayed articles and the introduction, as in the case of other manufactures, of surreptitious imitations of home products.

(3) This prohibition is designed to guard against the fraudulent importation of goods in detached portions, comparatively valueless, when thus detached, but, which, if introduced at once in their complete state, would command a value, giving a large per centage of duty to the Crown, the evasion of which would be detrimental to the revenue and to the conscien-

Third. Prohibitions subject to certain restrictions.

This division comprises importations, admissible under particular restrictions, and, as it is in these, that some perplexity arises from the inverse mode of expression usually adopted in framing prohibitions, qualified by conditions and exceptions, a mode of elucidation is adopted which appears to be best calculated to convey the meaning of the Legislature.

As a rule, cattle, sheep, and other animals, and hides, horns, &c., may be imported; but, for the prevention of contagion, power is given to the Crown to prohibit, when necessary, the importation of infected animals and animal matter.

Silk manufactures of Europe may be imported into the ports of London, Liverpool, Hull, Southampton, Leith, Dublin, and such other ports as may be appointed by the Commissioners of Customs, and direct from Calais or Bologne, into Dover or Folkestone, but, they cannot be imported in any ship of less than fifty tons burden.

Perfumed or medicated spirits⁽¹⁾ may be imported in any ship, and in any sized cask, bottle, or other package.

Other spirits, being part of the cargo of the ship, and duly reported, may be imported in casks of not less than twenty gallons, or in bottles not exceeding three pints in ships of not less than fifty tons burden.⁽²⁾

Tobacco and snuff may be imported direct from the East Indies in packages of one hundred pounds each.

Tobacco may be imported direct from the Turkish Dominions, including Egypt, in packages of not less than one hundred pounds each.

Negrohead tobacco, and also snuff, the produce of the United States of America, may be imported in hogsheads, casks, chests or cases, of not less than two hundred pounds each; or, if imported direct from those states, in packages of not less than one hundred and fifty pounds.

tious competitor in trade, who pays the proper duties on the like articles, when imported in their entirety.

INFRINGEMENT OF COPYRIGHT.

SHIPS COMING INWARDS.

On the entrance of a ship into any port, she must conform to four specific injunctions of the statute.

1st. She must come as quickly up to the proper place of mooring, lading, or unlading, as the nature of the port will admit.

2nd. In proceeding to such place, she must "bring-to" at the stations appointed for the boarding of Customs officers⁽²⁾.

America, or the Mauritius, except from the United Kingdom. And by section 150, arms, ammunition, gunpowder, and military and naval stores, or articles applicable or convertible to such purposes, as well as provisions, or human food, may, by proclamation or order in council, be prohibited to be exported, or carried coastwise.

(²) The power to appoint stations, &c., has already been pointed out under sec. 13. Ships are usually accompanied by pilots, who are well acquainted with the various stations; and it may be proper here to observe that there are various duties imposed on the Customs under the pilotage Act, a brief review of which may be convenient in this place. By 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, the antecedent Acts of the 52 Geo. 3, c. 39, and 55 Geo. 3, c. 87, and all provisions in other Acts, relating to pilotage were repealed, and the Acts now in force, relating to pilotage, are the 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, as amended by the 9th Geo. 4, c. 86, the 3 & 4 Vic. c. 68, the 12 & 13 Vic. c. 88, and the 16 & 17 Vic. c. 129. The 7th section of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, commonly called the pilot consolidation Act requires that all notices of appointments of pilots are to be put up in writing in the Trinity House and Custom House and at the Custom Houses of the ports for which they are licensed and are to be published in the "London Gazette." Section 8, directs that tables of pilotage rates shall be hung up at the Custom Houses of the respective ports and that no greater or lesser rates shall be received or paid. The 11th, 12th & 13th sections authorized the corporation of Trinity House to make bye laws, which were to be transmitted to the Privy Council and the Commissioners of Customs, and after the expiration of three months, to be submitted to a chief justice, either of the Queen's Bench or Common Pleas for approval; but by 16 & 17 Vic. c. 129, s. 23, those rules are to be submitted to Her Majesty in Council, instead of one of the chief justices. When approved, the Commissioners of Customs are required to cause them to be printed and hung up in the several Custom houses at the principal ports in Great Britain. Section 25 refers to a table of rates given in the schedule which were to be the only legal rates demandable by pilots, but the 16 & 17 Vic. c. 129, s. 21, authorises variations from time to time in the amount of those rates. Sections 35 & 36 provide for the making out of a list annually of all pilots appointed within the year, and for its transmission to the Trinity House and Custom House, and for the transmission of by the Commissioners of Customs to the several chief officers of Customs, of so much of the list as contains the names of pilots licensed within their ports. Section 43 directs the insertion by the proper officer of Customs of the pilot's name in the report or entry of every ship, entering the port of London. The officer was, further, to report such insertion to the corporation of the Trinity House daily, and to the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports monthly; but the 16 & 17 Vic., c. 129, dispenses with the necessity of such further report to the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports. Provisions are made by sec. 46, for the manner in which pilotage of ships, not having British Registers trading to and from the port of London, shall be paid, and by sec. 66, for the registration of pilots' licenses by the principal officers of Customs at the ports, and penalties are imposed in default of such registration. The only other sections of this Act, in which the Customs are concerned, are 67, 68, and 72, which relate to the conduct of pilots and their being required to take charge of vessels on the request of any master, &c. or Customs officer. The 9 Geo. 4, is entirely repealed by 16 & 17 Vic. c. 129. The 3 & 4 Vic. c. 68, was passed to enable Her Majesty in Council to authorize vessels of foreign countries under treaties of reciprocity to be piloted in certain cases without licensed pilots; but, does not contain any special provisions requiring additional service on the part of the Customs. The 16 & 17 Vic. c. 129, vests the piloting of vessels in and out of London in one body of pilots, subject to the uniform control of the Trinity House, the pilots of the latter, and of the Cinque Ports being united, and the property, rights, duties and liabilities of both incorporated. These laws are now undergoing further revision by Parliament.

4. The master of such ship is to provide for every officer stationed on board sufficient room, under the deck in some part of the forecastle or steerage, for his bed or hammock.

In case of violation of any of the foregoing provisions, the master is liable to a penalty of £20. Sec. 47.

POWER OF OFFICERS TO BOARD SHIPS INWARDS.

As a further means of preventing fraud upon the revenue, the officers of Customs are necessarily armed with an extent and variety of power suited to the exigencies of their peculiar service. They may board any ship on her coming into port ⁽¹⁾—continue on board—while any portion of her cargo remains undelivered—have free access to every part of the ship—fasten down hatchways or entrances to the hold—mark goods before landing—lock up, seal, mark, or secure, as they think proper, goods on board—and, in case the keys of any locked box or chest be withheld, they may, if of a rank superior to that of tidewaiter, open any such box or chest, in whatever way they may think proper—or, if tidewaiters, may send for any superior officer to open them—and if any goods be found concealed on board any such ship, they are liable to forfeiture.

If any lock, mark, or seal, affixed by the officer on any goods, be opened, altered, or broken, before due delivery of such goods;—or, if any of such goods be secretly conveyed away;—or, if the hatchways or entrances to the hold, after being fastened by the officer, be opened, the master of the ship will forfeit £100. So also, if any lock, mark, or seal, placed by the officer upon any stores on board any ship arriving in the United Kingdom, be wilfully opened, altered, or broken, or, if any such stores be secretly conveyed away, either while the ship remains in port or before arriving at any other port of the United Kingdom for which she is destined, the master is liable to a penalty of £20.⁽²⁾ Sec. 48.

TIMES AND PLACES OF LANDING GOODS.

As a general rule, in the absence of which the 6th section, as to holidays, would be inoperative, the Act provides, that no goods shall be unshipped or landed on Sundays or Holidays, except diamonds, bullion, lobsters and fresh fish of British taking, imported in British ships, nor on any other days, except between eight o'clock A.M., and four o'clock P.M., from the 1st of March until the 1st of November,—and, between nine o'clock A.M. and four o'clock P.M. from the 1st of November to the 1st of March,—or, such other hours, as may be appointed by the Commissioners of Customs,—Nor shall any goods be unshipped or landed,—except in the presence or under the sanction of the proper officers of Customs,—or, except at the proper quay, and by the boat in which they were first sent to be removed and landed, unless transhipped into any other craft by permission of the officer⁽¹⁾.

Goods removed in violation of these regulations are, together with any boat or craft used in removing them, forfeited. Sec. 49.

REPORT OF SHIP AND CARGO.

The master of every ship, however laden, is, within twenty-four hours after her arrival, and before bulk be broken, to report⁽²⁾ such

(1) Vide also sec. 209.

(2) At the time of report, attention is required to the following statutory provisions :—

Post-Office Regulations.—By 1 Vict. c. 36 the master, officer, crew, or passengers of any ship retaining letters after the delivery of the ships' letters to the Post-office will forfeit £5 for each letter, and for detaining letters after demand by the officer of Customs or person authorised by the Post-Master-General, £10 for each letter.—Sec. 3.

Officers of Customs who are required by 1 Vict. c. 34 to prohibit vessels reporting, until the requisites of that Act are complied with, are, by this Act (c. 36), subjected to a penalty of £50 for neglect.—Sec. 6.

By 3 and 4 Vict. c. 96 the master is not allowed to report his ship, until he has declared before some person at the port, authorised by the Post-Master-General, that he has delivered at the Post-Office all letters that were on board. The officers of Customs may search for and seize letters on board after report.—Sec. 36.

The penalties imposed by 7 Wm. 4, and 1 Vict. c. 34 are extended (by c. 36) to officers of Customs neglecting to prohibit ship's report before declaration made.—Sec. 37.

ship in the form given by the Act, or to that effect; and if the cargo shall have been laden at several places, he is to state those places, opposite the particulars of the goods, as required by the directions in the statutable form. Sec. 50.

This tabular arrangement is not designed to bind the parties by a set form, regardless of their convenience, but to furnish at one view, the particulars required to be filled up, without having to wade through tedious descriptive enactments for them. The law stipulates only for such particulars, as are indicated by the form, or to that effect, giving ample latitude for more convenient arrangement, should experience render it necessary. When a form

If it be suspected, that any letter contains contraband goods, the Post-Master General may forward it to the Commissioners of Customs, to be opened by them in the presence, or, in case of non-attendance after notice, in the absence, of the person, to whom it is addressed, and to be dealt with as prescribed.—Sec. 65.

Registry.—Under 8 and 9 Vict. c. 85, sec. 140, saved on repeal of that Act, pending the revision of the registry laws, to which it properly belongs, the collector may refuse to admit any one to act as master of a ship, unless his name appears on the certificate of registry.

Alien Act.—By 6 and 7 Wm. 4, c. 11, the master of a ship on arrival, must make a written declaration of the number of aliens on board or landed from his ship, under a penalty of £20; and a further sum of £10 for each alien not mentioned in the declaration, on non-payment of which the vessel may be detained. Sec. 2. Aliens on arrival are required, under a penalty of £10, to show their passports to the chief officers of Customs and declare the day and place of their landing, their names, and that of the country to which they belong, or from which they have come. Sec. 3. The officer of Customs must register the declaration in a book for that purpose in counterpart, and deliver one to the alien, transmitting the other, with a certificate, to one of Her Majesty's Chief Secretaries of State, or, if in Ireland, to the Chief Secretary for that country. Secs. 4 and 5. On the departure of any alien, he is required to deliver his certificate to the chief officers of Customs at the port of departure, who is to transmit it to one of the Chief Secretaries of State, or, if in Ireland, to the Chief Secretary of Ireland. A provision is made for renewing lost certificates. Sec. 7. All certificates are to be given without fee, and the officer omitting to give or transmit such certificates, will incur a penalty of £20. Sec. 8. Penalties for forgery, and the mode of prosecution of offences, are imposed and prescribed by sections 9 and 10. These provisions are not, however, to affect foreign ministers, or their servants, nor aliens, who have been resident within the kingdom for three years, or who are under fourteen years of age. Sec. 11.

is once adapted to the purpose,⁽¹⁾ and approved by the officers, it is obvious, that considerable advantage must accrue from the consequent non-liability to rejection and re-preparation. This observation is generally applicable to the other forms prescribed by the Act.

Although the "Merchant Shipping Act" (16 and 17 Vict. c. 131, sec. 31,) removes the restrictions on the employment of foreign seamen, the master is still required to report the number of his crew, distinguishing British and foreign. This is for statistical, and not Customs', purposes, and furnishes a test of the practical results of the change in the law.

The words printed in italics are those to be inserted by the master.

It will be observed that column 4 of the form given in the Act requires, amongst other things, that the "general denomination of the contents of each package of tobacco, cigars, or snuff," be stated. It is the only requirement of this kind now remaining, except as to spirits, (see table of prohibitions inwards, s. 44,) the Act having dispensed with such particulars in respect of cambrics, lawns, leather gloves and silks.

If the master fail to make due report, in the form required by the Act, so far as the same is applicable, or, if the particulars contained in such report be false,⁽¹⁾ he will forfeit £100. Sec 51.

AMENDMENT OF REPORT.

The law requires, that the master's report should be accurate. The power of dealing with any irregularity in this respect, therefore, is properly left in the discretion of the Commissioners, and although the Act contains no express provision for the amendment of the Report, it appears to be a subject of sufficient importance to demand consideration under a separate head.

The master's Report with the certificates of origin, &c., where necessary, becomes, when delivered into the hands of the collector, the basis of the importer's operations. It is, therefore, highly important, that the greatest possible accuracy should be insisted on. The master or person in command of the ship, whose duty it is to take a correct account of the goods committed to his care, and to enumerate them in his cargo book, is also furnished with bills of lading of the merchandize shipped, and is responsible for the due delivery of the whole cargo. It is, therefore, fairly presumed, that he has the amplest means of rendering an accurate account on arrival at the port of discharge. But, it will sometimes happen in the case of extensive cargoes of a mixed character, or, from accidental circumstances, that the master, without the slightest intention of fraud, may make some mistake in his report, in which event, and on its being found, on the landing of the goods, that the contents of the ship and the report do not correspond, it will be the duty of the master to amend his report, for which purpose, on applying to the proper officer, he will be instructed as to the mode in which he is to obtain permission to amend.⁽¹⁾ But if fraud or wilful negligence be apparent, he will of course be liable to fine or prosecution, at the discretion of the Commissioners. It is, therefore, necessary, that the Board should be apprised of the facts, as affecting the conduct of the master, to enable them to determine whether to grant relief, remit or mitigate the penalty, or insist on its enforcement.

Forfeiture, however, of the importer's goods cannot be enforced solely on account of the negligence of the master to report them, unless there be fraud or connivance. The forfeiture of the goods imposed by the pre-existing law (8 & 9 Vict. c. 86, sec. 2), in case of non-report alone, is not re-enacted in the corresponding section of this Act (sec. 51).

As to non-report in the British Possessions, vide sec. 164.

If the master feel aggrieved by the decision of the Commissioners, he may appeal in the manner prescribed by sec. 34, p. 96.

COMMISSIONED SHIPS.

When a ship, having commission from Her Majesty, or from any foreign state, arrives at any port in the United Kingdom, with a foreign cargo on board, the person in charge is, previous to the removal of any part of such cargo, and on the request of any officer of Customs, to deliver a written particular of such cargo, specifying—

(1) IN LONDON. The proper officers are empowered to dispense with amendments of the report in the following cases :—1st. for free goods, corn and firewood, either in excess, or deficiency of the number of packages or quantity reported, unless considerable.—And 2nd. for the following low duty goods, when the packages short landed, shall not exceed two per cent. viz., apples, raw arrow-root, biscuit and bread, cassava powder, cherries raw, fruit raw, grapes, mandioca flour, manna croup, medlars, meal and flour, onions, pears, potatoes, flour, pearled barley, quinces, rice, sago, semolina, starch, gum of starch, powder usable as starch, tallow and tapioca.—And 3rd. for other goods (and as to Class 2) in cases of excess, where the duty shall not exceed 30s., unless the quantity in excess, without reference to the amount of duty, shall be considerable.

AT THE OUTPORTS. The collector and comptroller may, under certain conditions, permit amendments of reports in cases where the duty involved does not exceed £20.

marks and numbers on each package;—and the names of the shippers and consignees;—he is also to subscribe a declaration of the truth of such particular, and to answer any questions which may be put to him by any collector or comptroller concerning the goods imported, under a penalty of £100. All commissioned ships may be boarded and searched by the officers of Customs in the same manner as merchant ships, and any goods found in them may be brought into the Queen's Warehouse, subject to such regulations, in respect of ships of war, as may be prescribed by the Commissioners of the Treasury.⁽¹⁾ Sec. 52.

CONDITIONS TO BE PERFORMED BY MASTERS GENERALLY.

The master of every ship, arriving from parts beyond the seas, is,—at the time of making his report,—to deliver to the collector or comptroller, if required, the bill of lading for every part of the cargo, or a copy thereof,—to answer such questions as shall be put to him by the collector or comptroller, as to the ship, cargo, crew, and voyage,—and in case of refusal to answer questions,—or to answer truly,—or to produce the bill of lading or copy,—or if such bill of lading or copy be false,—or if the goods mentioned therein shall not have been bond fide shipped on board such ship,—or if the bill of lading shall not have been signed by such master,—or if the copy of it shall not have been received or made by him prior to his departure from the place of shipment,—or, if on the ship's arrival within four leagues of the coast of the United Kingdom, bulk shall have been broken,—or, if any alteration in the stowage of the cargo, so as to facilitate the unlading of any portion of it,—or if any part be staved, destroyed, or thrown overboard,⁽²⁾—or if any package be opened, unless accounted for to the satisfaction of the Commissioners of Customs,—the master in every such case, is to forfeit the sum of £100. Sec. 53.

Packages intended for exportation in the same ship, and reported "Contents unknown," may be opened and examined on board, or removed by the proper officers to the Queen's Warehouse for that purpose. And if prohibited goods be found in them, they are forfeited, unless the Commissioners of Customs shall permit them to be exported. Sec. 54.

Prohibited goods so seized may, under Sec. 44, be destroyed or disposed of by direction of the Commissioners.

ENTRY OF DUTIABLE GOODS FOR HOME CONSUMPTION.

When dutiable goods are intended for home use, on the landing of them from the ship, the importer, or his agent, is required, before unshipment, to make a perfect entry of such goods,⁽¹⁾ by delivering to the collector or comptroller a bill of entry of them in the form prescribed by the Act, or to that effect; and the particulars of such entry are to correspond with the particulars in the report of the ship, or in any certificate of origin,⁽²⁾ or other document, when required, authorising the importation or entry of the goods,⁽³⁾ or under which any benefit accrues to the importer

(1) Goods, except baggage, landed without entry are forfeited, under secs. 69 and 209.

(2) As to certificates, vide secs. 77 to 84, and 176 to 180. *

(3) As already observed, in treating of "Report of Ship," (p. 110,) the forms given by the Act are not arbitrary, but indicative only of what is required, in elucidation of which, specimens of the various kinds of entry, as actually used, are furnished by way of note to the comments on the several sections under which they are required. For the purpose of practical illustration, hypothetical cases are adopted, the words printed in italics exemplifying what is to be filled up by the importer or his agent. The following represents an entry for dutiable goods delivered from the ship for home use.

The entry is invalid, under Sec. 68, unless the goods are described by the denominations, characters and circumstances according to which they are chargeable with duty.

Under section 68, counterparts of entries may be required, and this entry should be in triplicate, of which, two parts may be in figures. It is technically denominated a "prime entry," not because it may not be final, but, because it sometimes happens to be insufficient from want of accurate information, in the first instance, as to the quantity of goods, &c., in which case, what is termed a "post entry," becomes necessary to complete the transaction, as, for instance, if the importer having passed his entry for 20 cwt. of cheese, finds on the examination of the goods, that there are 30 cwt., he passes a further entry for the difference, calling this a "Post Entry," and referring therein to the date of the "Prime Entry." The following is a specimen.

Two duplicates are required in the above cases, but as to Spirits and Tobacco, (under the Excise Act 11 & 12 Vic. c. 122, sec. 26, on entry for home use of goods subject to Excise regulations,) a certificate or duplicate of the bill of entry must, in addition to what is required by the Customs, be given in respect of the goods to be removed, and if to be divided and removed into the stock of more than one dealer or other person, a similar certificate or duplicate is required in respect of each. These certificates are to be annexed to the original entry and retained until application for removal, when the officer of Customs indorses the particulars required by the Act on the duplicate, and the remover indorses the name of the person, into whose stock the goods are to be removed, and, on the delivery, the officer of Customs further indorses the day and hour of delivery, and the certificate so indorsed becomes the protecting permit of, and accompanies the goods into the stock of the recipient.

PAYMENT OF DUTIES, AND WARRANT FOR DELIVERY.

The importer, or his agent, at the time of entry⁽¹⁾ must pay down the duties on the goods, if in London, to the Receiver-General, and, if at the outports, to the collector, or other authorised officer; and the bill of entry, when signed by the proper officer, becomes the warrant for the landing and delivery of the goods, and is to be transmitted to the landing waiter for that purpose. Sec. 56.

Goods removed from any ship or warehouse without entry are by sec. 69, forfeited.

DETENTION OF GOODS FOR UNDERVALUE.

If the value placed by the importer upon goods liable to duty according to value, appear to the officers of Customs less than the actual value, they may detain the goods, but, they are required to give notice in writing, to the person entering the goods, of such detention and of the value as estimated by them. This notice may be delivered personally, or addressed by post to the residence of the person making the entry.⁽²⁾ The Commissioners of Customs have seven days after the detention⁽³⁾ within which to con-

(1) The time of entry is prescribed by section 74, viz., within fourteen days after the ship's arrival, in default whereof the goods may be taken to the Queen's warehouse.

(2) This is a new feature in the law, though not altogether new in practice; the detaining officers having always, in pursuance of the directions of the Board, made similar communications to the parties, whose goods were detained; but, for the more effectually securing the observance of this practice, it has been deemed expedient to make it the subject of express enactment, and to require, that it be done in writing. It should be observed, that the officers in London are authorised by the Board to permit amendments of ad valorem entries, where the difference in duty on the goods, does not exceed 10s., or if the goods are not undervalued more than fifty per cent. 20s., and at the outports, where the difference shall not exceed £10, in the latter case, taking a deposit of £2 to abide the Board's decision, and cover any fine they may deem it expedient to impose.

(3) With respect to the computation of days, the former rule was, that where the computation was to be made from an act done, the day of doing it should be included. But, the more recent authorities have established, as sider the question of value in case of dispute. If they deem the importer's valuation satisfactory, the goods are to be delivered to him on his entry. On the other hand, should they concur in the valuation of the officers, they may retain the goods for the use of the Crown, paying to the importer the value at which the goods were entered by him with an additional five per cent., and returning the duties paid, or, on the application of the importer, may allow him to amend his entry and take the goods, paying the difference of duty, and such fine, if any, as they may deem necessary to check the too frequent practice of under-valuation. This has been deemed a very wholesome provision for the prevention of frauds, which are not unfrequently attempted, sometimes by agents, even without the knowledge of the owner of the goods. To remove all possible suspicion of interest on the part of the officers, the law now deprives them of all direct participation in the proceeds of the sale or of any fines imposed in respect of goods detained by them. A moiety of the surplus, if any, after the general rule of computation, that, whether the time be counted from an act done or from a certain day, the day shall be excluded from, and the last day of the series included in, the computation—Lester v. Garland, 15 Ves. 248—Pellw v. Inhabitants of Wonford, 9 B. & C. 134, 4 Man & Ry. 130; Wilkinson v. Gaston, 9 Q. B. 137. In like manner, "where there is given to a party a certain space of time to do an act, which space of time is included between two other acts to be done by another person, both the days of doing these acts ought to be excluded, in order to insure to him the whole of that space of time, per Alderson B., in Young v. Higgon, 6 Mee. & W., 49. In all cases, in which any particular number of days not expressed to be clear days, is prescribed by the rules or practice of the Courts, the same shall be reckoned exclusively of the first day, and inclusively of the last day, unless the last day shall happen to fall on a Sunday, Christmas Day, or Good Friday, or a day appointed for a public fast or thanksgiving, in which case, the time shall be reckoned exclusively of that day also. (Reg. Gen. H. T. 1853, No. 174.)

As to reckoning Sunday in other cases, the distinction is between cases, where the party must have done some juridical act on the Sunday, if it had been allowed to count, and those where the Sunday is reckoned silently with other days, no business or act being required on that day. In the former case, Sunday is excluded; in the latter, it is included; (see further, Woolrych on Legal Time, &c., p. 92.) As to the construction of "forthwith," "immediately," "directly," "next ensuing," "until," see Woolrych on Legal Time, 153.

defraying all expenses, including the sums paid on detention, is to be carried to a separate fund, for distribution amongst the most deserving officers, in such proportions as the Commissioners shall deem most suitable, and the other moiety is to be carried to account as duties of Customs. It is anticipated that the great reduction in the number and amount of duties ad valorem will tend to curtail this class of cases. Goods detained for under-value are to be disposed of by the Commissioners, for the use of the Crown. Sec. 57.

ENTRY OF GOODS TO BE WAREHOUSED.

If the importer intend to warehouse the goods, without payment of duty, on the first entry thereof, he is to deliver to the collector or comptroller, a bill of entry⁽¹⁾ containing the same particulars as are required by section 55, as far as applicable, together with the name and description of the warehouse, and of the person in whose name the goods are about to be warehoused.⁽²⁾ This entry, when signed by the collector or comptroller, is transmitted to the proper officer of Customs, and becomes the warrant for landing and warehousing the goods.⁽³⁾ Sec. 58.

If the importer enter and even land goods to be warehoused, and then change his mind, as to the disposal of them, he may enter

(1) By section 209, if goods are landed, the duties not being first paid or secured, (for which purpose the entry is an essential) they will be forfeited.

ENTRY OF FREE GOODS.

The same form of entry as that prescribed for dutiable goods, is, as far as applicable, to be used in respect of free goods ; but, so far as regards the goods, may be a transcript of the report, with the addition of a description of the goods, according to the terms under which they are free, and the value of such as had been formerly chargeable with duty at value.⁽¹⁾ This entry, when signed by the collector and comptroller, is transmitted to the landing waiter, and constitutes the warrant for landing and delivery.⁽²⁾ The importer is also required, within fourteen days after the entry and landing of the goods, to deliver to the proper officer of Customs a full account of the goods so landed.⁽³⁾ But at Liverpool and other ports, where all the docks and quays are in like manner subject to the control of the same local authorities, this account is required at the hands of the owner, master, or consignee of the importing ship, or his agent: a penalty of £20 being imposed in case of default. (1) Sec. 60.

ENTRY BY BILL OF SIGHT.

When the importer of any goods from want of information as to their precise description, quantity and value, is unable to make the particular entry required in the cases above-mentioned, he may on subscribing a declaration before the Collector or other chief officer of Customs, make an entry by bill of sight, in the form given by the Act or to the same effect (*). Sec. 61.

and the extension to fourteen days, the better to enable the parties to accomplish the work with accuracy, was warmly advocated and at length agreed upon; experience, however, having proved that inconvenience and inaccuracy result from the change, relief has been granted. Vide note (1) on sec. 142, p. 175.

(1) This provision originated under circumstances precisely similar to that referred to in the preceding note. The penalty here imposed is in lieu of two penalties of £20 and £5 imposed by the pre-existing law.

BILL OF SIGHT CONVERTIBLE INTO A PERFECT ENTRY.

This bill of sight is a mere provisional authority for the landing of the goods for examination by the importer or his agent, in the presence of the proper officer of Customs, and the importer is within three days after the landing and before delivery of the goods, to convert the bill of sight to a perfect entry, by endorsing upon it the full particulars of the goods, as in the case of a perfect entry in the first instance,⁽¹⁾ whether for payment of duty, delivery duty free, or for the warehouse⁽²⁾. Sec. 62.

(¹) Vide secs. 55, 58, or 60, according to the circumstances.

(²) The endorsement, to perfect a bill of sight, is an enumeration of the goods on the back of the bill, of which the following is an exemplification, adapted to the three kinds of entry.

Dated this 13th October, 1853.

It will be observed, that in the case here given for illustration, from the mixed character of the contents of the packages, and the supposed intention of the importer, the indorsement constitutes three entries, for three several portions, and for three different purposes, at the will of the importer; each of those entries, in consequence of the division of labour for despatch of business in the Long Room, goes to a distinct branch or seat there. Two duplicates, not of the whole indorsement, but of each part, are therefore necessary, except as to that for the warehouse, for which, one duplicate is sufficient. The duplicates, embracing only portions of the whole endorse-

PAYMENT OF DUTY OR DEPOSIT ON SIGHT ENTRY.

In order to entitle the importer to delivery of the goods, under the circumstances lastly explained, the duty must be previously paid, unless a sum sufficient to cover the amount be lodged with the proper officer of Customs. If the sum so lodged, on bill of sight, be insufficient to satisfy the duties payable upon all the goods in any single package landed thereby, no part of the contents of that package can be delivered, without perfect entry for the whole of such contents, and payment of the duty, or a deposit of an equivalent. Sec. 63.

IN DEFAULT OF PERFECT ENTRY HOW GOODS TO BE DEALT WITH.

It is clear that some definite time should be fixed, within which the importer should complete the entry of goods landed by bill of sight.⁽¹⁾ If that be not done within three days⁽²⁾ the goods may be conveyed to the Queen's warehouse.⁽³⁾ And, if the entry be not completed and the duties, with the charges of removal and warehouse rent, be not paid, within a month⁽⁴⁾ after the landing of the goods, they may be sold for payment of those duties and ment on the original bill of sight should, for identity, each have the general heading as to port, quay, ship and master, and also the date and signature of the importer. This course ought in strictness to be observed in the original also.

(¹) When customable goods are landed by bill of sight, under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 52, s. 24, (and on the same principle, under sections 61, 62, 63, and 64 of the Customs Consolidation Act,) and are afterwards removed without payment of duties, and without a perfect entry having been made of them, pursuant to that statute (now, pursuant to the above sections of the new Act,) they are in the situation, for all purposes, of goods illegally unshipped; and all persons, who assist in removing or harbouring them, knowing due entry not to have been made, are liable to the penalties imposed by the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 52, s. 44, (now, by section 232 of the Customs Consolidation Act). (²) As to computation of days, see note (⁷), p. 117.

charges, or for exportation, if they cannot be entered for home use, or are not worth the duties, and any overplus, in case of sale, shall be paid to the proprietor. The perfected entry for goods provisionally landed by bill of sight or deposited in the Queen's warehouse, must, as already stated with reference to the endorsement,⁽¹⁾ contain all the legal essentials to a valid entry for the due landing of the goods, on pain of forfeiture. Sec. 64.

ENTRY OF RE-IMPORTED GOODS BY BILL OF STORE.

Whatever may have been the origin of the term "Bill of Store," and however inexpressive it may be of the purposes for which it is used, it has acquired, as appears by the requirements of the section under consideration, a distinct statutable signification, and the name is retained as a designation familiar to the mercantile world. By this section re-imported British goods are, as regards duty and the general conditions of their admission into the United Kingdom, to be dealt with as foreign. They may, however, be entered as British. 1st, provided, they are re-imported within ten years after their exportation; and 2ndly, provided, they have not changed hands, or, in other words, have continued the property of the original exporter, until the time of entry. In either case the entry is called a bill of store.⁽²⁾ To this general

(1) Vide sec. 62, and note (?), p. 122.

(2) The course to be pursued in this case is, for the reimporter to give to the searcher the particulars of the goods exported and reimported, and request a bill of store, which the searcher will furnish in the following form:

privilege of re-importation of goods as British, there are some exceptions; the following goods being on re-importation deemed in all respects foreign.

Corn, grain, meal, flour, and hops.

Goods for which any drawback of Excise shall have been received on exportation, unless by special permission of the Commissioners of Customs and on repayment of such drawback.

Goods for which a bill of store cannot be issued, as required by the Commissioners, with the exception, but, by their permission, of remnants of British goods. Sec. 65.

GENERAL CONDITIONS AS TO ENTRIES.

On the entry of goods in every instance, duplicate entries are to be delivered by the party making entry, the number required (') being in the discretion of the officer of Customs. For the greater facility of transcription, sums and numbers may in those duplicates be expressed in figures. Sec. 86.

The re-importer endorses the bill, as follows; and signs the declaration at the foot in the presence of the Collector.

A. B., Collector.

The bill of store thus indorsed, is sent to the landing officer, who, if he finds the goods correspond with the endorsement, delivers them. When a bill of store cannot be taken out, it may be dispensed with, on declaration, that the goods have not changed hands, if the value do not exceed £50.

(f) The number of duplicates at present required in practice varies as stated in the notes on each section relating to entries, viz., Secs. 55, 58, 60 and 62, pages 116, 119, 120 and 122.

Any person entering goods and wilfully failing to comply with the regulations as to entry is liable to a penalty of £20. Sec. 67.

No entry or warrant for the landing of any goods will be valid, unless it properly describes the goods by the denominations and with the characters and circumstances, according to which such goods are charged with duty or may be imported whether for home consumption, for warehousing, or for exportation only ⁽¹⁾. Sec. 68.

Goods concealed in packages, landed in pursuance of any entry, are, with the other contents of the package, forfeited, as also, goods taken out of any ship or warehouse without entry. Sec. 69.

PASSENGERS' BAGGAGE.

No entry is required in the case of passengers' baggage—which may be examined, landed and delivered in accordance with the Customs regulations; ⁽²⁾ and (by section 86,) under the care or authority of the proper officers, in default of which it will be forfeited. But, if any prohibited or uncustomed goods be found concealed in such baggage, either before or after landing, they will, together with the other contents of the package, be forfeited. ⁽³⁾ Sec. 69.

⁽²⁾ Although the exemption of baggage from entry prior to examination, landing and delivery, has been, in practice, permitted by the Board of Customs, it is, by the above section, for the first time recognized by statute. The object of this distinction in favour of passengers' baggage over goods generally is to promote the convenience of travellers, to whom the speedy delivery of their wearing apparel, &c. is an object. But, as baggage without proper supervision is a convenient vehicle for smuggling, it is liable, in common with other goods, to that restriction, which interdicts removal from the ship, quay, or landing place, without the presence or authority of the officers, (vide sec. 86;) and, though in strictness of law, baggage loses its claim to this exemption, if it contain other goods, a liberal discretion is given by the Board to the officers, so that, except where the dutiable contents are excessive, or may be fairly regarded as merchandise, provision is made for payment of duty at the landing place, without obliging the traveller to make due entry.

⁽³⁾ Any person denying, on being questioned by the proper officer, the possession of foreign goods, afterwards found on his person or in his possession, is liable to a penalty of treble the value, as well as the forfeiture of the goods. Sec. 229.

SURPLUS STORES.

Surplus stores not merchandize, nor excessive, may, by permission of the officers of Customs, be entered for private use, subject to the same rules and duties as merchandize, or may be entered and warehoused by the master, owner, purser, or other officer, or by any passenger of the ship, to whom they belong for future use as ships' stores, although not legally importable as merchandise. (1) Sec. 70.

(1) Goods brought as stores are, by the general rule, applying to restrictions on importation, undistinguishable from other goods. Hence, but for the relief which may be afforded under this section, they would be placed in a position of some difficulty, for, it will be seen on reference to section 74, that when goods are not entered and landed within the prescribed time after arrival, they may be placed under surveillance on board the ship, or removed by the officers to the Queen's Warehouse, and, as is generally the case with stores, if in illegal sized packages, they would not be entitled to entry, but, under the smuggling clauses, would be liable to forfeiture. Therefore, to remedy this inconvenience, without disturbing the general rule of law, a discretion is here given to the officers, to permit the entry of stores, if not excessive, subject to the same duties and regulations, as merchandize. If not so entered and landed, the officers may, by sec. 74, remain in charge of goods on board the ship, and detain her until the expense is paid, or may remove them to the Queen's Warehouse; and by sec. 48, p. 108, if he allow them to remain on board the ship, which is commonly permitted, where she is likely to require them in due course for another voyage outwards, he may also place them, for greater security, under seal. It is obvious, that such regulations are indispensable, inasmuch as stores are usually in convenient packages for conveying ashore, and the discretion is properly vested in the Customs, as a general permission to bring illegal sized packages, as stores, would be open to abuse, and form an available pretext for bringing excessive quantities of goods professedly as stores, in packages adapted for smuggling.

Under the pre-existing law, ship's stores were only permitted to be warehoused for the use of the same ship; they may now be warehoused as ship's stores generally, and applied to the use of any ship, this alteration having been made in conformity with the relaxation granted by B. O. 1835. Sections 136 and 138 contain special provisions as to stores of spirits and tobacco for Her Majesty's ships.

ENTRIES BY AGENTS, &c.

In the agency ports⁽¹⁾ as they may be designated, the cense⁽²⁾ alone will not enable the agent without the authority of the party interested to transact any business relating to the clearance of any ship, goods, or baggage. If any person not being licensed or indeed any person whether a licensed agent or not, or any duly appointed clerk of such agent shall, unless authorized by the proprietor or consignee of the goods, act as such, in any of those ports, he is liable to a penalty of £20.

But, no such penalty is to attach to persons acting under the direction of the Dock Companies; nor to persons authorized by law to pass entries; nor to merchants, importers, or consignees, acting on their own account; nor to any clerk or servant exclusively employed by any mercantile house or firm. Sec. 71.

Any person applying to, on behalf of any other person, an officer of Customs to transact business may be required to produce a written authority from the principal, without which the officer may refuse to transact such business. Sec. 72.

CUSTOMS' SAMPLES.

The last provision of a miscellaneous nature, with relation to entries, is that, which empowers the officers of Customs to take samples of goods either for ascertaining the duties or for such other purpose as may be authorized by the Commissioners of Customs⁽³⁾. Sec. 73.

TIME FOR ENTERING AND LANDING IMPORTED GOODS.

It would be attended with the greatest possible inconvenience to the Customs service, if some time were not prescribed, within which goods imported should be entered and landed. The time prescribed is fourteen days⁽⁴⁾ from the vessels' arrival, or such

If the principal portion of the cargo of a vessel be discharged within the time allowed, the officers may in like manner convey the residue to the Queen's warehouse ⁽²⁾. So also at any time after the arrival of the ship, although the fourteen days may not have expired, small packages remaining on board, unentered, may

All goods, except baggage or stores, are allowed three clear days rent free.

Passengers' baggage, and surplus stores may remain a week rent free, after which, if not cleared, rent is payable from the day they were deposited.

If the Board's orders for the delivery of goods in the Queen's warehouse, seized or detained, be not complied with, and the goods taken away by the parties within fourteen days, rent is thenceforth chargeable. Derelict goods in the Queen's warehouse are free of rent, until claimed or otherwise disposed

But, if the goods be of a perishable description, the sale may take place immediately and the proceeds be applied in like manner. Ib

Fractions of weeks not exceeding three days are not charged, but if exceeding three days a week's rent is charged.—G.O. 5th December, 1851.

⁽¹⁾ Passengers' baggage is allowed by the Board to remain six months, and surplus stores, twelve months.

⁽²⁾ The quarantine laws were consolidated by 6 Geo. IV. c. 78, of which the following is a brief abstract.

Sec. 23. Empowers the officer of Customs to release vessels after quarantine.

DETENTION OF IMPORTING SHIP FOR CHARGES OF WATCHING.

If from inexcusable dilatoriness in the discharge of the cargo of any ship, the Crown be put to expense, it is reasonable, that some means of indemnity should be afforded, and for this purpose the detention of the ship is authorized, until the charges incurred by the Crown (after the lapse of the fourteen days) in watching and guarding the ship and cargo be paid ⁽²⁾. A new provision, however, 100 tons from sailing from the United Kingdom, or the Channel Islands, until sufficient bond, with certain conditions, be given by the master.

Secs. 28 and 29. Power to consuls and others to administer oaths—false swearing, or procuration thereof, to be deemed perjury.

Sec. 30. Commissioners of Customs may appoint superintendents of quarantine, whose duties may, in certain cases, be performed by officers of Customs.

Sec. 31. Publication of orders in Council.

Secs. 32 and 33. Recovery and application of penalties.

Sec. 34. The law officers may stay proceedings by officers of Customs.

Secs. 35, 36 and 37. Relate to proofs in suits for penalties—defendant's pleas, costs of suit, and limitation of actions.

⁽¹⁾ It is obvious that the master could not in the majority of instances, for want of information, pass a perfect entry, and the Commissioners have permitted in such cases imperfect entries, which are necessarily dealt with on the same principle as sight entries, which must afterwards be perfected, in default of which, the goods are liable to forfeiture, under sec. 64. These provisions are somewhat analogous to those contained in 9 & 10 Vic. cap. 399, made perpetual by 10 & 11 Vic. c. 200 (London Legal Quays Acts,) under which, the owner or master of any ship lying alongside any of the legal quays in London, may, at the expiration of forty-eight hours after report, enter and land the goods. This new provision was introduced into the act on the suggestion of some of the ship owners in London, during its progress through parliament, and consequently with little time for consideration. It will, however, be observed, that this privilege, unlike the former, is neither absolute, nor confined to London, nor exercisable there any more than at any other port or place, without the sanction of the Commissioners, so that, should any doubt arise as to the policy or justice of the measure, its operation may be restrained or extended, as circumstances may require, either with reference to localities or conditions.

⁽²⁾ As it is the duty of the importer to enter and land the goods, it may, on a superficial view, appear arbitrary to detain the ship, instead of attaching

The above charge, irrespective of the expense, to which parties are also liable, of removing the goods to the Queen's warehouse, should that become necessary.

DAMAGED GOODS.

Upon a similar principle of justice, where dutiable goods have been damaged on the voyage, an abatement should be made to the importer or consignee; but, to entitle himself to this abatement he must comply with three requisites of the Act.

1st. the claim must be made on the first examination of the goods ;⁽¹⁾

2ndly. it must be made in the manner and form prescribed by the Commissioners ;

3rdly. satisfactory proof must be given, that the damage was sustained after the shipment, and before the landing, of the goods.⁽²⁾
Sec 76.

GOODS DERELICT, &c.

In the case of goods derelict, jetsam and flotsam, with respect to which it is generally impossible to ascertain the place the goods, and thus hold the owner responsible to the Crown for the losses of the importer or consignee. A moment's reflection will, however, show that great injustice would result from a reversal of the course adopted. Suppose for instance, that A, an importer, passes his entry immediately after the report of the ship, and is desirous of landing his goods, but, that happening to be at the bottom of the ship's hold, they are inaccessible, until those of B, or any number of consignees, which are stowed over them, are discharged; and that such discharge is protracted, until the prescribed time expires, and expenses begin to accrue. It is obvious, that to charge these expenses against A, in addition to the inconvenience he has already sustained by the procrastination of B, and the other consignees, would be unjust; but the ship-owner has his remedy against the negligent parties for any loss he may sustain at their hands, and therefore the law works no injustice upon him, whilst the contrary course would punish the innocent for the guilty.

of their manufacture, growth or production, the Act adopts the presumption, that they are foreign and liable to the duties payable on foreign goods of the like description: but this presumption may be rebutted by satisfactory evidence of their being of the growth or manufacture of some country, whence goods may be admitted at less than the foreign duty or altogether free: and if liable to duty, that they are (as in the case of damaged goods) entitled to an abatement.⁽¹⁾ Sec. 76.

(1) The law as to the rights of owners, the Crown, and others in respect of wrecked goods is, except as to Scotland, embodied in the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 99, by which the antecedent Acts, viz., 12 Anne stat. 2 c. 18, 26 Geo. 2 c. 19, 49 Geo. 3 c. 122, 53 Geo. 3 c. 87, and 1 & 2 Geo. 4 c. 75 were repealed.

Scotland by the new Act was exempted from its provisions, and doubts were entertained whether the pre-existing Acts were not repealed as to Scotland, in which case that part of the kingdom would have been out of the pale of the wreck and salvage laws, to remedy which, an explanatory clause was introduced into the Act of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 95 sec. 14, by which the repeal was declared not to extend to Scotland, and that clause is saved by this Consolidation Act, vide section 358 and Schedule A, so that wreck and salvage in Scotland are governed by laws different from the general law with respect to the other parts of the kingdom. Under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 99 sec. 4, Lords of Manors and others claiming wreck or derelict goods must give notice of claim to the receiver of Droits, residing within or nearest to the manor or district in which the right is claimed. By section 5 persons who find or are possessed of such goods must make a written report thereof to the nearest receiver, or, where there is none, to the collector or comptroller of Customs, and place them at the disposal of those officers, under penalties. By section 6 the receiver or officer of Customs, first obtaining a Magistrate's warrant, may search for, seize, and detain any goods not reported, and will be entitled to salvage on goods so seized, and every Customs officer is required to report such seizures to the nearest receiver. By section 7 every receiver making a seizure or receiving such report is bound, within 48 hours, to send a correct account of them to the chief officer of Customs of the nearest port, and, if the value amounts to £20, a report is also to be made to the Secretary of Lloyds to be by him posted up for inspection. Section 8 to 13 contains provisions relating to the disposal of the property as between owners, Lords of Manors, and the Admiralty. By section 14 Justices, Mayors, other public officers, and officers of Customs and Excise, may summon persons to aid shipwrecked vessels, and impress boats belonging to British ships, and waggons, carts and horses near the place. By section 15, to prevent confusion amongst salvors, they are required, in the first place, to conform to the directions of the owner or master of the vessel. Secondly, to those

MODE OF ASSESSING DAMAGE.

The damage is to be assessed in each of the foregoing cases by the officers of Customs, if competent to the task, but if not, or if the Commissioners of Customs or the principal officers of the port entertain any doubt upon the subject, they may take the opinion of any two disinterested merchants as to the extent of the damage, whereupon they may make an abatement not exceeding three-fourths of the duty originally chargeable on the goods. of the receiver, and in the absence of the owner, master, or receiver, to those of the following officers:—first, the officers of Customs or Coast Guard; next, to those of the Excise; thirdly, to those of the sheriff or his deputy, and lastly, of any Justice of the peace, under penalty of £50 for disobedience. By section 17, owners or occupiers of lands or piers adjoining the coast are bound under special penalties to allow such officers and persons to pass and repass over their lands, (if there be no road equally convenient) for saving wrecks cast ashore, or the lives of those on board; but compensation is to be made for damage, the amount of which is to be ascertained in the same manner as claims for salvage. The other sections relate to the proceedings in respect of wreck and salvage, particularly affecting the Customs.

It may here be observed with reference to the antiquated terms derelict, jetsam, flotsam, &c., used in this section, that they have a recognised legal meaning, for which reason they are retained.

Derelict is anything forsaken or left, or wilfully cast away. 2 Nels. abr. 903.

Jetsam is where a ship is wrecked and the goods are cast into the sea, and there sink and remain under water. 1 Bl. Com. 292.

Flotsam is where a ship is sunk or cast away, and the goods are found floating upon the sea. 5 Rep. 106.

Wreck signifies such goods as after shipwreck are cast upon the land by the sea and left there within some county, for they are not wrecks so long as they remain at sea in the jurisdiction of the Admiralty. 2 Inst. 167.

Lagan is another term occasionally used with reference to goods left at sea, though not mentioned in the present section. It signifies goods lying or sunk in the sea, and tied to a cork or buoy, in order to be found again. 5 Rep. 106. Lagan is used in old authorities to denote the right of the Chief Lord of the Fee to take goods cast on shore by the violence of the sea, &c. Bracton lib. 3 cap. 2.

flour, opium, sugar, cocoa, oranges, tea, coffee, pepper, tobacco, currants, raisins, wine and figs. Sec. 76.

IMPORTERS CLAIMING BENEFIT UNDER CERTIFICATES OF PRODUCTION.

In order to entitle any goods imported from the British Possessions abroad, to any benefit accruing from the distinction (except as to goods from the Presidencies of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay,) certificates of the place where they were taken on board, and of the due clearance of the ship from such place, with an account of the goods, must be delivered, before entry, to the collector or comptroller of the port of importation. These certificates must be procured at the place of shipment from the proper officer there. Sec. 77.

TREASURY RULES AS TO CERTIFICATES OF PRODUCTION.

The Commissioners of the Treasury are empowered to modify or extend the provisions of the foregoing section, by requiring certificates of production upon the exportation of goods from any British possession or other place, embracing therefore the exceptional one with reference to India if necessary, and to frame regulations with regard to such certificates generally. By this section goods, unaccompanied by certificates when required, are expressly deemed to be foreign and liable to duty as such.

For the information of the public, orders of the Treasury, in such cases, are required to be published in the London and Dublin Gazettes three times within three months after their date. Sec. 78.

CERTIFICATES OF PRODUCTION OF BRITISH POSSESSIONS' SUGAR AND SPIRITS.

As the differential duties in favour of British Possessions' sugar will cease on the 5th of July, 1854, by their assimilation under the Tariff, these provisions, as respects that article, will become inoperative by that time.

SUGAR AND SPIRITS.

On the importation into the United Kingdom, of sugar or spirits, purporting to be the produce of British America or the Mauritius, the master of the importing ship is required to deliver to the collector or comptroller, a certificate, from the proper officer of the port of shipment, as prescribed by section 176, of proof of produce, place of production and quantity and quality, with the number and denominations of the packages and the names of the ship and master. Sec. 79.

EAST INDIA SUGAR.

The certificate prescribed by section 178, is required, testifying that declaration had been duly made, that such sugar was British Possessions' produce. Sec. 80.

BRITISH INDIA SUGAR, WAREHOUSED AT THE CAPE.

The limits of the East India Company's Charter, by the interpretation clause, section 357, include the Cape of Good Hope and all places and seas eastward thereof to the Straits of Magellan. Sugar the produce of British possessions within those limits, imported directly into the Cape of Good Hope, accompanied by the certificate of production and warehoused there according to colonial regulations, may be admitted into the United Kingdom at the same rate of duty as if imported direct from the place of production, if accompanied by a certificate from the proper officer of Customs at the Cape, setting forth the particulars of the importation, the warehousing there, the substance of the certificate of production received there and the exportation thence. This certificate must be delivered by the master to the collector or comptroller of the port on arrival in the United Kingdom. Sec. 81.

PRODUCE OF THE CHANNEL ISLANDS.

It will be seen on reference to the interpretation clause, section 357, that the Islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, and Sark, are to be understood by the term "Channel Islands," and by which they are designated throughout the Act.

The following goods may be imported into the United Kingdom from the Channel Islands free of Customs duties.

Goods, the growth of the Channel Islands.—Goods manufactured there from materials, the growth of those Islands.—Or, from materials, not dutiable in the United Kingdom.—Or, from materials, the duty on which has been paid in the United Kingdom, and upon which no drawback has subsequently been granted.

But, such goods are chargeable with an amount equal to any Excise duties payable on the like kind of goods, the produce or manufacture of that part of the United Kingdom⁽¹⁾ into which they are imported, or upon any materials from which they are manufactured. Goods manufactured in the Channel Islands from other materials are, on importation, deemed foreign. Sec. 82.

By section 157, goods liable to any duties of Excise cannot be unladen without the authority of the officers of Excise.

To entitle goods, the produce of any of those islands, to the benefit of the distinction, the master of the importing ship must, before entry, deliver to the collector or comptroller of the port of importation a certificate of produce from the authorities of the island, for which, by section 180, provision is made. Sec. 83.

The like course must be pursued on the importation of wine the produce of any British possessions abroad, for proof of the produce of which, by sec. 179, provision is made. Sec. 84.

UNSHIPPING AND EXAMINING GOODS.

Thus far the Statute has prescribed the course to be adopted with respect to merchandize on arrival at the port of destination, thereby laying the foundation for the provisions, which next invite attention, viz.:—those which relate to the unshipping, landing, and examination of goods, operations necessarily devolving on the merchant, save as to the supervision of the Customs' officers, and such for the most part as would be indispensably incident to the importation and disposal of goods, if the machinery of the Customs had no existence. Under any circumstances, it rests with the importer to unship and land his own goods. If entered for home use, the officers are always ready to examine and deliver them without charge. If entered for the warehouse, it is by the importer's own choice, that they are so deposited, and the sorting, lotting, sampling, &c., which follow, are, irrespective of the Customs, essential to the sale and disposal of the goods by the owner, and the same observation equally applies to weighing, marking and numbering. These operations form the basis of account between him and the warehousekeeper, and are necessary for his own information, as to the goods, and for the preservation of their identity, until he has occasion to dispose of them. No charge is imposed for the supervision of these operations by the Customs officers, nor is any delay created by it, the account for the Crown being taken concurrently with that of the warehousekeeper, and this account is solely for the security of duties due, but, deferred at the election of the importer, for his own convenience.

EXPENSE OF UNSHIPPING, LANDING, &C.

The expense of unshipping, carrying, landing, bringing to the place of examination, weighing, opening, repacking, bulking, sorting, lotting,⁽¹⁾ marking, numbering, and depositing of goods, generally is to be borne by the importer, as also therefore the expense of piling, sorting, framing, and placing timber or wood goods liable to duty by measurement, in such manner as the Customs may deem necessary for taking the account. Where timber is measured in bulk it is to be measured to the full extent of the pile, and without any allowance for interstices; but, battens, boards, deals, and planks, exceeding twenty-one feet in length may be measured by the piece, and the account of them taken separately. Sec. 85.

GOODS LANDED CONTRARY TO LAW, FORFEITED.

Goods are liable to forfeiture in any of the following cases:—

If removed from any ship, quay, &c., previous to being examined

(1) Under section 90, the Commissioners may authorise the bulking, sorting, lotting, &c.

by the Customs officers, unless under their care or authority.—If carried into a warehouse, though entered to be warehoused, unless under the care or authority of the Customs officers.—If carried to the warehouse by any persons, or by any other than directed by the Customs officers. Sec. 86.

Any person concerned in such illegal removal is, under section 233, liable to a penalty of treble the value of the goods, or £100, at the election of the Commissioners.

LANDING ACCOUNT OF GOODS WAREHOUSED.

On the entry and landing of goods to be warehoused or within such period as shall be prescribed by the Commissioners, the landing waiter is to take a particular account of such goods,⁽¹⁾ either at the quay, where they have been landed, or in the warehouse, if they be goods of which the account is permitted to be taken there.⁽²⁾ He is also to cause each package to be marked with the particulars of its contents and to record in a book under the name of the import ship and of the person in whose name the goods are entered, the marks, numbers and contents of each package—the description of the goods—and the warehouse, and place in such warehouse, where they are deposited, and certify finally that the entry and warehousing of the goods is complete.⁽³⁾ If the goods are removed from the proper place of examination before they are examined and certified, they are to be deemed goods not duly entered or warehoused, and are forfeited. Sec. 87.

Under section 233, any person concerned in such illegal removal is liable to a penalty of treble the value of the goods, or £100, at the election of the Commissioners.

(1) The officer may, under section 73, take samples of the goods.

(2) Vide section 90.

(3) This official certificate will operate as a safeguard against the forfeiture of the goods described therein; and, on the other hand, any goods which may be found unprotected by such certificate, will be liable to forfeiture, as the natural consequence of having been either surreptitiously landed and not duly warehoused, or not brought to account either by design, or through the negligence of the importer or his agents.

DUTIES ON WAREHOUSED GOODS GOVERNED BY LANDING ACCOUNT.

When the goods come to be delivered upon due entry,⁽¹⁾ the duties are to be ascertained and paid according to the account taken on the landing and warehousing, without abatement, except as subsequently provided.⁽²⁾ Sec. 88.

DEPOSIT OF WAREHOUSED GOODS.

All warehoused goods are to be deposited in the packages in which they are imported. But, goods permitted to be skipped on the quay,⁽³⁾ or sorted, packed or repacked in the warehouse⁽⁴⁾, may be deposited in the packages, in which they were, at the time of taking the landing account; and if they be not deposited—or, if any alteration be made in the goods—or, in the manner in which they are packed,—or, if they be removed from the room in the warehouse, in which they were deposited, without the sanction of the officers of Customs, except for delivery under the proper warrant, they shall be forfeited. Sec. 89.

Under section 232, persons concerned in so dealing with the goods are liable to a penalty of treble the value or £300, at the election of the Commissioners.

DIRECTIONS OF COMMISSIONERS FOR DEALING WITH GOODS AND TAKING ACCOUNT IN THE WAREHOUSE.

The Commissioners of Customs may give directions as to what goods may be skipped on the quay, or what may be sorted, packed or repacked in the warehouse, or of which the account

(²) The exceptions will be found in sections 97 and 129 which have reference to accidental loss, and sections 110 and 112, which permit the assessment of duty on the delivery, weights, &c., unless the deficiency, if any, arise from unfair means.

may be taken in the warehouse, and may prescribe the time and conditions.⁽¹⁾ Sec 90.

PRACTICAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR ENTRY INWARDS.

Thus far, the provisions relating to entry, landing and warehousing as enacted by the Legislature have been stated ; but the act being silent as to the practical details to be observed in passing entries, &c., some remarks as to these may be worthy of attention.

As soon as the master of the importing ship has delivered his report to the collector, the operation of the importer or consignee may properly be said to commence. The report contains, as already mentioned in p. 109, et seq., an account of the cargo, made out by the master, or, the broker of the ship for him, from the bills of lading, &c., which accompany the ship, and the importer or consignee in due course usually receives duplicates of the bills of lading, invoices or such other information or advice relative to his portion of the cargo, as will generally enable him to prepare his entries, or in case of inability in the first instance to perfect them, the bill of sight will be available. With reference to goods already imported and warehoused, the proprietor possesses by the process already described all necessary particulars, so that, whether he has to enter his goods from the ship, for home use, or for the warehouse, or, being warehoused, for delivery, he is in a situation to pass his entry, and all he has to do, so far as the Crown is concerned, is as follows ; 1st. To attend at the Custom House⁽²⁾ and deliver his entry in the form or to

(1) Vide also sections 85 and 105 as to bulking, sorting, repacking, &c.

(2) If in London, he will go to the Long Room of the Custom House, for this purpose, and deliver his entry according to the nature of the goods, at one of the following seats :—

At the first branch, if for dutiable goods generally, from the ship.

At the second branch, if for goods from the warehouse.

At the third branch, if for tea or coffee.

At the fourth branch, if for free goods, or for the warehouse, or by bill of sight.

At the outports, the entries are usually delivered at one particular seat in the Custom House, generally too well known to require being mentioned here, or, at all events, easily ascertained on a moment's enquiry.

the effect required by the Act with the necessary duplicates as previously explained.

2ndly. If the goods be dutiable, to pay down the duties, if in London, at the Receiver General's office, at the west end of the Long Room, if at an outport, to the collector of Customs or receiver there.

On entering goods, free of duty, or dutiable goods to be warehoused, the importer receives an order at once, for the landing and examination of the goods, and proceeds with it to the station named in his entry, unships and lands the goods and when passed by the officers there, takes them into his own care or warehouses them according to the entry.

On the entry of dutiable goods for home use, from the ship, the warrant for delivery is transmitted from the Customs to the proper officer at the station ⁽¹⁾ where the importer lands the goods, which, when examined, are forthwith delivered to him.

When, for want of information, the importer has to resort to a bill of sight; he obtains that document with an order for landing and examination on application at the Custom House.⁽²⁾ The importer then proceeds to land the goods, which are thereupon examined by the officer in his presence, and with the information thus obtained, he converts the bill of sight into a perfect entry, as hereinbefore explained (p. 122), by endorsing the particulars upon it, and if the goods be dutiable, pays down the duties at the Custom House, in the same manner as if he had proceeded there with sufficient information in the first instance. Should it be found by the landing officer, on this examination under bill of sight, that the goods are not dutiable, the importer by endorsing the bill of sight, converts it into a perfect entry for free goods, and delivers it to the officer, who thereupon discharges the goods out of the Crown's custody. (1)

(1) The warrants are forwarded every half-hour from the Long Room in London to the officer of the registrar of the station named in the entry, where the importer receives an order for the landing and examination of the goods, unless the importer has availed himself of the privileges granted by the several recent minutes of the Board of taking up the landing orders in the Long Room at the time of making the entry.

(2) This bill of sight will be obtained at the "Report Office," Long Room, and the order upon it from the registrar at the adjoining seat.

If the ship be lying in the stream, or at a distance from the wharf or station at which the importer desires to land the goods, and they have to be conveyed by lighter or other conveyance from the ship to the station, an officer is required to accompany them; but, as already stated, the unshipment, lighterage, landing, and in fact all operations connected with the carriage of the goods are performed by or at the expense of the importer, and in the manner he may deem most convenient. No charge whatever is made by the Customs for accompanying or examining the goods, nor indeed for anything, except the actual duty due to the Crown.

WAREHOUSING REGULATIONS.

The processes by which goods are duly warehoused having been described, next, in order follow the regulations, which more particularly relate to internal management, the security of the goods deposited and the incidental circumstances, by which they are affected.

IMPROPERLY STOWING OR NOT PRODUCING GOODS.

If any warehouse keeper neglect to stow the goods, so as to afford easy access to every package, or, if he fail, on the request of any officer of Customs, to produce any goods deposited in his warehouse, he is liable to a penalty of £5, in respect of each package. Secs 91 & 92.

BY WHAT ACTS WAREHOUSED GOODS ARE FORFEITED.

Warehoused goods are forfeited in the following cases.

If not duly warehoused according to entry,—if being duly warehoused, they be fraudulently concealed in, or removed from, the warehouse,—or, abstracted from any package,—or transferred from one package to another—or otherwise transferred for the purpose of illegal removal or concealment. Sec. 93.

Persons concerned in such illegal proceedings are, under section, 232, liable to a penalty of treble the value of the goods or £100, at the election of the Commissioners.

(1) In all cases, on the delivery of goods, an "Out-of-a-charge note," or a "Locker's order," is given by the officer.—B. B. Nov. 20, 1843.

IMPORTER GAINING CLANDESTINE ACCESS TO WAREHOUSE.

To guard against any improper interference on the part of any proprietor of warehoused goods, clandestine access to the goods by him or his servants, subjects the party to a penalty of £100. Sec. 94.

REMOVAL OF WAREHOUSED GOODS WITHOUT ENTRY.

If goods be removed from any warehouse without due entry, the warehouse keeper is forthwith to pay the duty on such goods ;⁽¹⁾ and persons concerned in removing, destroying, or embezzling them, will be guilty of a misdemeanor and punishable accordingly. But, if the person guilty of such removal, destruction or embezzlement be a Customs officer, and be prosecuted to conviction by the importer or proprietor of the goods, the duty on the goods will be remitted, and, with the sanction of the Treasury, such importer or proprietor will be compensated for his loss by order of the Commissioners of Customs.⁽²⁾ Sec. 95.

In the event of fire or other inevitable accident, the proprietor of warehoused goods will have no claim on the Customs for any loss he may sustain by such fire or accident. Sec. 96.

WHEN THE DUTIES ON WAREHOUSED GOODS MAY BE REMITTED.

Contra-distinguishing ordinary accidents from the inevitable visitations of fire, flood, tempest, &c., duties may be remitted by the Commissioners of Customs on goods warehoused, or entered to be warehoused, or entered to be delivered from the warehouse, when lost or destroyed by unavoidable accident—on ship board,—in landing,—in receiving into the warehouse,—or in the warehouse⁽³⁾. Sec. 97.

REMOVAL OF WAREHOUSED GOODS TO OTHER PORTS, &c.

The advantages of the warehousing system would be materially

(1) Goods so removed, if discovered, are also, under section 128, liable to forfeiture.

(2) The general offence of embezzlement, by officers, of monies or securities for money belonging to the public, is punishable under 2 Wm. IV. c. 4, s. 1, passed for prevention of frauds by persons in the public service.

(3) Similar provisions are contained in section 129 as to goods on delivery out of the warehouse.

curtailed if the importer of goods, once warehoused, were limited in his operations to the place where they were first bonded. He could not transfer them to any other port or dispose of them (except for exportation) without foregoing the privilege of deferring the payment of duty until a satisfactory market could be found for his merchandize, and losing the advantage, in many cases highly prized, of selling in bond. To guard against such an impediment to the operations of commerce, the law authorises the transference of goods from one warehouse to any other in the same or any other port, and so on, from time to time, as often as the owner may desire, by delivering to the officer of Customs a "request note,"⁽¹⁾ particularizing the goods to be removed, the name of the warehouse or port, to which they are to be conveyed, and such other information as may be necessary. Sec. 93.

IN CASE OF REMOVAL, THE REMOVER TO GIVE BOND.

The officer of Customs at the port of removal is to transmit an account of the goods to the officer at the port of destination, and the remover is to give bond, either at the port of removal or destination, with one surety, in a sum equal to the duty on the goods, for re-warehousing at the port of destination, within such time as the Commissioners shall allow. If the bond be given at the port of destination, it must be certified by the collector there to the collector at the port of removal. The bond will not be discharged, until the goods are produced and rewarehoused at the port of destination, within the time allowed; nor, in case of deficiency, until the duty thereon be paid, unless the goods are accounted for to the satisfaction of the Commissioners. Hitherto, a separate bond was required on every removal; but, to avoid such a repetition of securities, general bond may now be given, with such sureties, in such amount and with such conditions, as the Commissioners of Customs may approve⁽²⁾ for the removal of

(1) This "request note," with slight adaptations, is similar in form to the export Locker's order, p. 180.

REMOVED GOODS TO BE WAREHOUSED AS ON FIRST IMPORTATION.

Goods removed under the preceding sections are to be warehoused at the port of destination in the same manner as on first importation.⁽¹⁾ Sec. 100.

may have been removed, by the person giving the bond, in that fortnight of the previous year in which the largest amount may have been removed by him; but, should the penalty of the bond be subsequently deemed by the Board insufficient to cover the transactions of the remover, additional security will be required.

"That the bond, when taken, and until the privilege be revoked by the Board, be held to apply to the removal under the warehousing regulations of any goods belonging to the remover giving the bond, from any one port specified therein, to any other warehouse or port in the United Kingdom.

"That a bond note," (similar, with slight adaptations, to the export form given on p. 161.) "signed by the remover, or, if a firm, by one of the partners of the firm, or clerk or agent authorised by him or them, stating the goods intended to be removed, and the mode of conveyance, be delivered to the clerk of the bonds in the Long Room in London, or to the clerk who has hitherto taken security at the out-ports; that the signature to such bond note, if signed by the person entering into bond, or by the firm, if a firm, be compared with the signature of such person or firm, which is to be required at the time of entering into bond to be written in a book to be kept in the bond office for that purpose, and the signature, if that of a clerk or agent authorized by the remover or firm, is to be compared with the signature of such clerk or agent, and with the authority from the remover on whose behalf he acts, which are to be written in the book before-mentioned in the bond office, and to be acted upon, until revoked by the person giving the authority. If the signature be found correct, the bond note is to be certified and forwarded to the comptroller of accounts as his authority for the delivery of the goods.

"That a record be kept in the bond office of the general bonds entered into by different removers, and of all bond notes issued at the request of each, and the Board's attention is to be called to any extraordinary or unusual quantity of goods removed under any particular bond, in order that further security may be required, or such other steps be taken as may be deemed necessary.

"That in all cases, the due arrival or non-arrival of goods at their destination be certified to the comptroller of accounts in London, or collector and comptroller at an out-port with the least possible delay."—B. M. Nov. 24th, 1853.

(¹) Vide secs. 58 and 59 as to entry and warehousing on first importation.

WITHOUT RE-WAREHOUSING.

On the arrival of removed goods at the port of destination the remover may, if he desire it, after pro forma entry and examination for re-warehousing, enter them for exportation or home use, without actual re-warehousing; and goods so exported, or for which, on entry for home use, the duties have been paid, shall be deemed to be duly cleared from the warehouse. Sec. 101.

REMOVAL OF SPIRITS.

No spirits, which shall have been imported from parts beyond the seas into the United Kingdom and upon which a higher duty is chargeable on importation into England than into Scotland or Ireland, are to be brought from the latter countries into England; nor are any spirits, upon which a higher duty is payable on importation into Scotland than into Ireland, to be brought into Scotland from Ireland, except such as, having been duly warehoused on first importation, shall be in the warehouse at the time of removal, nor unless removed from one warehousing port to another, according to the regulations required by law ⁽¹⁾; and spirits so removed are, on entry for home consumption, liable to the duty chargeable in that part of the kingdom, into which they are removed. Spirits removed contrary hereto are forfeited, and all persons concerned in illegally removing or receiving such spirits are liable to a penalty of £100, or treble the value of such spirits, at the election of the Commissioners of Customs or Inland Revenue. Sec. 102.

WAREHOUSED GOODS TO BE CLEARED OR RE-WAREHOUSED WITHIN FIVE YEARS.

Under the pre-existing law all goods warehoused were required to be cleared within three years after the first warehousing of them, or within such further time as the Treasury should direct. In pursuance of the latter discretionary power, the period for clearance was in various ways extended, until, ultimately, by an order of the Treasury, in 1831, it was left entirely open. This system of permitting goods to remain in the warehouse for an indefinite time became the subject of complaint before the Select Committee of the House of Commons, who, in their final report, recommended the limitation to four years, but, with permission to re-warehouse on payment of the duties on any deficiencies found to exist on each quaterennial examination. This recommendation so far prevailed, as to induce the Treasury to direct its adoption, with a slight extension of the period. Hence the present law directs, that all warehoused goods shall be cleared for home use or exported at the end of five years after warehousing, or within such further period, as the Commissioners of the Treasury may direct, unless the proprietor shall re-warehouse them, as on first importation⁽¹⁾. The duties due upon any deficiency or difference between the quantity then found to exist and the quantity ascertained on the previous warehousing are to be paid together with the expenses of such examination. Sec. 103.

GOODS NOT CLEARED, &c., AS REQUIRED WITHIN THE ABOVE TIME TO BE SOLD.

If warehoused goods are not cleared, exported, or re-warehoused within the prescribed period, and the duties on the ascertained deficiencies paid, such goods may, after one month's notice to the warehouse-keeper, and with or without his consent, be sold, and the proceeds applied to the payment of the duties, warehouse rent, and charges; and the surplus, if any, is to be paid to the proprietor, or if he cannot be found, to be carried to the Crown's account, to abide his appearance or claim. If the goods be not worth the duty, they may, after similar notice, be exported or destroyed, the warehouse-keeper being held responsible for the duties on any deficiency not allowed by law. Sec. 104.

(1) From each re-warehousing, which is treated as a first warehousing on importation, a fresh period of five years commences, and as each such period expires, clearance is required as before, and subject to the same regulations.

PACKING AND REPACKING GOODS IN WAREHOUSE.

Goods in the warehouse may, for the preservation, sale, shipment or disposal thereof, be sorted, separated, packed, repacked or altered with the sanction of the Commissioners of Customs, and under such regulations and restrictions, as they may, from time to time, prescribe. But, when repacked, it must be in one of the two following ways, viz. :

1st. in the packages in which they were imported,—or, 2nd. in packages allowed by the Commissioners of Customs, not less in size, if the goods are for exportation or removal to another warehouse, than is required by law on the importation of such goods.⁽¹⁾ Sec. 105.

BOTTLING AND MIXING WINES ⁽²⁾ AND SPIRITS.

Also, with the sanction of, and subject to such regulations and restrictions as, the Commissioners of Customs may direct—wines and spirits may be dealt with in the warehouse as follows :—

They may be drawn off and bottled in reputed quart or pint bottles, but, for exportation only. Brandy may be drawn off and mixed with wine in the proportion of ten gallons of brandy to one hundred of wine.—Casks of wine or spirits may be filled up from other casks in the same warehouse.—Wine may be racked off from the lees.—Wines of the same sort may be mixed, provided all import brands be erased from the casks ; if, however, the whole of the wine so mixed be of the same brand, such brands need not be erased. Ib.

RESIDUES ON REPACKING INSUFFICIENT FOR LEGAL PACKAGES TO BE CLEARED.

After the above processes of packing, repacking, drawing off,

(¹) Goods for shipment as stores are allowed by the Board to be put into convenient sized packages for the purpose.

(²) By T. O. 28th June, 1853, wines in bond may be fortified by the admixture of geropiga in the same proportions as to strength and under the same regulations as brandy. It may here be observed, that under the same order, geropiga or other liquids, containing more than 33 per cent. of proof spirit, are to be charged with the same import duty, as sweetened spirits.

and separation of original packages, there will, of necessity, often remain some residue or surplus, insufficient to make up a legal package, in which case, it is provided, that the duties on such surplus or residue, if consisting of goods admissible for home consumption, shall be immediately paid, and such surplus or residue be delivered for home use accordingly. Ib.

REFUSE FROM RE-PACKING MAY BE DESTROYED AND DUTY REMITTED.

On the request of the importer or proprietor any refuse, damage or surplus, resulting from the operations of separation and repacking, and on similar request, any goods, which may not be worth the duty, may be destroyed by the permission of the Commissioners, who may remit the duty on such goods ⁽¹⁾. Ib.

SAMPLES OF WAREHOUSED GOODS.

Samples may be taken by the importer or proprietor of warehoused goods, in such manner and to such extent as may be allowed by the Commissioners of Customs,⁽²⁾ with or without entry and without payment of duty, except so far as the same may eventually become payable, as on a deficiency of the original quantity. Ib.

Prior to any of the foregoing operations in the warehouse under section 105, such notice as the Commissioners may prescribe, is to be given by the importer or proprietor. Ib.

THE DUTY ON PACKAGES USED FOR REPACKING TO BE PAID.

No foreign packages or materials are to be used in repacking goods in the warehouse, except such as have been used in the importation of goods, or upon which the duty has been paid. Sec. 106.

GOODS IN WAREHOUSE MAY BE TAKEN OUT ON CONDITIONS.

The Commissioners of Customs may permit goods to be taken out of the warehouse without payment of duty,—for such purpose or period, as they may deem expedient,—in such quantities as they may approve,—under such regulations and restrictions as may be prescribed by them,—and with such security by bond as they may direct, for the due return thereof or payment of the duty due thereon. Sec. 107.

(2) The taking of official samples is provided for by section 73, p. 128.

SUGAR MAY BE DELIVERED TO BONDED SUGAR HOUSES FOR REFINEMENT.

Where bonded sugar houses are approved⁽¹⁾ the officers of Customs may deliver to the proprietors or occupiers any quantity of sugar, on due entry, for refining under the locks of the Crown, for removal to the Isle of Man,⁽²⁾ or for exportation; sugar so

(1) The power to approve bonded sugar-houses has already been treated of under section 10, p. 79.

(2) A doubt has been raised, whether sugar refined in bond and removed to the Isle of Man might not be brought back and admitted into consumption in England, it may therefore be observed, that, the rule being, that sugar should only be thus refined for exportation, it could not under this Act have been removed to the Isle of Man as an export, (as section 346 declares the Isle of Man, for Customs purposes, part of the United Kingdom,) but for this exception in favour of that Isle, to facilitate the supply of refined sugar for consumption there; if not delivered there, the object would not be attained. Such an importation into that Isle is merely a removal coastwise, and, on arrival at its destination, it could only be re-warehoused there on the same conditions as were applicable to it in the warehouse of the port of removal. If delivered in the Isle, it cannot be brought back, for under section 347, foreign goods subject to a higher import duty in Great Britain or Ireland than in the Isle of Man, which is the case with sugar refined in bond, cannot, after being imported into that Isle and delivered out of charge of the officers there, be brought back to Great Britain or Ireland; nor, under the same section, can any foreign goods liable to higher import duty in Great Britain or Ireland than in the Isle of Man, when brought into the said Isle, though not cleared and delivered there, be carried thence into Great Britain or Ireland, until the same shall have been duly cleared for that purpose by the proper officer, nor until security by bond or otherwise shall have been given, on such conditions as the Commissioners of Customs may direct, for the due delivery thereof at some port or place in the United Kingdom, unless reported for removal in the same ship and in continuation of the voyage to some port in Great Britain or Ireland. This exception cannot apply to sugar removed from Great Britain or Ireland to the Isle of Man, inasmuch as going from the former to the latter cannot be held to be in continuance of a voyage to the former within the meaning of the Act.

delivered must be secured in such bonded sugar houses under such regulations as the Commissioners of Customs shall direct.
Ib.

On the entry of sugar to be refined in any bonded sugar house the proprietor is to give bond, in double the amount of the duty payable upon such quantity of sugar. This bond must contain a condition, that the quantity of sugar so entered shall be refined in such bonded sugar house, and that within four months from the date of the bond, the sugar so refined, and also the treacle produced by that process, shall either be removed to the Isle of Man, or be exported from such bonded sugar house, or be delivered into an approved bonded warehouse under the locks of the Crown for eventual removal or exportation. Sec. 108.

If after sugar has been refined, any other person than the refiner export or remove it, a distinct bond under the 120th section of the Act, must be given by him for such exportation or removal.⁽¹⁾

ENTRY AND DELIVERY FROM WAREHOUSE FOR HOME CONSUMPTION AND EXPORTATION.

Warehoused goods are not to be delivered from the warehouse, except upon due entry, and under the care of the proper officers, for exportation; or on due entry and payment of the duties for home use,⁽²⁾ except goods delivered into the charge of the searchers to be shipped as stores. Sec. 109.

On entering goods to be cleared from the warehouse for home use, a bill of entry and duplicates thereof,⁽³⁾ corresponding with the entry of goods for home use from the ship, as given in note ⁽²⁾, p. 119, substituting for the words "to be warehoused, &c.," the words "warehoused by (name of party)," and adding the date of the warehousing entry,⁽⁴⁾ are to be delivered to the proper officer of Customs, to whom the duties on such goods are to be immediately paid down, according to the quantity stated in the landing account on the first entry and landing thereof,⁽¹⁾ except as to the following goods, viz., tobacco, wine, spirits, figs, currants, raisins and sugar, the duties whereon shall be charged on the quantity ascertained at the time of the delivery, unless, in case of deficiency, there be ground for supposing, that it has arisen from illegal or improper means, in which case the officer of Customs is to make no further abatement for loss, than what may fairly be considered to have arisen from evaporation or other legitimate cause. Sec. 110.

In assessing the duty on deficiencies the value of the goods is to be estimated as nearly as possible by the market price of similar goods. Sec. 111.

No deficiency in goods entered for exportation, is to be charged with duty, unless the officers have reason to believe that it has been caused by fraudulent abstraction.⁽²⁾ Sec. 112.

No entry for home consumption of wood goods from the warehouse, is to be received for less than five loads, unless delivered by tale, in which case not less than 240 pieces or two great hundreds may be entered; and, if delivered by tale, not less than one load or 90 pieces are to be delivered at any one time. Sec. 113.

PLAYING CARDS.

The three next sections, relating to playing cards, partake of a somewhat anomalous character as they have little reference to the Customs. They were prepared by the Inland Revenue Department, and introduced into the Bill during its progress through Parliament. Foreign playing cards are subject, under the Customs Tariff, to a duty on importation of 15s. per dozen packs, whilst home made cards are subject to a stamp duty, and to certain regulations for the protection of the latter duty; and it was deemed expedient to superadd these clauses, as a further safeguard against infraction of the stamp laws. Imported playing cards are not to be sold or exposed for sale without wrappers and devices thereon provided by the Inland Revenue. Nor is any person to sell, or offer for sale, cards, whether home made or imported, not being cards within the meaning of 16 and 17 Vict. cap. 59, and enclosed in a licensed maker's wrapper, and not being waste cards, according to the Act, without wrappers provided under this Act, under a penalty of £10, if he be not a licensed maker, and £20, if he be. Such cards may be seized by officers of Customs or Inland Revenue, and disposed of as the Commissioners of the latter may direct.

(1) As to Excise regulations respecting spirits and tobacco, vide last par. of note (2), p. 116.

(2) These regulations with regard to allowances on deficiencies effect a very important alteration in the law; the advantage formerly enjoyed by a particular class of warehouses over others being removed, together with the scale of limitation, which, whilst it led to much inconvenience and fraud on the one hand, often worked an injustice to the unprivileged.

In proceedings for the penalties, the allegation that the offender did sell or offer, &c., is sufficient. Sec. 114.

The Commissioners of Inland Revenue are to provide wrappers and appoint officers to enclose imported cards. And those officers, on receiving notice, with a certificate from the Customs, that the duties on the imported cards are paid, are to enclose them in wrappers. If any such cards, or any home made cards, representing cards imported (not being waste cards), or packs of cards on which stamp duty is not paid, be found without wrappers, they are forfeited, may be seized by officers of Customs or Inland Revenue, and disposed of as the Commissioners of Inland Revenue may direct. Lastly, parties forging wrappers are to be deemed guilty of felony, and liable to the same punishment, as persons forging any stamp or mark provided or used by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue. Secs. 115 and 116.

It may here also be observed that, under the Inland Revenue Act, 9 Geo. 4 c. 18, sec. 33, foreign cards, wrappers, labels, &c., imported without the foreign maker's name and address, or bearing the name of any British licensed maker, are not only prohibited to be warehoused, but, are liable to seizure and forfeiture; and the same Act, (secs. 28 to 32 inclusive,) contains regulations affecting the exportation of cards, to which, though not Customs' regulations, it is deemed expedient, thus briefly to advert, because they affect the transactions of the trade with the Customs, and impose certain duties on the officers.

CHAPTER III.

EXPORTATION.

The provisions which have reference to the importation of goods and the incidents affecting them in this country, so far as the revenue is concerned, having been explained, the next leading division of the statute relates to the important business of exportation, with reference to which, it cannot fail to be observed, that by simplification of the fiscal machinery, facilities, far superior to those prescribed by the repealed statutes, are afforded.

MINIMUM TONNAGE OF EXPORT SHIPS.

Warehoused goods are not to be exported or entered for exportation to foreign parts in ships of less than fifty tons ; but an exception is made in favour of ships regularly trading from the United Kingdom to the Channel Islands, the tonnage of which is not to be less than forty tons⁽¹⁾. Sec. 117.

CERTIFICATE OF CLEARANCE OF SHIPS INWARDS.

Before any goods are shipped for exportation the master must give to the collector or comptroller a certificate from the proper officer, of the clearance inwards or coastwise of such ship as respects her last voyage. If the ship has commenced her lading at any other port the master is to deliver to the searcher the clearance of the goods from such port. Sec. 118.

(¹) As to the goods which such ships may not carry, except subject to regulations, the violation of which involves forfeiture of the ship and goods, vide secs. 192 and 193.

ENTRY OF SHIP OUTWARDS.

The master is to deliver with the above certificate an entry outwards of the ship in the form required by the Act or to that effect ⁽¹⁾. If any goods are taken on board before the delivery of such entry outwards, unless under a stiffening order ⁽²⁾ from the proper officer, the master incurs a penalty of £100.⁽³⁾ Ib.

TIMES, PLACES, AND CONDITIONS OF SHIPMENT.

Goods are not to be put off or conveyed to any ship for exportation, on Sundays or holidays⁽⁴⁾,—nor except from some legal quay, wharf, or other duly appointed place⁽⁵⁾,—nor without the presence or authority of the proper officer of Customs,—nor before due entry outwards of the ship,—nor before due entry of the goods—nor before the goods be duly cleared for shipment⁽⁶⁾. Sec. 119.

(1) The following is a specimen of the entry as used:—

* If the vessel be foreign, the country is inserted, instead of the port.

(2) The term "stiffening order," designates the permission granted by the Customs for lading heavy goods, by way of ballast, to steady the ship, and, when necessary for that purpose, it is given without the formal entry outwards.

(3) For facilitating the despatch of business, the Board permit vessels to enter outwards at the time of entry inwards, so that goods may be in preparation for shipment, whilst the vessel is discharging her inward cargo.—B. O. 25th Sept. 1841, and 7th May, 1842.

(5) As to quays, &c., vide secs. 9 and 13, p. 77.

(6) Goods shipped without clearance are under section 144 liable to forfeiture.

AS TO ENTRY AND CLEARANCE OF GOODS OUTWARDS.

The change effected in the waterside practice with respect to goods outwards, is sufficiently important to demand particular notice. Under the old law, before any goods could be exported, it was necessary to deliver entries with duplicates at the Long Room of the Custom House, which were to a certain extent fictitious or rather speculative,—not professing to specify the actual quantity of goods, intended to be shipped, but any covering quantity the exporter chose to insert, the actual quantity being afterwards supplied by endorsement, when the shipment took place, and if any portion of the goods so endorsed were not put on board, the discrepancy was again rectified by making that portion in waterside phraseology “short shipped.” This document, being certified by the searcher, was called a cocket⁽¹⁾. In addition to the cockets, shipping bills for the various shipments comprised in the whole cargo, containing a summary of the shipments endorsed on the cockets, were prepared and delivered to the Customs.

A suggestion was advanced by the Select Committee of the House of Commons in their Report, (Head 12), that all entries outwards in respect of free goods should be abolished, and that, in lieu thereof, one content or single shipping bill of the whole cargo, should be delivered by the agents for the ship, after her departure. This alteration would have entirely annihilated the cocket system, because the entry outwards, in whatever shape, was the only instrument convertible into a cocket, and the suggestion of the committee could not be fully carried out, without manifest injury to the interests it professed to serve. By the new Act, in lieu of the complicated operations just described, an invoice or account of the goods, denominated a shipping bill, is substituted, which may, if more convenient to the exporter, be delivered to the searcher at the time and place of shipment. If a cocket or an equivalent to that document be needed, as to any goods, a duplicate of the shipping bill can be made available for that purpose. The cocket is only required by the Customs in respect of the high duty articles, tea, spirits, and tobacco⁽¹⁾; but, the treaty or agreement between this country and Denmark, Art. 33, contains a stipulation that cockets shall accompany goods entering the Sound or the Belts; and the probability was not lost sight of, that they would still be required on other exportations to particular foreign countries, where evidence of their British character confers an advantageous distinction; and therefore, whilst adopting as far as was prudent, the suggestions of the Select Committee, the option of still taking cockets has been reserved to the exporter⁽²⁾.

It is from the shipping bills that the statistical returns, required by Parliament, are prepared for general commercial purposes, but for which, so far as the Customs Department is concerned, they might, at least with reference to free goods, have been dispensed with. They also serve the further purpose of supplying information to the mercantile body, for whose use, almost contemporaneously with the actual shipments, the particulars are published in the commercial official journal, the "Bill of Entry."⁽³⁾

(1) This precaution is important for the protection of such goods against seizure in the event of the export vessel being driven back by stress of weather or other unavoidable necessity upon any part of the coast, where she would be liable to be boarded by the Customs. Vide sec. 126.

(2) The new Act had not long passed into a law, before the advantage of this precaution became apparent, in the case of several exporters, who, having suffered some inconvenience abroad from the want of cockets, made it matter of complaint. The 126th section affords the remedy acted upon as to Denmark by G. O. 1st April, 1854.

(3) This information is held in much esteem by the trade, as an index to the foreign markets, and as a valuable guide for the regulation of commercial operations. When this law passed, the Board, though empowered to call on the exporter for duplicate shipping bills, refrained from demanding any document which could safely be dispensed with: hence the duplicate entries, which formerly found their way to the "Bill of Entry" office, were no longer required, whereupon that journal ceased to furnish the trade statistics, the suppression of which led to remonstrances and appeals to the Commissioners, who at once gave the "Bill of Entry" office access to the original shipping bills, in lieu of the duplicates, and the publication was resumed without taxing the exporter with the preparation of duplicates.

BOND FOR WAREHOUSED GOODS, &c., OUTWARDS.

Before any of the following goods shall be permitted to be exported, viz., warehoused goods, British wrought plate, goods subject to Customs duties, goods entitled to any drawback⁽¹⁾ of

(1) It is scarcely necessary to explain, that the familiar term "drawback" is applied to repayments of duties or taxes previously charged on commodities, but from which they are relieved on exportation, that they may be disposed of in the foreign market on the same terms, as if they had not been taxed at all. Drawbacks may be described as of three kinds: 1st. Customs duties paid on importation and received or drawn back on exportation. 2nd. Allowances on British commodities on their exportation to foreign countries, often at liberal rates, and denominated "Bounties." These under the present Act (interpretation clause) are expressly included in the term drawback. 3rd. Excise or Inland Revenue duties levied on certain home manufactures, but returned on the exportation of the exciseable article. Customs drawback is allowed on the following goods:—

Rice, cleaned in the United Kingdom, and deposited within a month after payment of duty in bond and so remaining until exportation (on declaration of identity by exporter, per cwt., 4½d., being equal to the duty on four bushels of rough rice. Tariff Act, 1853, Table A., No. 357.

Cigars, per lb., 2s. 7½d., and 5 per cent. thereon. Tariff Act, 1853 Table A., No. 229.

Duty-paid sugar, refined, in the United Kingdom, loaf, &c., as described in Tariff, No. 409, on exportation or removal to Isle of Man, per cwt., 12s. 6d. 16 & 17 Vic. c. 106.

Bastard, or refined sugar, broken, &c., as per Tariff Act, 1853, Table A., No. 409, per cwt., 10s.

Tobacco, manufactured in the United Kingdom, cut, &c., as per Tariff Act, 1853, Table A., No. 429, per lb., 2s. 7½d., and 5 per cent additional.

Wine, British Possession, except Lees, as per Tariff Act, 1853, Table A., No. 463, on exportation or shipment as stores, per gallon, 2s. 9d., and 5 per cent. additional; other wine, except Lees, 5s. 6d., and 5 per cent. additional. Tariff Act, 1853, Table A., No. 463.

There is also a drawback of Stamp Duty on gold and silver plate, as under, payable at Goldsmith's Hall; but, the debentures for which are prepared by the Customs on entry outwards, and issued on the exportation of the goods.

Plate, of wrought gold, manufactured and marked in Great Britain since 1st December, 1784, per oz., 8s. (25 Geo. III. c. 64.); since 5th July, 1797, 16s. (37 Geo. III. c. 90, and 44 Geo. III. c. 98.); 31st August, 1815, 17s. (55 Geo. III. c. 185.); Of wrought silver, manufactured, assayed, and Customs on exportation, and goods exportable under special rules and restrictions, the exporter or his agent is to deliver to the collector or comptroller a "bond note" or account of such goods,⁽¹⁾ and give bond, with one surety, in double the amount of duty payable on the importation of such goods (except as to British wrought plate, for which bond is given for the amount of drawback) for the shipping, exporting and landing of the goods, or, otherwise accounting for them to the satisfaction of the Commissioners. This Bond Note, certified by the officer of Customs, is the export entry for such goods. Sec. 120.

Before any such goods shall be shipped or waterborne for exportation, the exporter is to deliver to the searcher a shipping bill in the form, or to the effect prescribed by the Act ⁽¹⁾. Sec. 121.

EXCISE DRAWBACK ON EXPORTS.

The claimant of drawback of Excise on goods cleared for exportation must perform two requisites—

- 1st. to give notice of his claim to the officer of Excise.
- 2nd. to produce to the searcher a document signed by the officer of Excise describing the goods.

If the goods correspond with such description, and be duly shipped and exported, the searcher, if required, is to certify the shipment on the document and transmit it to the officer of Excise. Sec. 122.

WHEN CUSTOMS DRAWBACK IS NOT ALLOWED.

Drawback is not allowed on goods of less value than the drawback claimed, and, if such goods be entered for drawback, they will be liable to forfeiture, and the person entering them, to a penalty of £200, or treble the drawback claimed. Sec. 123.

DRAWBACK ON TOBACCO.

No drawback is allowed on tobacco not wholly manufactured from duty-paid tobacco, nor on tobacco mixed with dirt, rubbish, or other substance; ⁽¹⁾ and persons entering or shipping tobacco contrary to this provision are liable, in addition to any other penalties incurred thereby, ⁽²⁾ to pay a penalty of £200, or treble the amount of drawback claimed. Sec. 124.

SHIPPING BILL FOR FREE GOODS, &c.

Before goods not requiring bond can be shipped for exportation, the exporter is to deliver to the searcher a shipping bill in the form required by the Act or to that effect, ⁽³⁾ and this shipping bill will be the only entry required. Sec. 125.

So far this section deals with the shipping bill in its original simple form, and as first drawn and submitted to the legislature the provision of the Act required nothing more, but the following proviso, and also the last paragraph of section 142, were super-added during the progress of the bill through Parliament.⁽¹⁾

LISTS OF GOODS TO BE FURNISHED.

At the port of Liverpool and at other ports, where the docks, quays and wharves are, in like manner, subject to the control of the same local authorities, the person acting in the loading and clearance of the exporting ship is, in addition to the shipping bill, to prepare and leave with the collector, within 14 days after clearance, an accurate list of all the goods from the bill of lading, &c., stating the value of such of the goods, as were previously chargeable with duty at value, and of British goods, with the names of the shippers, under a penalty of £20. Ib.

SHIPPING BILL, THE CLEARANCE FOR GOODS.

The shipping bill is the clearance for the goods, but if any of those consist of tea, spirits, or tobacco, the exporter is to give the searcher an account, stating the number and description of packages, and the quantities in each ; and this account, certified by the searcher, is to accompany the ship and have the same effect as the cocket formerly in use. Sec. 126.

COCKETS.

If the exporter require a similar certificate in respect of any goods shipped for exportation, the searcher, on the account being presented to him, is to certify it ; and, if required to be in any particular form, for the Zollverein or other foreign state, or, under the name of cocket, it may be so prepared and entitled. Ib.

LICENSED LIGHTERMEN ONLY TO CARRY GOODS TO SHIP.

None but licensed lightermen, or persons in their employment, are to carry drawback or warehoused goods for shipment, at ports where lightermen are required to be licensed,⁽¹⁾ under a penalty of £20. Sec. 127.

Goods taken from the warehouse for removal or exportation without the authority of the officers, and by any other persons in any other manner and at any other times, than they shall direct, will be forfeited, Sec. 128.

DUTIES ON GOODS LOST MAY BE REMITTED.

The Commissioners may remit duties on goods lost or destroyed by unavoidable accident in delivery or shipping. Sec. 129.

DEBENTURES FOR DRAWBACK.

The collector or comptroller, after entry of goods for drawback, is to prepare a debenture, certifying the entry outwards, and, on being exported and on notice, with the particulars, given to the searcher, he is on the debenture to certify the fact to the collector, whereupon the debenture is computed and passed.⁽²⁾ Sec. 130.

(¹) The power to grant licenses and require security is, as already shown, conferred on the Commissioners by section 16, and, in the note on that section, p. 85, the object of that provision has been explained. As analogous to the subject, it may be convenient here to observe, that similar precautions are extended to goods in transit from one vessel to another under the transshipment regulations, and also to the removals from the warehouse to the quays or stations, at which they are intended to be shipped, for the obvious reason that the risk of removal from ship to ship in the stream or from the warehouse to the quays through streets and alleys is as great, if not in many instances greater, than in the removal from quay to ship. As the transshipment of goods is only permissive, and under such regulations, as the Executive may deem necessary, one of the conditions imposed is, that transshipments by lighter shall only be effected by licensed lightermen, and as warehoused goods can only be removed in such manner and by such persons, as the Customs may permit (section 128), the Board have directed that, unless the goods conveyed by land carriage are accompanied by an officer at the expense of the remover, they shall only be carried by licensed carmen, from whom, as the condition of being licensed, security by bond is required.

(²) Debentures for drawback are, under 16 & 17 Vic. c. 59, subject to stamp duty ad valorem, when the amount received is—

The claimant is to declare on the debenture, that the goods have been duly exported, and that he was at the time of shipping and still continues entitled to the drawback : and his name is then to be stated in the debenture, which is to be delivered to him, and his receipt, countersigned by the holder in case of transfer in the mean time, shall be the discharge for the drawback when paid. Sec. 131.

No debenture for drawback will be paid after two years from the date of shipment. Sec. 132.

GOODS CLEARED FOR DRAWBACK FORFEITED IF NOT DULY EXPORTED.

The offence of unshipping and relanding goods cleared for drawback, (unless relanded as short-shipped under the care of the proper officers,) or of carrying them to the Channel Islands, (unless duly cleared for that purpose,) is punishable by forfeiture of the goods, and of any ship or boat used in conveying them from the export ship ; and the master and others concerned in such offence will forfeit £100, or treble the value of the goods. Sec. 133.

DRAWBACK ON WINE FOR NAVAL OFFICERS.

Drawback of the whole duty on wine for officers of the Navy in actual service, not exceeding the following quantities per annum, is allowed :—

For every admiral	-	-	-	-	1260
Vice-admiral	-	-	-	-	1050
Rear-admiral	-	-	-	-	840
Captains of the 1st. and 2nd rate	-				630
Captains of the 3rd, 4th, and 5th rates					420
Captain of an inferior rate	-	-	-	-	210
Lieutenant and other commanding officer, marine officer, purser, and surgeon	-	-	-	-	105

unless taken from the warehouse without payment of duty, under the Customs regulations, and, in either case, shipped at ports approved of by the Commissioners.⁽¹⁾ Sec. 134.

CONDITIONS OF CLAIM FOR SUCH DRAWBACK.

The person claiming such drawback is to state in the entry and declare on the debenture the name of the officer and the ship in which he serves, and the wine is to be delivered into the charge, and shipped under the care, of the officer of Customs. The commanding officer has to certify the receipt of the wine, and the Customs officer the shipment, on the debenture, which is then computed, passed and delivered to the party entitled to it. Sec. 135.

TRANSFER ON OFFICERS LEAVING THE SERVICE, &c.

If any officer leave the service or be removed to another ship, the Customs may permit such wine to be transferred to another officer as part of his proportion, whether in the same ship or another, or for transshipment to any other for such officer, or, may permit it to be relanded and warehoused for future re-shipment; and the officers of Customs at any port may receive back the duties on such wine and deliver it for home use. But, if such wine be not laden on board the ship for which it was intended, or be unladen without the permission of the officers of Customs, it will be forfeited. Sec. 136.

TOBACCO FOR THE NAVY.

The purser of any ship of war in actual service may enter and ship at approved ports, tobacco, warehoused in his name, to the extent allowed, ⁽²⁾ for the use of such ship, on delivering to the collector or comptroller a certificate from the captain, stating the name of the purser and the number of the crew, and giving bond, with one surety, in treble the duties, not to reland it without leave of the Customs. Sec. 137.

If the purser be removed to another ship, the collector may permit the transshipment of any remains of tobacco to such ship on due entry, stating the port and time of first shipment. Sec. 138.

If the ship be paid off, the residue of such tobacco may, with the like permission, be landed and entered by the purser, either for payment of duties, or to be warehoused for six months, for the use of some other ship of war. Ib.

The general warehousing regulations as to tobacco are to be observed in these cases, as far as they are applicable. Ib.

The allowance of tobacco is not to exceed 2lbs, per lunar month for each of the crew, nor more than six months supply, after that rate, at any one time. All supplies, transfers, and transshipments of tobacco for the navy are to be reported by the collectors with all particulars to the Commissioners, in order that an account may be kept of the supply and consumption of each ship. Sec. 139.

SHIPPING OF STORES.

The master of any foreign bound ship of the burden of fifty tons or more, whose voyage out and home extends to forty days, may on application, but, subject to such conditions as the Commissioners may direct, receive from the searcher an order for the shipment of such stores, as may be necessary for such ship, with reference to the number of the crew and passengers and the duration of the intended voyage. The form of application prescribed by the collector is to be signed by the master or owner of the ship. Sec. 140.

VICTUALLING BILL.

When stores are shipped, the master must prepare an account of them, including any others already on board, and this account when signed by the searcher and countersigned by the collector will be the ship's victualling bill.⁽¹⁾ Ib.

CLEARANCE OF SHIP.

If any part of the inward cargo be reported for exportation in the same ship, the master is, before clearing outwards, to give the searcher a copy of the report inwards of such goods, certified by the collector or comptroller, and if the goods correspond, such

(1) As the Laws for the abolition of Slavery, impose on the Customs some duties in relation to ships clearing outwards, it is essential to notice them here. The most memorable of those enactments were the 46 Geo. III. c. 52 and 119, passed in pursuance of a series of resolutions moved on the 12th of May, 1789, by Mr. Wilberforce. The 5 Geo. IV. c. 113, professes to consolidate the Slavery laws in one Act, but some provisions of the 46 Geo. III. c. 52, are re-enacted, authorizing Customs officers to seize, detain, and prosecute Slave ships, as if forfeited under the Customs or Excise Laws. The 9 Geo. IV. c. 84, was passed for the further amendment of the general law—3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 78, to abolish Slavery in Colonies—5 & 6 Wm. IV. c. 45—6 & 7 Wm. IV. c. 5 & 82, and 1 & 2 Vic. c. 3, granting compensation to owners on manumission of slaves—11 Geo. 4 & 1 Wm. IV. c. 55, reducing bounties on seizure of slaves—6 & 7 Wm. IV. c. 81, 7 Wm. IV. & 1 Vic. c. 62, 1 & 2 Vic. c. 102, 1 & 2 Vic. c. 47, 2 & 3 Vic. c. 57 & 73, 3 & 4 Vic. c. 64, 5 & 6 Vic. c. 42 & 59, 6 & 7 Vic. c. 26, 46, 91 & 98, for carrying into execution, by Order in Council, treaties, conventions, &c., with foreign powers, &c., for suppression of the Slave Trade—5 & 6 Vic. c. 114, repealing so much of 2 & 3 Vic. c. 73 as relates to Portuguese vessels. There are various Acts for carrying into effect treaties with particular foreign powers, viz., 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 64 & 74, Sweden and Brazil—6 & 7 Wm. IV. c. 16, Jamaica—1 & 2 Vic. c. 19, British Colonies—c. 39, two conventions between the Hans Towns, and King of the French—c. 40, Sweden—c. 41, Netherlands—c. 83 two conventions between Tuscany and King of the French—c. 84, two conventions between Two Sicilies and King of the French—5 & 6 Vic. c. 41, Hayti; c. 101, India, extending powers to East India Company—8 & 9 Vic. c. 122, Brazil, African Slave Trade—11 & 12 Vic. c. 116, Equador—12 & 13 Vic. c. 84, Arabian Chiefs in Persian Gulf—16 & 17 Vic. c. 16, Chief of Sohar, Arabia. There are also various treaties with particular states. 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 72, King of the French—5 & 6 Wm. IV. c. 60, King of the French, and Sardinia; c. 61, King of the French, and Denmark—6 & 7 Wm. IV. c. 6, Spain—3 & 4 Vic. c. 67, Venezuela—5 & 6 Vic. c. 40, Argentine Confederation—6 & 7 Vic. c. 14, Bolivia; c. 15, Texas; c. 16, Uruguay; c. 50, Austria, Prussia, and Russia—c. 51, Mexico: c. 52, Chili; c. 53, Portugal—16 & 17 Vic. c. 17, New Granada. The latter Acts contain the provisions of the general Acts, which furnish the characteristics of slave ships, requiring the attention of the officers of Customs. They are nearly to the same effect in each, and are as follow.

“Every such vessel shall be subject to seizure, detention, and condemnation, under any such Order or authority, if in the equipment of such vessel there shall be found any of the things hereinafter mentioned, namely:—

“1st. Hatches with open gratings, instead of the close hatches which are usual in merchant vessels.

SHIP'S CONTENT.

Before any ship clears with goods outwards the master is to deliver to the searcher a content or account of the cargo in the "2nd. Divisions, or bulkheads, in the hold or on deck, more numerous than are necessary for vessels engaged in lawful trade.

"3rd. Spare plank fitted for being laid down as a second or slave deck.

"4th. Shackles, bolts, or handcuffs.

"5th. A larger quantity of water, in casks or in tanks, than is requisite for the consumption of the crew of the vessel as a merchant vessel.

"6th. An extraordinary number of water-casks, or of other vessels for holding liquids, unless the master shall produce a certificate from the Custom House at the place, from which he cleared outwards, stating that a sufficient security had been given by the owners of such vessel that such extra quantity of casks or of other vessels should only be used for the reception of palm oil or for other purposes of lawful commerce.

7th. A greater quantity of mess tubs or kids than are requisite for the use of the crew of the vessel as a merchant vessel.

8th. A boiler of an unusual size, and larger than requisite for the use of the crew of the vessel as a merchant vessel; or more than one boiler of the ordinary size.

9th. An extraordinary quantity either of rice, or of the flour of Brazil, manioc, or cassava, commonly called farina of maize, or of Indian corn, or of any other article of food, whether beyond what might probably be requisite for the use of the crew; such rice, flour, maize, Indian corn, or other article of food not being entered on the Manifest as part of the cargo for trade.

"10th. A quantity of mats or matting larger than is necessary for the use of the crew of the vessel as a merchant vessel.

"Any one or more of these several circumstances, if proved, shall be considered as prima facie evidence of the actual employment of the vessel in the transfer of negroes or others, for the purpose of consigning them to slavery, and the vessel and cargo shall thereupon be condemned to the Crown, unless it be established by satisfactory evidence on the part of the master or owners that such vessel was, at the time of her detention or capture, employed on some legal pursuit, and that such of the several things above enumerated as were found on board of such vessel at the time of her detention, or had been put on board, on the voyage on which, when captured, such vessel was proceeding, were needed for legal purposes on that particular voyage."

The above extract is from the 2 & 3 Vic. c. 73. There are slight variations in the corresponding clauses of the different Acts, reference to that of the particular country to which the ship belongs should be had when any case arises.

The bond and the certificate required under the 6th regulation are prepared by the officers of the port of clearance.

(2) In relation to the departure of ships, the laws relating to the illegal enlistment of British subjects and equipment of vessels for warlike purposes, require a brief notice. These were consolidated by the 59 Geo. III., c. 69. The 2nd, 3rd and 4th sections describe the offence making it a misdemeanour. By section 5 the chief officers of Customs at any port, upon information on oath before them, setting forth the particulars that offenders against the Act are on board, may detain the ship. By section 6 masters of ships having offenders on board incur a penalty of £50 in respect of each offender, and every such ship may be seized and detained by the collector and other officer of Customs until such penalties be paid, or until the master, owner, or persons enlisted shall give sufficient bail for payment of the penalties. By section 7 persons fitting out or arming vessels to be used in hostility to any foreign power not at war with this country, are guilty of a misdemeanour, and the officers of Customs are required, on similar proof of the offence, to seize and detain such vessels.

Sec. 4. Abstracts of Act to be displayed in ships. Sec. 5. The Act 14 & 15 Vic. c. 79 relates specially to steam vessels carrying passengers, and applies equally to sea and river going vessels. As to the former class many of its provisions are superseded, as far as Colonial voyages are concerned, by the Passengers' Act above noticed, but with regard to the latter, it is in full force and effect.

Since the Act passed into a law, the above requirement, not introduced into the original draft, has been dispensed with by Treasury Order, on the application of the mercantile body, on whose suggestion it was introduced. As the order, therefore, now stands in the place of the enactment, it demands particular notice. It dispenses with the extra bill of lading, and the list after clearance, and requires only, except at Liverpool, the delivery at the time of shipment of the shipping bill as contemplated in framing the Act, and described in page 164.

At Liverpool, in lieu of the duplicate bill of lading, an extra shipping bill, giving the actual shipments and the values thereof, is required; but the values in the list are dispensed with.

This dispensation, however, is only conditional; and it is important to observe that the parties failing to attend to the requirements of the Act, are still liable to the penalties consequent

thereon, unless they duly comply with the conditions on which those requirements are waived, particularly, as to the delivery of accurate shipping bills, which are indispensable to the preparation of trade statistics. Delivery of the shipping bill, at or before, the time of shipment, is, therefore, rigidly required.⁽¹⁾

VARIANCE BETWEEN SHIPMENTS AND SHIP'S CONTENTS.

If it be found, on the departure of the ship, that any of the following goods, enumerated in the content, are not shipped, unless duly certified by the proper officer as short-shipped, they are forfeited, viz.:—

Goods liable to duty on importation—goods taken from the warehouse to be exported—and, goods entitled to drawback on exportation.

If any of such goods be shipped, not being enumerated in the content, the master is to forfeit £5 per package, and if any of such goods, having been duly shipped, be landed at any other place than that for which they are cleared, or be not accounted for to the satisfaction of the Commissioners, the master is to forfeit treble the value of such goods. Sec. 143.

Goods shipped, or waterborne for that purpose, without due clearance, or otherwise in violation of the Act, are liable to forfeiture.⁽²⁾ Sec. 144.

SHIPS IN BALLAST.

Before any ship, not having any goods on board, except stores enumerated on the victualling bill, shall depart from the United Kingdom for any foreign destination, the collector or comptroller is to clear such ship in ballast, by notifying such clearance with the date on the victualling bill,⁽³⁾ and deliver it to the master, as the ship's clearance; and the master is to answer any questions put by the collector or comptroller, as to the ship's departure or destination. Sec. 145.

SHIPS WITH PASSENGERS ONLY, AND THEIR BAGGAGE.

Ships with passengers and their baggage only, or laden with chalk or slate, are deemed to be in ballast; and, whether laden or in ballast, if any ship, having stores on board, shall depart without being duly cleared, the master is to forfeit £100. Ib.

OFFICERS MAY BOARD SHIPS AFTER CLEARANCE.

The officers of Customs may, within the limits of any port of the United Kingdom, or within four leagues of the coast, board any ship after clearance outwards⁽¹⁾, and may demand her clearance; and if any goods be found on board for which certificates are required, not contained in such certificates, or any stores not endorsed on the victualling bill, such goods or stores will be forfeited.

And if any goods enumerated in such certificates be not on board, the master is to forfeit £20 in respect of every package of such goods. Sec. 146.

If, previous to the final departure of any ship on her foreign voyage, any lock, mark or seal, placed by the officers upon any stores on board, be opened, altered or broken, or if any of the stores be secretly conveyed away, the master will forfeit £20.⁽²⁾ Sec. 147.

If the master of any ship do not "bring-to" at the stations appointed for disembarking the officers, or for further examination before her departure, he incurs a penalty of £20.⁽³⁾ Sec. 148.

TIME OF EXPORTATION AND DEPARTURE DEFINED.

The time at which goods shall be shipped on board any export ship is to be deemed to be the time of exportation; and the

GOODS OUTWARDS PROHIBITABLE.

The following goods may, by proclamation, or Order in Council, be prohibited to be exported or carried coastwise.⁽²⁾

Arms,—ammunition,—gunpowder,—military and naval stores,—articles considered by Her Majesty convertible into, or adapted for increasing military or naval stores—provisions or any sort of victuals, which may be used, as human food ;

And if such goods, after being so prohibited, shall be exported or carried coastwise, or waterborne for that purpose, they will be forfeited. Sec. 150.

PRACTICAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR CLEARING GOODS AND SHIPS OUTWARDS.

As to Goods from the Warehouse —The exporter of any warehoused or other goods, for which bond on exportation is required, must fill up and deliver at the Custom House⁽³⁾ a bond note, in the form prescribed by the Act (vide, note ⁽¹⁾, p. 161,) and give security by bond, in respect of such goods.

If the goods are subject to ad valorem duty he should procure a certificate, on the bond note, from the landing surveyor of the station, whence the goods are to be removed, as to the sufficiency of the value. When the bond is executed, the bond note is returned to the exporter, with the certificate at the foot, that security is given. This certified bond note the exporter must then deliver to the Customs' warehouse-keeper in charge of the goods, together with a "shipping bill" in the form prescribed by the Act (vide note ⁽¹⁾, p. 162,) and an account, with an abbreviated counterpart or slip of the goods, intended to be shipped, which account the warehouse-keeper will then sign, when it becomes, what is termed shipment, the "shipping bill," is also signed by the Customs' warehouse-keeper and delivered together with the "locker's order" to the exporter, who presents them, to the searcher at the station.

In the ordinary course of business there are certain matters of form requisite according to the nature of the shipment whether alongside the station, or by lighter, or land carriage.

Shipments alongside the Station.—If the goods are put direct from the station of the warehouse into a ship alongside, the exporter fills up an authority for receiving the goods on board. This document is called a "pricking note,"⁽¹⁾ usually printed in red ink. The exporter delivers this to the searcher, who compares it with the "shipping bill," and "locker's order" and redelivers the latter, signed by himself, to the exporter, who then leaves it with the occupier of the warehouse, and no more is required of the exporter. It is the duty of the searcher to sign,

(1) The following is the form as practically used :—

stamp and send the "pricking note," by the Customs officer to the export ship.

Removal by Lighter for Shipment.—If the exporting vessel is at a station distant from the warehouse and the goods are to be removed by lighter, the exporter fills up a pricking note, in the same form as before, with the addition of the lighter-man's name, but usually for distinction printed in black ink, instead of red, and delivers it as well as the locker's order to the searcher. The exporter's duty is then complete. The searcher retains the pricking note, until the lighterman applies for the goods, and gives a receipt on the shipping bill for them, when the searcher signs and stamps the "pricking note," and delivers it to the lighterman, to accompany the goods to the export ship. The lightermen are required to give immediate notice to the searchers, if any of the goods be shut out of the vessel, and on no account to take them to any other ship without permission of the searchers.

Removal by Land for Shipment.—If the goods are to be removed by a licensed carmen from one dock or station to another for shipment, the exporter fills up and presents to the Customs warehouse-keeper, together with the "shipping bill," and "locker's order," an additional document, called a "dandy note."⁽¹⁾

DANDY NOTE.
To the Locker at Nicholson's Wharf . Deliver the undermentioned Packages for the Searchers at Brewer's Quay .
Shipping Marks, Numbers, and Descriptions of Packages.	Merchant's Name, Ship, Captain, and Destination.

Received the above	R. H., Searcher, 4th February, 1854.

The term dandy appears to be a corruption of the Latin "dando," being the authority for giving the goods to the carman.

The Customs' warehouse-keeper signs the "dandy note," and it becomes the authority of the locker at the warehouse, for delivering the goods to the carman. The locker endorses upon it the time of delivery of the goods, and returns it to the carman, to accompany the goods to the searcher at the station from which they are to be cleared.

As to British Plate and Customs' Drawback Goods.—The exporter of British wrought plate⁽¹⁾ and goods entitled to Customs drawback, prepares and delivers to the bond clerk in the long room a bond note in the same form as for warehoused goods already described. He, at the same time, presents to him the "shipping bill" of the goods, and executes the bond. The bond clerk in this case retains the bond note, and re-delivers the "shipping bill" with a certificate thereon, that security has been given. The exporter then prepares a "pricking note" in the same form and manner, whether for shipment from the quay, or by lighter, and delivers both these documents to the searcher. Goods of this class can only be cleared on the station where the ship is loading.

As to Inland Revenue, or Excise Drawback Goods.—The exporter of goods in respect of which drawback of Inland Revenue or excise is claimed, must leave with the searcher a "shipping bill," with the particulars of the goods and claim for drawback endorsed thereon, together with a "pricking note," as in the cases already described, and a document from the officer of Excise, usually called a "shipping notice." The exporter usually remains to see his goods examined by the searcher, but, so far as the Customs are concerned, his duty ends here. The searcher having compared the goods in the "shipping bill" with the endorsement on the "shipping notice," sends the "pricking note" with the goods to the export ship, and in due course certifies the shipment on the "shipping bill," and on the "shipping notice." The latter is retained by the Customs, until applied for by the proper officer of Excise.

(1) If there be a shipment of British plate the exporter must, at the time he delivers the bond note, fill up and make a declaration of the period since which it has been manufactured, that it is stamped with the Goldsmith's Hall mark, and has never been used. Vide note (1), p. 160.

As to all other Goods, except in Transit.—The exporter of British manufactures, foreign free goods, and duty paid goods not for drawback, has only to deliver a “shipping bill” in the form prescribed by the Act, (vide note ^(*), page 163, ante.) When any of the last-mentioned goods are to be conveyed by lighter to the export ship, the exporter has to deliver a memorandum, called a stamp note,⁽¹⁾ to the searcher, which, when stamped by him, is returned to the exporter, and becomes the authority for receiving the goods on board.

As to Duplicate Shipping Bills and Cocket.—It has already been stated, page 159, in treating of the shipping bill, that duplicates or cockets are required to accompany tea, spirits and tobacco, and exports to Denmark;⁽²⁾ and such duplicates may also be resorted to and converted into cockets, in respect of any other goods, at the option of the exporter.

As to Goods in Transit.—On the arrival of a ship, with goods in transit, at ports approved for the transshipment of goods in furtherance of the voyage to any other country, the master must report the goods in transit, describing them by their specific names. The exporter or transshipping consignee must apply at Long Room of the Custom House⁽³⁾ for a copy of so much of the report inwards, as applies to those goods, from this he there fills up and signs an account or bond note, to the same effect as that used on the export of goods generally. This is usually printed, for distinction, in red ink, and headed "for transshipment only," and is countersigned by the clerk of the report office, and the exporter delivers it to the bond clerk, and enters into bond in the same manner, as before described, the conditions of the bond being adapted to the case.

The Certificate of the bond clerk is then issued, and on the presentation of this by the exporter to the registrar, with the copy of the report inwards and a shipping bill of the goods, an order is given to the trans-shipper, in exchange for those documents, to lighter the goods from the import to the export ship, which must in all cases be accompanied by an officer at the expense of the exporter, for which purpose the exporter applies to the tide-surveyor.⁽¹⁾

The other documents are forwarded to the searcher on the station, where the export ship is taking in her lading, and on the arrival of the goods there, the searcher, having received a pricking note from the exporter, visits the lighter,⁽²⁾ and finding the goods correct, signs, stamps, and delivers the pricking note to the officer in charge of the goods in the lighter, who delivers it, with the goods, to the person in charge of the ship.

It should be observed, with reference to all the foregoing cases of shipment of warehoused, drawback, excise and transit goods, that, after they are put on board the export ship, the pricking notes, which accompany them, must, before clearance,⁽³⁾ be delivered by the master, or broker, to the searcher, who has to clear the vessel outwards.

The pricking notes and other documents are filed and handed

(1) The trans-shipment of silks, spirits, wines, nutmegs, tea, and tobacco, must be completed within three days, and all other goods within six days. If the export and import ship are lying alongside each other, and the entire cargo is to be trans-shipped, the order will be made accordingly, and a searcher appointed to attend the transaction.

(2) When goods in transit are necessarily conveyed from the station of the import ship to that of the export ship by cart, they must be accompanied by an officer at the exporter's expense.

(3) Under the Board's Order the production of the pricking note before clearance is dispensed with, on the lighterman's undertaking to ship or satisfactorily account for the goods, in which case, the pricking note may be delivered to the searcher at any time within twenty-four hours after clearance of the vessel.

in due course to the jerquer or proper officers, who check the accounts.

As to clearance of ships outwards.—The mode of clearing the ship, so far as the Customs laws are concerned, has already been described in p. 169 et seq. It may however be convenient, here, to observe, that the master, on attending the collector for final clearance, must produce the following documents—

If a British ship with cargo, her certificate of registry, if foreign, her tonnage certificate, the content, the victualling bill, and the certificates, or cockets if any, filed by the searcher, the receipts for light dues from the Trinity House, Dover, and Ramsgate Harbour, and other local dues, if any payable, and, if a British ship, the shipping master's certificate under the Merchant Seamen's Act.⁽¹⁾ If a British steamer, the half-yearly certificate of the Board of Trade under the Steam Navigation Act,⁽²⁾ as to the hull and machinery, &c., if with passengers, the emigration agent's certificate and other documents required under the Passenger's Act. Vide note ⁽¹⁾ p. 173 et seq. Prior to the clearance of a ship in ballast taking bonded stores, the master must make the usual declaration, before the collector, as to voyage in ballast, &c., give bond for the required stores, and obtain the victualling bill, as shown in p. 169, upon production of which, and with the tide-surveyor's certificate of clearance inwards, the collector will endorse the clearance outwards on the victualling bill.

COASTING TRADE.

The coasting trade of the United Kingdom, familiarly called "coastwise," is understood to mean the trade or intercourse carried on by sea between any one part of the United Kingdom and another; and no part thereof, however geographically situated, is deemed under the Act to be beyond the seas—but should any doubt arise in the prosecution of the coasting trade, as to what shall be deemed a passage by sea, the Commissioners of the Treasury may determine in what cases the trade by water from one port or place in the United Kingdom to another, shall or shall not be deemed a trade by sea, within the meaning of the statute. Sec. 151.

(¹) 14 & 15 Vic. cap. 96.

(²) 14 & 15 Vic. cap. 79.

Goods or passengers are not to be carried coastwise from one part of the Kingdom to another, except in British vessels.⁽¹⁾ Sec. 152.

No goods are to be carried coastwise unless laden for that purpose at some port or place in the United Kingdom.

No goods shall be laden on board any ship for carriage coastwise until her foreign cargo, if any, shall have been discharged.

No goods shall be taken into or from any coasting ship at sea or over the sea.

No coasting ship shall touch at any place over the sea, or deviate from the voyage, unless forced by unavoidable circumstances.

If any coasting ship shall touch at any place over the sea, the master must declare the fact, in writing under his hand, to the collector or comptroller of the first port, at which she shall subsequently arrive.

The violation of any of these provisions will subject the master to a penalty of £100. Sec. 153.

TIMES AND PLACES FOR LANDING AND SHIPPING.

The times and places for shipping and landing goods carried coastwise are defined in very nearly the same language as employed in the corresponding sections,⁽²⁾ with reference to imports and exports. The shipping and landing are not permitted on Sundays or holidays, nor at any other places, than those approved by the Customs, nor, without the presence or sanction of the officers, under a penalty of £50, payable by the master, besides the forfeiture of the goods. Sec. 154.

MASTER TO KEEP CARGO BOOK.

The master of a coasting ship is to keep a cargo book, in which the following particulars are to be stated :—

The name of the ship ;—the name of the Master ;—the port to which she belongs ;—and, the port to which she is bound.

At every port of lading, he is to enter in such book the following particulars, as far as they are known to him, viz. ;—

The name of the port of lading ;—an account of the goods there taken on board ;—the description of the packages ;—the quantities and descriptions of the goods which they contain ;—the quantities and description of any goods stowed loose ;—and, the names of the respective shippers and consignees ;—and, at every port of discharge of such goods, he is to note ;—the dates of their delivery ;—the time of departure from each port of lading,—and of arrival at each port of discharge.

The master on demand is to produce the cargo book to any officer of Customs, who may make any note or remark therein.

If any package entered as containing any foreign goods be found not to contain such goods, it is, with its contents, to be forfeited, as also foreign goods found, on board and not entered in the cargo book.

If the master fail to keep such book, or to produce it, when required, or if any goods be found on board, either not entered as laden, or noted as delivered—or if any goods entered as laden or noted as not delivered, are not on board, the master will forfeit £20. Sec. 155.

TRANSIRE OR CLEARANCE FOR COASTING SHIPS.

Before the departure of any coasting ship from the port of lading, an account in duplicate, in the form required by the Act or to that effect,⁽¹⁾ is to be delivered to the collector or comptroller, who shall retain the duplicate and return the original dated and signed by him. The account so returned is the clearance of the ship for the voyage, and the transire or pass warrant for the goods.⁽²⁾ If such account be false, the master is to forfeit £20. Sec. 156.

The Commissioners may, under such regulations as they deem fit, permit general transires to be given in lieu of that prescribed by the Act, but, which may be revoked by notice in writing delivered by the proper officer, to the master or owner of the ship, or to any of the crew on board. Ib.

DELIVERY OF TRANSIRE AND UNLADING OF GOODS,

The transire⁽¹⁾ with the name of the wharf for unlading noted thereon, is to be delivered within twenty-four hours after the ship's arrival, and before unlading, to the collector or comptroller, who is to note on it the date of delivery.

Goods, subject to any duties of Excise, are not to be unladen without the authority of the proper officer of Excise.

The following goods are to be unladen subject to the conditions subjoined :—

Goods arriving in Great Britain or Ireland from the Isle of Man, being the growth or produce of that Isle.

Manufactures of the Isle of Man, from materials the growth or produce thereof, or from materials not subject to duty in Great Britain or Ireland.

Manufactures of the Isle of Man, from materials upon which the duty shall have been paid and not drawn back.

If goods be unladen contrary to these provisions, the master is to forfeit £20, and all coastwise vessels laden or unladen contrary to law, are forfeited. Sec. 157.

CUSTOMS OFFICERS MAY BOARD COASTING SHIPS.

The officers of Customs may board any coasting ship,⁽³⁾ in any port or place, and at any period of the voyage, search her, and examine all goods on board, and demand all the documents, which ought to be on board; and the collector or comptroller may require such documents to be brought to him for inspection.

The master failing to produce or bring such documents, when required, is to forfeit £20.⁽¹⁾ Sec. 158.

BRITISH POSSESSIONS.

The next division of the Act, as its title indicates, relates, for the most part, so exclusively to the fiscal regulations of the British Possessions abroad, that it demands, for the purposes of the present work, little more than a cursory review, except, perhaps, with reference to those provisions, which have a direct bearing on the operations of trade between the United Kingdom and those Possessions, and, more particularly, such as affect the neighbouring islands in the Channel, and their intercourse with the mother country. Indeed, it is possible that, on the recent consolidation, the bulk of these retained provisions might, without inconvenience, have been expunged, together with some others then swept away from the Customs Code. The imposition of imperial duties in the Possessions abroad has been abolished; and the collection of their local imposts is now regulated by acts and ordinances of their own, subject only to approval and confirmation by the Home Government, and to the comprehensive provision contained in section 190 of this Act, which declares null and void all local Colonial Acts, bye laws, or customs, that are repugnant to the Imperial Laws, relating to the Customs, Trade and Navigation. The office of collector of Imperial Duties is obsolete, the Crown officers in the Possessions abroad being now denominated comptrollers of Customs and Navigation. Differential duties in favour of British Possessions produce, on importation into the United Kingdom, have almost ceased to exist; those on the important article of sugar, in process of assimilation, being prospectively abolished by the new Tariff in July next, when, of course, those clauses, which provide the machinery for certificates of production, so far as relates to the United Kingdom, will become obsolete.

be omitted—especially until full effect be given to the policy of leaving unshackled the government of the Colonies, as far as may be consistent with public safety and the rights of the British Crown. The re-enacted clauses relate more especially to the North American and West Indian Colonies and the Channel Islands.

ABSOLUTE PROHIBITIONS.

The first section, which claims attention, is that, which prohibits the importation or bringing into the British Possessions in America or the Mauritius, either by sea or inland carriage or navigation, the following goods :—

Base or counterfeit coin, and, except from the United Kingdom or any British Possession, gunpowder, ammunition, arms or utensils of war. Sec. 159.

RESTRICTIONS.

The same section prohibits, under pain of forfeiture the importation of the following goods, except to be warehoused for exportation only, into the Mauritius or any of the British Possessions in the continent of South America, or in the West Indies, but not including the Bahama and Bermuda Islands, unless extended to them by Order in Council, viz. :—

Sugar and molasses, until the 5th of July, 1854, such sugar not being refined in bond in the United Kingdom, and rum, such sugar, molasses and rum being of foreign produce or manufacture, or the produce of any British Possession within the limits of the East India Company's charter, with the proviso, that sugar or rum, the produce of any British Possession within those limits, into which the importation of sugar or rum, the produce of any foreign country, or of any British Possession into which foreign sugar or rum may be legally imported, has been prohibited, may be imported into any British Possession in the West Indies and South America, and into the Mauritius, such importations being accompanied by the certificates and proofs of produce required by this section,⁽¹⁾ to entitle them to entry as such. Ib.

INFRINGEMENTS OF COPYRIGHT.

Precautions against the introduction into the colonies of printed editions of copyright works are provided, similar to those afforded by the Table of Prohibitions (section 45) and its addendum (section 46), as to the United Kingdom. Sec. 160.

FOREIGN MANUFACTURES BEARING BRITISH MARKS.

Similar measures are adopted to prevent the introduction of spurious imitations of British manufactures.⁽¹⁾ Sec. 161.

GOODS DEEMED FOREIGN.

Sugar and molasses, until 5th of July 1854, and rum (though of British plantations), exported from parts of British America where the like goods, if foreign, may be imported, are, on their importation into those parts of British America or the Mauritius, where such foreign goods may not be imported, or, on their importation into the United Kingdom, to be deemed foreign and liable to duty accordingly, unless duly warehoused and exported from the warehouse. Sec. 162.

Goods and passengers are not to be conveyed from one part of any British Possession in Asia, Africa, or America to another part of the same possession except in British ships.⁽²⁾ Sec. 163.

POSSESSIONS' COASTING TRADE.

The master of any ship arriving in any of the British Possessions or the Channel Islands is required to proceed directly and before bulk be broken to the Custom-house, and to report in the same manner as the master of a ship arriving in the United Kingdom.⁽³⁾ If goods be unladen before report, or the master fail to report, or to report correctly, or to answer truly any questions put to him, he is to forfeit £50, besides the forfeiture of goods. Sec. 164.

ENTRY AND CONTENT OF SHIP.

The master of every ship bound from any British Possessions abroad, except the territories governed by the Presidencies in Bengal, Madras and Bombay, is to deliver to the officer of Customs an entry outwards of the ship, and a content of the cargo, if any, or state, that she is in ballast, if the fact be so, and answer questions concerning the ship, cargo, and voyage in the same manner as on the entry and departure of any ship from the United Kingdom,⁽¹⁾ and the proper officer is to give to the master a certificate of clearance,⁽²⁾ and, if the ship depart without clearance, or if the master give a false content, or do not truly answer the questions demanded of him, he is to forfeit £50.⁽³⁾ Sec. 165.

ENTRY OF GOODS.

Any person entering goods inwards or outwards is to deliver a bill of entry, containing the names of the ship, the master, and the place to or from which bound, and the particulars of the quality and quantity of the goods and the packages, stating also whether they are the produce of the British Possessions in America or not;⁽⁴⁾ whereupon the officer will grant his warrant for the lading or unlading. Sec. 166.

GOODS LADEN OR UNLADEN WITHOUT ENTRY FORFEITED.

No goods are to be laden or unladen, under pain of forfeiture, in the British Possessions of America or the Channel Islands without entry and warrant, nor, if in the Channel Islands, at any

The Commissioners of Customs may make regulations for the carriage coastwise or removal of goods for shipment in the Channel Islands.⁽¹⁾ Sec. 167.

GOODS FROM ANY POSSESSION NOT CLEARED AS SUCH DEEMED

TIMBER SHIPS TO HAVE THEIR CARGO BELOW DECK.⁽³⁾

Before any clearing officer permits any ship wholly or in part laden with timber and wood goods to clear out from any British

(1) Vide sections 199 to 204, as to regulations with respect to small craft, and note thereon.

(2) By section 78, imports into the United Kingdom, without certificates, are deemed foreign.

(3) The object of these provisions cannot be better explained than by a transcript of the recital, under which they were first introduced into the Statute Book. The 5 & 6 Vic. c. 17, passed "for the regulating of the carriage of cargoes of timber for one year," recites that "great loss of life and severe sufferings have been occasioned amongst the crews of ships and vessels laden with timber and wood goods from British ports in America, from the practice of having a portion of the cargo of such ships stowed on or above deck," and proceeds to interdict it. These provisions are perpetuated by 8 & 9 Vic. c. 45, and repealed by c. 84, and re-enacted by c. 93 of the same session, and now embodied in this Act. It will be observed, that the clearance of ships with cargo on deck is expressly forbidden, except as to store spars, and articles necessary for the ship's use. The privilege as to the latter not being defined, should the officer deem such spars, &c., excessive in quantity, he ought not to give port in North America, or in the settlement of Honduras, for any port in the United Kingdom, between the first of September and the first of May, he must ascertain, that the whole of the cargo is below deck, and shall give the master a certificate to that effect; and no master of any ship so laden shall sail without such certificate. Sec. 170.

When such certificate is obtained, no part of such cargo is to be placed or remain upon or above the deck, until the ship reaches her destination, unless the Master considers it necessary for the safety of the ship, in case of leakage or damage during the voyage. The store, spars, or other articles necessary for the ship's use are not deemed cargo. Sec. 171.

If any Master sail or attempt to sail without such certificate, or place any part of the cargo on or above the deck, contrary to the foregoing provisions, he is liable to a penalty not exceeding £100. Sec. 172.

TONNAGE DUES IN CANADA.

The tonnage dues in the Canadas and United States are to be reciprocal. Sec. 173.

PRODUCE OF STATE OF MAINE PRIVILEGED.

With reference to the treaty of the 9th August, 1852, certain produce of the parts of the State of Maine, watered by the river St. John and its tributaries, is put on the same footing as the produce of New Brunswick. Sec. 174.

NEWFOUNDLAND FISHING BOATS.

Particular regulations are made with reference to vessels clearing for the Newfoundland fisheries by Sec. 175.

CERTIFICATES OF PRODUCTION OF SUGAR AND SPIRITS.

Before any spirits or sugar are to be shipped for exportation in any British possession in America or the Mauritius as the prothe certificate. If the master venture to sail without the certificate, the responsibility rests with him to show good cause for its non-production on arrival.

duce thereof, the producer, the exporter, and the master of the ship in which such spirits or sugar are to be laden, are required respectively to subscribe a declaration before the Officer of Customs, that they are the produce of such possession, giving the names of the exporter, the ship, and the master, as well as the destination and other particulars required by the Act, on pain of forfeiture of the goods ; and if such goods be imported into any British American possession, as the produce thereof, or of the Mauritius, without certificate,⁽¹⁾ they will be forfeited. Sec. 176.

COLONIAL EXPORTS AND RE-EXPORTS.

Regulations are prescribed, as to the exportation and re-exportation of sugar and spirits between the colonies, for which see the Act. Sec. 177.

CERTIFICATES AS TO SUGAR AND WINE.

Regulations are also made for furnishing the certificates of production, required by sections 80 and 84 on the importation of East India sugar and British Possessions wine into the United Kingdom, for which see secs. 178 and 179. App. pp xci and xcii.

EXPORTS FROM CHANNEL ISLANDS.

On exportation from the Channel Islands to the United Kingdom, or into British America or the Mauritius, of goods, the growth and produce of the Channel Islands or of the United Kingdom, or manufactured in those islands from such produce or from materials either duty free in the United Kingdom or duty paid, and not drawn back, the exporter is to make a declaration of the facts before a Magistrate ; and the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Commander-in-Chief of the Island, on delivery to him of the declaration, will grant a certificate of such proof, stating therein in what ship the goods are to be exported and her destination ; and such certificate is to be produced at the place of destination, as evidence of such growth, produce, or manufacture.⁽²⁾ Sec. 180.

POSSESSIONS.

The next ten sections are of a miscellaneous character, peculiarly colonial in their application, and may, for the present purpose, be sufficiently described, as conferring upon officers of Customs in the colonies similar powers to those given to officers at home—providing for the condemnation of seized ships and goods—the course of procedure for recovery of penalties in the Colonial Courts of Admiralty—the application of such penalties when recovered—the right of the defendant to appeal, and the conditions upon which that privilege is conceded—the transfer to the ships and officers engaged in the suppression of the slave-trade, of every facility for making seizures, detaining slave-ships, prosecuting offenders, and enforcing forfeitures and penalties, which is given to the officers of Customs under the Act; and, lastly, the provision already alluded to, nullifying any colonial law, which conflicts with imperial legislation. Secs. 181 to 190. App. p. xciii, et seq.

CARRYING TRADE WITH THE CHANNEL ISLANDS.

The carrying of goods and passengers between the United Kingdom and the Channel Islands,⁽¹⁾ and between those islands inter se, is confined to British ships.⁽²⁾ Sec. 191.

RESTRICTIONS ON IMPORT AND EXPORT OF SPIRITS INTO AND ♦ FROM THE CHANNEL ISLANDS.

No spirits (except British Plantation rum) are to be,—imported into—or exported from—or removed from any one to another—or carried coastwise from one part to another—of the Channel Islands—or shipped in order to be removed—in any ship of less than 50 tons burden—or in casks of less size or content than twenty gallons, on pain of forfeiture of the goods, ship, or boat, as the case may be; but, these provisions are not to apply to spirits—imported in glass bottles, as part of the cargo—nor to spirits for the consumption of the crew and passengers during the voyage, and in necessary quantities only—nor, to warehoused goods exported from the United Kingdom in vessels of not less than 40 tons burden, being regular traders to those islands—⁽¹⁾ nor, to boats of less than 10 tons, conveying supplies to Sark of foreign spirits, to the extent of 10 gallons at a time from those islands, such boats being duly licensed to carry supplies to that island. Sec. 192.

⁽²⁾ This section, and the corresponding provision with respect to the home coasting trade (sec. 152), are repealed. Vide note ⁽¹⁾, p. 187.

IMPORTATION OF TOBACCO, &c., INTO THE CHANNEL ISLANDS.

Lastly, no tobacco, cigars, or snuff are to be imported into the Channel Islands, unless—in ships of not less than 120 tons burden⁽²⁾—and in hogsheads or cases, containing not less than 200 lbs. net weight—and in packages containing not less than 100 lbs. net weight of cigars.

This restriction, however, does not extend to importations from the United Kingdom into those islands, which may be made in ships of not less than fifty tons burden—or in regular traders of not less than forty tons⁽³⁾—and in packages of the same weight as may be imported into the United Kingdom ⁽⁴⁾. Tobacco imported into the Channel Islands contrary to the above provisions—or found on board any ship or boat within one league of their coasts—will be forfeited. Sec. 193.

⁽²⁾ By Treasury Order of 18th October, 1853, authority is given to the Board of Customs to permit the removal of tobacco, &c., should they see fit, in vessels of 50 tons or 40 tons, if regular traders with the Channel Islands.

⁽³⁾ For a similar provision as to the trade from the United Kingdom to the Channel Islands, see section 117.

⁽⁵⁾ By dependencies, the Island of Gozo, or Gaudisch, as the natives call it, is intended. For some interesting particulars, as to the geographical extent, trade, laws and customs of this island, and of the larger island to which it is annexed, see Clark on Colonial Law, pp. 711 to 722. The above provision became necessary in consequence of the repeal of the corresponding one in 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 52.

CHAPTER IV.

BONDS.

The frequency with which Bonds, or writings obligatory, have been referred to throughout the antecedent provisions of the Customs Code cannot have failed to be noticed. The practice of regulating and controlling revenue engagements by a description of contract of proved utility in other relations of life, would seem to have originated in a judicious perception of the necessities of Commerce.⁽¹⁾ It reflects no slender credit for moderation on the Customs laws, that they assume a penal character only when crime defies every milder restraint. Nor, is it less creditable to the character of our mercantile community, that securities involving a purely civil liability have, after the experience of a long course of years, been found efficacious enough to maintain that honest faith to the Crown, which dispenses with the necessity of too rigorous an interference with trade, and, without foregoing proper guarantees for upright conduct, claims and justifies official confidence. Thus it happens, that a vast proportion of the transactions between the merchant and the guardians of the Customs Revenue proceeds upon a species of civil contract, whilst the penal and criminal arm of the Customs law deals no blow, until some gross and fraudulent infraction of the obligations it enjoins, requires its interposition. Adopting thus largely this form of security, the law provides, that the bonds of minors shall be deemed valid, notwithstanding the established general principle, that bonds by infants are void ab initio, and cannot be confirmed after majority. But, this provision is not without its advantages to the subject as well as the Crown; where persons, having attained sufficient discretion, though not arrived at the strict point of legal majority, are empowered by law, to enter into bond.

(¹) The history of bonds to the Crown has been traced by a distinguished legal writer. It appears that almost contemporaneously with the enactment of the great body of statutes, which constituted the foundation of the public revenue, the attention of the Court of Exchequer was, in a great measure, occupied with the determination of matters arising out of the operation of those statutes. The crown debts arising from Parliamentary imposts, as now constituting the royal and national fiscal resources, absorbed almost the whole time of that Court. Inquisitions, post mortem, and ousterle-mains gave way to writs of diem clausit extremum and amoveas manus. Escheats and inquests of office were succeeded by seizures and commissions, forfeitures for offences against the navigation and revenue laws and informations for duties and penalties for frauds upon the Customs and Excise. Those persons, who had formerly been only accountants of the King, were easily converted into debtors, security in anticipation being generally taken from them in the shape of bonds and recognizances. The distringas and process nomine districtionis were superseded by the proceeding by scire facias on such bonds and recognizances, and by extents in chief and in aid against the obligors and cosurers themselves, and their sureties, and their lands and their debtors. The Court of Exchequer having become thus occupied with proceedings on those bonds, obligations, recognizances, and other specialities taken to the King in the King's Remembrancer's Office, the Treasurer's Remembrancer's Office had become nearly a sinecure. On the other hand, that of the King's Remembrancer's Office attracted to it almost the entire revenue business of the Court. Bonds to

Regulating, as bonds do, a large share of Customs and mercantile operations, the Act provides for the continuance and validity of all existing engagements of that nature. It also provides, that every bond relating to the Customs or for the performance of any condition relating thereto, is to be taken to the use of Her Majesty and, with the exception of warehousing bonds, which are of a comparatively enduring character, a period of three years is prescribed, as that, at the expiration of which, assuming the purposes the Crown had multiplied in proportion, as the Rolls of the King's rents, and his certain revenue had become diminished, and nearly all those bonds being given in respect to the Customs or Excise, and appertaining to that part of the revenue that were in fieri, were returned into the King's Remembrancer's Office. Numerous prosecutions were soon generated by the frauds and evasions, which were practised or attempted, the imposition of largely increased duties by Parliament, furnishing a powerful incentive to an infringement of the law.—Vide Price' Law of Exch., pp. 26, 27.

of the bond to be satisfied and its conditions fulfilled, the Commissioners of Customs may allow it to be cancelled.⁽¹⁾ Sec. 195.

JUDGMENTS ON BONDS MAY BE SATISFIED ON COMMISSIONERS CERTIFICATE.

If the Bond be entered or registered in accordance with the Acts for the entering up and registering judgments on bonds in England or Ireland, and its condition be satisfied, the obligor may obtain a certificate to that effect, from the Commissioners of Customs in the form prescribed by the Act, on production of which to the proper officer for entering or registering Judgments in either country, satisfaction will be entered. Sec. 196.

(¹) The eighth section of the 2 & 3 Vic. c. 11 provides inter alia that no judgment, or obligation, or specialty made to Her Majesty in pursuance of the 33rd Hen. VIII., is to affect lands, &c., as to purchasers or mortgagees unless and until a memorandum or minute, containing the name or last place of abode, and the title, trade, or profession, and, in the case of an obligation or specialty, the sum for which the obligee (sic in the authorised edition of the statutes) shall be bound, and the date of the same, &c., shall be left with the Master of the Court of Common Pleas, who is forthwith to enter the said particulars in a book, to be intituled, "The Index to Debtors and Accountants to the Crown," in alphabetical order, by the name of the person, whose estate is intended to be affected by such obligation—and sections 9 and 10 prescribe the mode by which Crown debtors may obtain a quietus, but which is not likely to be acted upon in preference to the direct, summary, and inexpensive means, afforded by this new provision in the Customs' Consolidation Act, though the option is still open to those debtors to resort to the mode of quietus, sanctioned by the 9th and 10th sections of the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11. It may be worthy of remark, that that Act contains no provision for the registration of Crown debts every five years, as in the case of judgments. The Irish Acts to the same effect are the 7 & 8 Vic. c. 90, and the 11 & 12 Vic. c. 120. In the administration of assets, all debts due to the Crown upon record or specialty must be paid in preference to any judgment or other debt due from the deceased debtor to a subject, 4 Barn. & Cress., 416n., and a debt by simple contract due to the Crown is to be preferred to a debt by bond due to a subject, Park. Rep. 104. It is proper here to observe that, under the Act of 6 & 7 Wm. IV. c. 28, and the amending Act of 1 & 2 Vic. c. 61, persons, who, instead of giving security by bond, prefer to transfer or deposit stock or Exchequer Bills, may do so in the joint names of the heads of Government Departments and their own. Provision is made, enabling the depositors to receive their own dividends.

A further alternative is afforded, of giving security, through the medium of the British Guarantee Association, of which many persons avail themselves, choosing rather to pay the premium required by the Society, than solicit friends to become sureties for them. The security afforded by this Association for such purposes has been approved by the Government.

PARTIAL DISCHARGE OF JUDGMENT DEBTOR'S ESTATE.

Under the former Statutes, great inconveniences were experienced by the obligors of bonds, upon which judgments had been entered up, owing to the effect of such judgment, as constituting by such entry, a specific charge upon the real and personal estate of the debtor. The estate, however valuable and extensive, became, by the entry of the judgment, wholly charged by it, whilst the debt due to the Crown might be of inconsiderable amount. The debtor could not, under such circumstances, dispose of any portion of the lands so charged, without a circuitous, dilatory and expensive course of proceeding. To remedy this, the Commissioners are now empowered, when satisfied of the reasonableness of the application, to issue a certificate under their hands exonerating from the operation of the judgment any portion of the debtor's estate. To facilitate this, a simple form of certificate is given in the Act.⁽¹⁾ Sec. 197.

MAKING FALSE DECLARATIONS AND ANSWERS, COUNTERFEITING DOCUMENTS, &c.

A penalty of £100 is imposed on any person guilty of any of the following offences ;⁽²⁾—Making or subscribing a false declaration, certificate, or other instrument.—Or, any false declaration for the consideration of the Commissioners.—Not answering truly questions put by officers. Counterfeiting or falsifying any document, relating to the Customs.—Or, wilfully using documents so counterfeited or falsified.—Fraudulently altering any document or instrument, or counterfeiting the seal, signature, initials, or other mark of, or used by, the officers of Customs for the verification of such document or instrument, or for the security of goods, or, any other purpose in the conduct of business, relating to the Customs, or under the control of the Commissioners or their officers. Sec. 198.

(¹) The facts having been brought under the consideration of the Commissioners on the application of the person seeking relief, and the request conceded, he has only to furnish the proper description of the lands or premises to be released, to the Solicitor for the Customs, who will thereupon procure the completion of the requisite certificate without charge.

(²) By sections 52 & 53, the like penalty is specially imposed on masters of ships making false answers, &c.

RESTRICTIONS AS TO SMALL CRAFT.

The Commissioners of Customs are charged not only with the duty of prosecuting all detected frauds upon the Revenue, but of preventing by anticipation, as far as possible, the commission of such offences. Hence, powers are given to them for the regulation and control of vessels under one hundred tons burden. The provisions of the law were very stringent, until within the last few years, with respect to the small craft around the coasts, which being the most convenient vehicles for smuggling, and of little value in comparison with the duties on the goods they were too frequently employed to convey, the necessity for vigilant control and supervision was obvious. Hence, the old law contained very rigid and penal provisions, and prescribed, at the same time, a system of security by licenses and bonds, which imposed considerable trouble on the owners of vessels, as well as the Customs. The improvements effected in our fiscal system and the removal of inducements to contraband trade by the reduction in duties appearing to justify a relaxation of these severe enactments. They were repealed in 1829, and the discretionary power, re-enacted in the provisions under consideration, was given to the Commissioners, who immediately acted upon them by promulgating regulations, relieving the great majority of the owners of small craft from the trouble involved in the licencing system, and the inconvenience attendant on giving bonds. The limits within which such vessels should be employed were laid down by general rules, instead of being prescribed by licence in each particular case, and these rules have again undergone further revision and relaxation.⁽¹⁾ The powers conferred by the Act may be briefly

(1) The following is an abstract of the regulations now in force.

REG. 1. Vessels under fifteen tons burden and open boats are limited to four leagues, seaward, from the coast between the North Foreland and Beachy Head; eight leagues, seaward, from any other part of the coast.

described, as giving the Commissioners a discretionary authority

REG. 2.—Open and half-decked vessels above fifteen tons are limited to four leagues, seaward, from the coast between the North Foreland and Beachy Head; twelve leagues, seaward, from any other part of the coast.

REG. 3.—Decked vessels and boats under forty tons are limited to four leagues, seaward, from the coast between the North Foreland and Beachy Head, and twelve leagues, seaward, from any other part of the coast, except those parts of the coasts of England and Ireland, which lie opposite each other.

REG. 4.—Vessels under one hundred tons are not to carry arms for resistance, nor more than one carriage or 'swivel gun, without shot, for distress signals, nor more than two muskets or fowling pieces for every five men.

REG. 5.—Vessels under forty tons belonging to the Channel Islands are limited only northward four leagues from the Caskets.

REG. 6.—Manx vessels under forty tons are limited to eight leagues, seaward, from the island.

Note.—These regulations do not apply to steam vessels nor their boats whilst so employed, nor to vessels employed in pleasure, and not for hire, nor to vessels bond fide employed in fishing, or assisting ships in distress, beyond the limits, the Commissioners of the Customs or the collector or comptroller, being satisfied as to the facts, and the masters and owners of the vessels being men of good character.

REG. 7.—No extension of limits is allowed unless on application from the owner to the Commissioners, showing the ground and object; whereupon if the Commissioners or collector and comptroller are satisfied, and (having regard to the general character of the owner and master, and other circumstances,) approve the extension of the limits, special licence for such time, and under such conditions as they see fit, will be granted.

REG. 8.—When any vessel is required in case of emergency to carry Government messengers and despatches on Her Majesty's service to the opposite coasts of the continent of Europe from Dover, Folkestone, or other ports approved by the Commissioners, the collectors, comptrollers, or other authorised officers being satisfied of the facts, may grant a pass, endorsing the object of the voyage, the destination, and the time of departure, and the master immediately on his return is to deliver to the collector, comptroller, or other acting officer at the place of arrival, the pass with a certificate thereon under the hand of the messenger conveyed, or of the party receiving the despatch, of the time of landing or delivery, proving that the object of the voyage has been carried out within a reasonable time.

Reg. 9.—These regulations commenced from the 5th January last, but all licences granted before that day are deemed valid until revoked.—G. O. Dec. 22nd, 1853.

NOTICE.—Any vessel used, armed, navigated, or employed beyond the to prescribe with reference to the tonnage, build, or description of vessels under one hundred tons burden ;⁽¹⁾ the limits within, and the manner in, which they may be employed, and, if armed, the number and description of arms and the quantity of ammunition. And the Act still gives the Commissioners power to grant special licences, on such terms, as they may deem expedient, in cases, where parties may have occasion for an extension of the privileges conferred by the general regulations.

Incident to the power of making general regulations, that of rescinding, altering and varying them, is conferred. Infraction of those regulations, or of the conditions of licences, when granted, is punishable by forfeiture of the vessel, and that forfeiture extends to licenced vessels found without having their licences on board. Sec. 199, and 202 inclusive.

SMALL CRAFT CONVEYING UNCUSTOMED OR PROHIBITED GOODS FORFEITED.

Any vessel of the class above described, removing or conveying prohibited or uncustomed goods is forfeited,⁽²⁾ and the owner and master are each liable to a penalty equal to the value of the vessel, but not exceeding in any case £500. Sec. 203.

THE REGULATIONS AS TO SMALL CRAFT TO EXTEND TO THE CHANNEL ISLANDS.

All the regulations now in force, or hereafter to be made, with respect to small craft, are to extend to the Channel Islands. Sec. 204.

SHIPS, &C., NOT TO SAIL FROM CHANNEL ISLANDS WITHOUT CLEARANCE.

A further provision, with respect to those Islands, requires, that any ship or boat, owned wholly or partially by British subjects, limits assigned by, or contrary to the regulations, is liable to forfeiture, unless the vessel has on board a special licence or pass, for the purpose under the 7th and 8th Regulation.

(¹) These restrictions were, under the now repealed Act, extended to vessels of 170 tons burden.

(²) By section 222, all vessels, carriages, &c., used in conveyance of smuggled goods, are forfeited.

sailing from them, is to have a clearance, whether laden with cargo or in ballast. If with a cargo, the master is to give bond in double the value for its due landing at the port of destination. Such ship or boat without a clearance,⁽¹⁾ or with a clearance, being found light, or having discharged any part of the cargo, before arrival at the port or place for which cleared, will be forfeited. Sec. 205.

FURTHER PROVISIONS AS TO SHIPS GENERALLY.

The owner of every ship, belonging wholly or in part to British subjects, is required to paint outside the stern of each of her boats the name of the ship, and of the place to which she belongs, and inside the transom, the name of the master, in white or yellow Roman letters, not less than two inches in length, on a black ground; and the owner of any boat, not belonging to such ship, is required to have his name and that of the port to which she belongs, painted in a similar manner on the stern, on pain of forfeiture. Secs. 206 and 207.

SHIPS HAVING CONCEALED PLACES FOR RUNNING GOODS.

Another restraint upon frauds on the Revenue is provided by a statutory rule, that British ships having false bulk heads or bows, double sides or bottoms, or any disguised place for the concealment of goods, or any pipe or device for running goods, will be forfeited. The same penalty attaches in respect of foreign ships coming into the United Kingdom, having dutiable or prohibited goods concealed in, or by means of, similar fraudulent contrivances. Sec. 208.

SMUGGLING.

Smuggling, according to Blackstone, is the offence of importing or exporting goods without paying the duties imposed on them by the laws of Customs and Excise. But, there are various things which, though not coming strictly within that definition, but partaking of its character and obviously directed by the same design, amount to smuggling under the Customs laws, and are visited according to the degree of guilt by appropriate punishments.

It is not only with the leading and direct offence of smuggling, therefore, but with the various shades of offence, which may be committed in aid of it, that the succeeding sections of the Act deal. These extend from 209 to 253 inclusively; the first twenty applying to cases of forfeiture of the vessel or goods, or both conjointly, and the remainder, to acts, the responsibility of which attaches personally to the offender. In both classes of cases it has been deemed expedient, though not without some very important modifications and improvements, to re-enact the provisions of the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 87.

Under the first of these sections, as to smuggling, all goods enumerated in the subjoined classification, together with any goods found packed with, or used in concealing them, are liable to forfeiture.⁽¹⁾ Dutiable goods unshipped in the United Kingdom, Customs or other duties not being paid or secured.⁽²⁾

(²) The term "secured," as here used, applies to the mode in which the Crown obtains cognizance of, and charge over, goods imported, for security of duty, from the time of importation, until the duty is actually paid, or the goods exported or otherwise accounted for. This can only be understood by reference to the several provisions of the Act, by which the security is prescribed.

1st. The general supervision by officers boarding import ships. Secs. 47 and 48.

2ndly. The report of the master of the ship, by which the Customs are, or ought to be, apprised of all the goods imported as the foundation for their operations. Secs. 51, 61 and 62, 65 to 68, and 74.

3rdly. The entry by the importer, consignee, &c., of the goods, according to their character and attendant circumstances, for duty, sec. 55; for the warehouse, sec. 58; as free, sec. 60; by bill of lading, secs. 61 and 62; as reimported, sec. 65; entries generally, secs. 66, 67 and 68; by master or owner, sec. 74.

4thly. The proper authority for unshipping.

If these goods be unshipped without compliance with the foregoing

Prohibited goods imported into any part of the United King-regulations, it is an unshipment of goods, the duties not being first secured. Vide note, (1) p. 112.

From the moment when due entry ought to be made, and is not made, goods are to be deemed illegally unshipped, and subject to the consequences of being so; and those persons only, who are afterwards concerned in removing or harbouring them, knowing them to have been illegally unshipped, that is, knowing that a perfect entry has not been made or that the duties have not been paid, are liable to the penalties. Per Parke, Baron, in the Att.-Gen. v. Hurel, 11 Mee. & W. 589.

The unshipping of goods, though in some cases not unlawful ab initio, may become so by reason of any subsequent fraud. Per Baron Rolfe in Regina v. Candy, Exchequer, 15 May, 1848, MSS. Rep. "In strictness," said the learned Baron, in his charge to the jury, "the duty, before the goods can be landed, ought to be paid—prima facie, it is an obligation to pay the duty before the goods are landed, but, inasmuch as that is often impossible, because the consignees cannot state, what the goods are and the particulars cannot be declared, the Act of Parliament has enacted, that it shall be lawful for the parties, on making a certain declaration, to land goods in the first instance, by what is called a bill of sight—that is to say, to cause them to be landed, in order that the contents of the packages may be examined, that the correct duty may be charged. Although they then are in one sense unshipped without the payment of the duty, yet the law says, that shall be lawful with this proviso added to the enactment, that, if after that, any fraud takes place, whereby they are illegally removed without paying the duty, then that authority to land on a bill of sight should be deemed as it were, as if it had never been given, and the whole transaction shall be illegal from the beginning. That I understand to be what was ruled by Lord Abinger the other day, and I, in deference to him, if I had thought otherwise, should have given the same direction in point of law, but I do not at all shelter myself from responsibility under the authority of his direction, for undoubtedly, if there had been no such direction, I should have given the same in point of law. I conceive, although prima facie, it was lawful to land, in order that the goods should be examined, yet, if that was only part of the scheme of the parties, to get them by some contrivance fraudulently, and abstract them without paying the duty, the whole thing is one transaction, and it is altogether an illegal unshipping."

There must be a fraudulent removal of the goods to render their unshipment illegal. A removal with the proper sanction of the Customs will not make the transaction illegal ab initio. "In my opinion," says Baron Rolfe, in the same charge, "if there is no fraud,—if the parties bona fide land their goods under a bill of sight to have them examined, and are then (perfectly intending to do right) told by the authorities at the Custom House, that the duties are so and so, and they are at liberty by reason of these being fancy goods, to remove them and pay the duty, a fortnight or some other time hence, and dom.⁽¹⁾ Goods clandestinely or illegally removed from any warehouse,⁽²⁾ or other place of security, in which they may have been deposited for home consumption or exportation. Goods prohibited to be exported, put on board any ship or brought to any quay or other place to be shipped for exportation. Goods prohibited to be exported found in any package produced to any officer as containing goods not so prohibited. Goods subject to duty or restriction on importation or prohibited to be imported, found concealed on board any ship or boat within any port in the United Kingdom. Goods of the latter class found, either before or after landing, to have been so concealed on board in such port. Sec. 209.

they bona fide (always assuming that) intend to do right, having the goods fairly examined, and being told, that is the duty, and the only irregularity is (for it is an irregularity), that the goods are removed one day, and the duty not paid, until that day fortnight, by direction of the authorities, being told it is lawful for them to do so, they afterwards, paying all the duty,—I must own, until I have very distinct authority to show me, that it has been decided, that this is a violation of the Act of Parliament, I never can so direct a jury. The penalties are imposed upon persons, who shall be concerned in unshipping. I think by all the context, it must mean, illegally unshipping without paying the duties on the goods, or causing them to be removed without payment of the duties. Now, suppose for instance, a party has goods (and I wish, in these observations, to be considered as addressing myself to the bar,) and for the mutual convenience of himself and the Customs, has given abundant security to the Customs, that all duty shall be regularly paid, and the Customs say, it is more convenient to settle it every fortnight, can it be said, that the party has violated the law, because he has done that which the Customs told him to do? I never can hold, that that makes the having landed those goods an illegal unshipping of them, within the meaning of the Act of Parliament."

(¹) Contraband goods may be seized in the river before they are landed or offered for sale. Smith v. Reynolds, 2 Wils. 257. Johnson v. Saunders, 1 B. and P., 267. Att.-Gen. v. Delano, 6 Price, 383.

(²) The statute 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 53, s. 44, (corresponding with this section) enacts, that goods taken or delivered out of any warehouse, not having been duly entered, shall be forfeited. The King's warehouse is a warehouse within this clause. Att.-Gen. v. Foudière, 1 C. M. & R. 571. 5 Tyr. 211; Loce v. Att.-Gen. 2 C. M. & R. 544; 1 Gale, 249; 5 Tyr. 1133.

REMOVAL OF SPIRITS AND TOBACCO WITHOUT PERMIT.

Spirits and tobacco found removing without permit or certificate,⁽¹⁾ are to be deemed unshipped without payment of duty, unless the contrary be proved by the person in whose possession they are found. Sec. 210.

RESTRICTED GOODS SEIZED, TO BE DEEMED RUN.

In proceeding to enforce any forfeiture or penalty in the case of goods seized under the Customs or Excise laws, the importation of which is in any way restricted, such goods are deemed liable to, and unshipped without payment of, duty, unless the contrary be proved, and it is sufficient so to describe them in the information. Sec. 211.

SHIPS ILLEGALLY USED WITHIN CERTAIN DISTANCES, FORFEITED.

If any ship or boat belonging, wholly or in part, to British subjects, or having half the persons on board such subjects, be found or discovered to have been within four leagues of that part of the coast, which lies between the North Foreland and Beechy Head, or within eight leagues of any other part of the coast of the United Kingdom—or, if any foreign ship or boat having on board one or more British subjects, be found or discovered to have been within three leagues of the coast of the United Kingdom—or, if any foreign ship or boat be found or discovered to have been within one league of the United Kingdom,—or if any ship or boat be found or discovered to have been within one league of the Channel Islands—the ship or boat so found or discovered to have been within the distances so respectively defined, having, or having previously had, on board, or attached thereto, or conveying, or having conveyed, any spirits in vessels of less than twenty gallons content at the least—or, tea exceeding six pounds weight in the whole—or, tobacco or snuff in packages or casks not containing two hundred pounds weight at the least⁽¹⁾—or, being separated or divided in any manner within any cask or package—or, any tobacco stalks, tobacco stalk flour, snuff work,—or, cordage, or other article adapted for slinging or sinking small casks—or, any casks or vessels of less content than twenty gallons of the description used for smuggling spirits—in every such case, the spirits, tea, tobacco, tobacco stalks, tobacco stalk flour, and snuff work, together with the casks or packages containing them, and the cordage and other articles above enumerated, and also the ship or boat will be forfeited.⁽²⁾ Sec 212.

SHIPS WITH PROHIBITED GOODS, &c., ON BOARD, FORFEITED.

Vessels found or discovered to have been within any port, river, bay, harbour, or creek of the United Kingdom, or the Channel Islands, having, or having had, on board, or in any manner attached to them, or conveying, or having conveyed any of the goods mentioned in the preceding section in casks or packages of less than the capacity therein specified, will, together with such goods, be forfeited. But, if it shall be made to appear to the Commissioners of Customs, that there was no privity, neglect, nor want of reasonable care on the part of the master, they may waive the forfeiture of the vessel. Sec. 213.

(¹) These quantities are given with reference to the general restrictions, but if the goods be legal importations in the smaller sized packages, permitted to be imported from particular places on the necessary proof being given, they will fall within the exceptions, contained in section 214, which, in case of prosecution, may be pleaded as matter of defence.

(²) A vessel is forfeited from the time of an act of smuggling, so as to avoid any alienation after that time, though before the condemnation. Locker v. Offley, 1 T. R. 260.

If a foreign vessel, having had on board goods, spirits, &c., which she has unshipped at more than a league from the shore, during the same voyage, appeared within one league, she is liable to forfeiture by the statute 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 53, s. 4 (corresponding with the present section). But she incurs the forfeiture in such case only by coming within the distance during the same voyage, and not by doing so in any subsequent or distinct voyages. Attorney Gen. v. Schiers, 2 C. M. & R. 286; 1 Gale, 223; 5 Tyr. 1029.

EXEMPTIONS FROM THE OPERATION OF THE FOREGOING REGULATION.

The provisions of the preceding section are not to apply to ships of one hundred and twenty tons burden or upwards on account of the following goods, according to the quantities thereof severally enumerated :—

Tobacco coming direct from the East Indies or the Turkish dominions, including Egypt, if in packages, each containing not less than one hundred pounds net weight of such tobacco.

Snuff or Negrohead tobacco the produce of, and imported direct from, the United States of America, if in packages, each containing not less than one hundred and fifty pounds net weight of such snuff or tobacco.

Tobacco imported from Malta in packages, each containing not less than eighty pounds net weight.

Tobacco, the produce of Porto Rico, Mexico, South America, St. Domingo, Cuba, the British Possessions in America and the West coast of Africa, if in packages, each containing not less than eighty pounds net weight of such tobacco, and imported direct from those places.

Cigars, if in packages, each containing not less than one hundred pounds net weight.

Cigarillos or cigarettes, if in packages, each containing not less than seventy-five pounds net weight.

Nor are the provisions of the 212 and 213th sections to apply to ships of fifty tons burden or upwards on account of the following articles :—

Tea, or spirits, in glass or stone bottles not exceeding three pints each, such tobacco, snuff, cigars, cigarillos, or cigarettes, tea, and spirits being part of the cargo ;

Spirits, tea or tobacco really intended for the consumption of the seamen or passengers on board during the voyage, and not more than the necessary quantity ;

Nor, to render any ship liable to forfeiture if really bound from one foreign port to another, and pursuing such voyage, wind and weather permitting. Sec. 214.

FURTHER CAUSES OF SHIP'S FORFEITURE.

If any ship come into port with a cargo, and be afterwards found light or in ballast, she will be liable to forfeiture, unless the master can explain the circumstance satisfactorily. Sec. 215.

If any ship wholly or partly British-owned, or having any British subject on board, come within four leagues of the coast between the North Foreland and Beechy Head, or within eight leagues of any other part of the coast, and any part of her lading shall have been thrown overboard—or any of the goods staved or destroyed to prevent seizure,⁽¹⁾ she will be liable to forfeiture. Sec. 216.

If any ship, being wholly or partly British-owned, or having one half of the persons on board British subjects, be found within one hundred leagues of the coast, and do not “bring-to” upon signal from any of the Queen’s ships—or if during chase, any of her lading be thrown overboard, staved, or destroyed, to prevent seizure, she will be liable to forfeiture.⁽²⁾ Sec. 217.

All persons escaping from any ship, British or foreign, during chase, are to be deemed British subjects, unless the contrary be proved. Sec. 217.

SHIPS NOT “BRINGING-TO,” MAY BE FIRED INTO.

Any vessel liable to seizure or examination, not “bringing-to” on being chased by any Queen’s ship, bearing her proper pendant and ensign hoisted, may be fired into; and the captain of such ship or those firing under his orders will not be liable to any proceeding by indictment or otherwise, for so doing. Sec. 218.

OFFICERS OF THE ARMY, NAVY, OR MARINES, OR OF THE CUSTOMS, MAY BOARD AND SEARCH SHIPS.

Any officer of the Army, Navy, or Marines, or of the Customs, producing his warrant, or deputation if required, may board ships within any port in the United Kingdom and search every part thereof, and remain on board, while such ships shall continue in port. Sec. 219.

OFFICERS OF CUSTOMS OR EXCISE MAY STOP AND SEARCH SUSPECTED CARTS, &c.

If any reasonable suspicion exists, that carts or other vehicles are carrying smuggled goods, any officer of Customs or Excise, may stop and search them, without being liable to any prosecution or action for so doing; and persons, refusing to allow such search, will forfeit £100 for every such offence. Sec 220.

HOUSES MAY BE SEARCHED UNDER WRITS OF ASSISTANCE.

So also, officers of Customs, having a writ of assistance from the proper Court, may, in the day time, search houses and other places, and, if resisted, break open doors, chests and other packages, and seize and carry to the Queen's Warehouse any uncustomed or prohibited goods, and avail themselves of the aid of constables, police, or other officers; and all such writs of assistance are to be in force during the reign in which they were granted and for six months afterwards. Sec. 221.

Ships, boats, or other modes of conveyance, and horses used in conveying or removing goods liable to forfeiture under the Customs laws will be forfeited.⁽¹⁾ Sec. 222.

AUTHORIZED OFFICERS MAY SEIZE SHIPS, BOATS, AND GOODS.

All ships, boats and goods liable to forfeiture may be seized and persons liable to detention may be detained by officers of the Army, Navy, or Marines, duly employed for the prevention of smuggling, and on full pay, or by officers of Customs or Excise, or persons duly authorised or employed for that purpose; and ships, boats and goods so seized are, as soon as convenient, to be delivered into the charge of the proper officer. The tackle, apparel and furniture of such ship or boat, and the packages in which such goods are found, together with their other contents, are included in the forfeiture. Sec. 223.

WAREHOUSE.

Goods stopped on the ground of their liability to forfeiture are to be brought to the Customs' warehouse nearest to the place of stoppage, and delivered to the proper officer of Customs, within forty-eight hours after stoppage and detention. Sec. 224.

GOODS STOPPED BY POLICE OFFICERS ON SUSPICION.

Such goods stopped by any police officer on suspicion of being stolen are to be brought to the police office to which the offender may be taken, to remain there for production at his trial. In such case, the officer is bound to give notice in writing to the Commissioners of Customs of the particulars of the detention; and, after the trial of the offender, the goods are to be conveyed to the Customs' warehouse to abide legal proceedings. Any police officer neglecting to convey the goods to such warehouse, as required, or to serve such notice, will forfeit the sum of £20. Sec. 225.

WRITTEN NOTICE OF GROUNDS OF SEIZURE TO BE GIVEN IN ALL CASES.

In any case of seizure of any ship, boat, or goods, as forfeited, the officer is bound to give notice in writing to the master or owner, if known, of the grounds of seizure, either by delivery personally, or by transmission through the post office, to his abode, if known; and such ship, boat, or goods are to be deemed condemned, and may be sold as such, unless such master or owner, or some other person authorised by him, give a written notice within one month from the date of seizure, if in London, to the seizing officer, or to the Secretary or Solicitor of Customs, and if elsewhere, to the seizing officer or the collector or comptroller of Customs or other chief officer at the port, that he claims or intends to claim the ship, boat, or goods so seized. Sec. 226.

COMMISSIONERS OF TREASURY OR CUSTOMS MAY RESTORE SEIZURES.

The Commissioners of the Treasury or of Customs may, by order, direct seizures to be restored, whether condemnation shall have taken place or not, on such terms as they may approve.

Sec. 227.

DISPOSAL OF SHIPS, BOATS, OR GOODS SEIZED.

Ships, boats, or goods, so seized and condemned, may be disposed of as soon as convenient after condemnation, by the Commissioners of Customs; and all fishing implements liable to forfeiture and seized under the 6th and 7th Victoria,⁽¹⁾ and the convention therein referred to, may be sold, unless claimed within one month after seizure, in the manner prescribed by section 226, with respect to other seizures. Sec. 228.

(1) The 6 & 7 Vic. c. 79 (passed in pursuance of a Convention between Her Majesty and the King of the French, for the guidance of the subjects of either sovereign, fishing between the coasts of England and France) after reciting, that it had been agreed by the high contracting parties to procure an enactment by the legislature of their respective countries, whereby certain proposed regulations for the conduct of the fisheries between their coasts should be carried into effect, prescribes by section 2 a distance of three miles from low water-mark as the limit, except as to bays, the mouths of which do not exceed ten miles in width, and which are reckoned from a line drawn from headland to headland, and reduces the limits of the pilchard fishery in Devon and Cornwall, prescribed by 18 & 14 Car. II. c. 28, with certain exceptions, to the same distance. By section 3 the appointment of persons to enforce the conditions of the Convention is authorised, and penalties enacted. By section 4 the Board of Trade is empowered to make rules and bye-laws, and to impose penalties not exceeding £5 for any breach, in respect of which no penalty is fixed by the Act, and to direct that "all nets, instruments, or implements of fishing used contrary to such rules and bye-laws, be forfeited, destroyed, or removed, as the case may require." Section 5, directs the publication of rules. Section 6 provides for the suspension of the articles in Ireland, while there is no mixed fishery there under 5 & 6 Vic. c. 106. Section 8 repeals the clauses of the latter Act, by which the Commissioners of Public Works are authorised to divide the coast of Ireland into districts for registering fishing vessels, and substitutes the collectors' districts. Section 9 enables officers, &c., of Her Majesty's cruisers, and the Coast Guard service, to enforce the provisions of the Act, and the Act regulates the course of procedure for recovery of penalties and punishment of offences, &c., &c.

PROVISIONS AFFECTING SMUGGLERS PERSONALLY.

As already observed, sections 209 to 228 affect the property in ships, boats and goods; but, the law, as contained in those sections, would not be adequate to repress the offence without the aid of additional enactments under which the parties criminally implicated would be held responsible. The first of those enactments authorises the search of any person, whether on board, or, if suspected, after landing, supposed to have uncustomed or prohibited goods secreted about his person. If he resist the officer in the discharge of this duty, he is liable to a penalty of £100.⁽¹⁾ So if a passenger, whether on board or after landing, denies, that he has any such goods in his possession, and it be afterwards found, that his denial is untrue, the goods found to be, or to have been, on his person are forfeited, and he is liable to an additional penalty of treble their value. Sec. 229.

CONDITIONS AS TO THE SEARCHING PERSONS.

The party about to be searched may, instead of submitting to search, in the first instance, require the officer to bring him before some magistrate, or before the collector, comptroller, or other chief officer of Customs, who, if he see no reasonable cause for search, may forego the same; but if he see such cause, may direct it to be made. The search of females is invariably to be made by women. Sec. 230.

On the request referred to in the foregoing section, the party is to be brought with all reasonable dispatch before the justice, collector, or other officer. Any officer requiring such personal search without reasonable cause, is liable to a penalty not exceeding £10. Sec. 231.

SPECIAL PERSONAL OFFENCES AND THEIR PENALTIES.

Any person guilty of any of the following offences, is liable to a penalty of £100, or treble the value of the goods referred to, at the election of the Commissioners of Customs.

Being concerned in importing or bringing into the United Kingdom any prohibited goods, or any goods, the importation of which is restricted, contrary to such prohibition or restriction, and whether the same be unshipped or not;—or unshipping or assisting or being otherwise concerned in the unshipping⁽¹⁾ of any goods, which are prohibited—or, of any goods which are restricted, and imported contrary to such restriction⁽²⁾—or, of any goods liable to duty, the duties whereon have not been paid or secured; ⁽³⁾—or knowingly harbouring keeping or concealing any such goods; ⁽⁴⁾

(1) The 44th section of the 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 53 [corresponding with section 232 of this Act,] enacts that “every person” who shall be concerned in the unshipping of goods, the duties for which have not been paid, &c., shall forfeit either treble the value thereof, or be liable to the penalty of £100. The defendant and his partner having been separately convicted of the same offences, held that each was liable to the penalties imposed by the Act. Per Lord Abinger, “I was at first struck with the apparent hardship of involving several partners in several separate penalties for the same identical act, but the words of the statute appear to me to be decisive of the question.” They are that “every person” who shall be concerned in the unshipping of any goods, the duties for which have not been paid, or shall be guilty of any of the other offences, mentioned in the section, shall be liable to the penalties there inflicted. Regina v. Dean, 12 Mee. & W. 43. Penalties are imposed as punishments. If three persons be convicted of a petty larceny, for which the punishment is (say three months imprisonment), the law would not be satisfied by committing them for one month each.

(2) Forfeiture of goods. Sec. 44.

(3) Vide note (1), p. 112, and note (1), p. 208.

(4) On section 232, the question of fraudulent concealment, within the meaning of the above words, has been the subject of frequent consideration under the corresponding provisions of the former law—generally, the mere finding of smuggled goods in a defendant’s dwelling-house is prima facie evidence of his having concealed them. “It is the occurrence of every day to commit on such evidence; and if the rule were otherwise, the laws would be inoperative. It is always competent to the defendant to prove his innocence, if he can; but the mere finding is prima facie evidence upon which these convictions proceed.” (Att.-Gen. v. Siddons, 1 C. & J. 224. per Alexander, L.C.B.) And the presumption is strengthened, when the goods are found under any circumstances of concealment. With regard to the intention to defraud Her Majesty of the duties, that must in every case be inferred from the circumstances. It is not necessary or proper, that a witness should depose, that the concealing was done fraudulently and with intent to deceive, for that would be to make the witness a judge of the defendant's intentions, which is not his province. His business is truly to relate the fact and the circumstances thereof, and from this the justices or jury are to determine both of the offence and the fraud (Ril. Ex. 81).

Being knowingly concerned in conveying, removing, depositing, concealing, or in any manner dealing with any goods liable to duties of Customs, with intent to defraud Her Majesty of such duties ;⁽²⁾—or being knowingly concerned in any fraudulent evasion or attempt at evasion of such duties.⁽³⁾ Sec. 232.

Connected with the subject of concealment is that of finding forfeited articles mixed with articles that are not forfeited, in which case, " if that which is not seizable is mixed with what is liable to seizure, so that the one cannot be separated from the other, the whole is forfeited. (Rex v. Sir Jos. Maubey, Loft, 179 ; Rex v. Villiers, Id. 199. Poph. 38 ; Colicill v. Reeves, 2 Campb., 576 ; Howard. Ex. 181.)

As to the evidence necessary to support an information for illegal unshipping and relanding, see Rex v. Dixon, 11 Price, 204 ; Att.-Gen. v. Towns, 6 Price, 196 ; and as to a fraudulent shipment with intent to reland, see Wilson v. Sanders, 1 Bos. & P., 267.

(²) Forfeiture of goods. Sec. 89.

(³) As to the forfeiture of the goods, vide sec. 93. An information for penalties under the 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 53 sec. 44 [corresponding with section 232,] charged the defendant with being concerned in the unshipping of goods, the duty on which had not been paid : with knowingly harbouring goods imported and illegally unshipped without payment of duties, and with other offences under that section. It appeared at the trial, that a practice prevailed at the Custom House of allowing the

OFFENCES WITH REFERENCE TO GOODS AFTER IMPORTATION.

A similar penalty is imposed on parties guilty of any of the following offences :—

1. Removing any goods imported into the United Kingdom from any ship, quay, wharf, or other place, previous to the examination thereof by the proper officer of Customs, unless under the care or authority of such officer ;⁽¹⁾—or removing or withdrawing from any quay, wharf, or other place, any goods entered to be warehoused, after the landing thereof, so that the taking of a sufficient account by the proper officer, or the due warehousing of the goods be evaded ;⁽²⁾—or assisting or being otherwise concerned in the removal or withdrawal of such goods ;—or knowingly harbouring, keeping, or concealing such goods ;—or permitting or suffering, or causing or procuring to be harboured, kept, or concealed, any such goods ;—and the same penalty attaches to persons to whose hands or possession such goods may knowingly come. PERSONAL OFFENCES AS TO TOBACCO, SNUFF, TEA AND SILK.

In addition to the penalty of £100, or treble the value of the goods, at the election of the Commissioners of Customs, the detention of the offenders (to be dealt with as directed by sections 237 to 240, and 281 to 284,) is authorised for any of the following offences :—

Unshipping, or aiding or being concerned in unshipping of any spirits, tobacco, snuff, tobacco stalks, tobacco stalk flour, or snuff work, or of any tea or silk, such tea or silk being of the value owners of imported goods to take them away without payment of duty at the time, an entry of them having been previously made in a book kept by the officers ; and that the fraud complained of had been effected by a clerk of the defendant removing some of the leaves from the Custom House books, and substituting others containing false entries of the goods imported. There was no direct proof, that this fact was known to the defendant, but he derived benefit from the fraudulent transaction. Held, that, under these circumstances, the jury might infer, that the defendant was privy to the fraud. Regina v. Dean, 12 Me. & W. 39.

of £10 or upwards,⁽¹⁾ liable to forfeiture under the Customs Laws;—carrying, conveying, or concealing, or being aiding, assisting or concerned in the carrying, conveying, or concealing of any such spirits, tobacco, snuff, tobacco stalks, tobacco stalk flour, or snuff work, or of any such tea or silk Sec. 284.

PERSONAL OFFENCES AS TO BEING FOUND ON BOARD A SHIP LIABLE TO FORFEITURE.

Any person (being a subject of Her Majesty,) being found, or discovered to have been on board any ship or boat, liable to forfeiture, for being found or discovered to have been within any of the distances in the Act mentioned from the United Kingdom or the Channel Islands, such ship or boat having on board or in any manner attached thereto or conveying or having conveyed in any manner such goods or things, as subject such ship or boat to forfeiture;—or who, being such subject, shall be found or discovered to have been within any such distances, on board any ship or boat from which any part of the cargo or lading shall have been thrown overboard, or staved, or destroyed, to prevent seizure;—or, who (not being a subject of Her Majesty) shall be found or discovered to have been on board any ship or boat, liable to forfeiture for any of the causes last aforesaid, within one league of the coast of the United Kingdom or of the Channel Islands, may be detained and taken before a justice, to be dealt with as directed by secs. 240, 281, and 287.

The punishment, annexed by the statute to the commission of any of the foregoing offences, is—

For the first offence, imprisonment in any House of Correction with hard labour for any term not less than six months, nor more than nine.

For the second offence, not less than nine months, nor more than twelve.

For the third or any subsequent offence, twelve months. Sec. 285.

(¹) The limitation of value under the repealed Act was £20.

PERSONS FOUND ON BOARD A SHIP LIABLE TO FORFEITURE.

Persons guilty of the following offences are on conviction liable to a penalty of £100, and to be detained, brought before a magistrate, and dealt with under sections 240, 281 and 284.

Being found or discovered to have been on board any ship or boat liable to forfeiture under this or any other Act relating to the Customs, for being found or discovered to have been within any port, bay, harbour, river or creek of the United Kingdom or of the Channel Islands, having on board or in any manner attached thereto—or having had on board or in any manner attached thereto—or conveying—or having conveyed in any manner, such goods or things as subject such ship or boat to forfeiture.

Or, who may be found or discovered to have been on board any of Her Majesty's ships or vessels,—or on board any ship or vessel in Her Majesty's employment or service,—or on board of any foreign post-office packet, being a national vessel, employed in carrying the mails between any foreign country and the United Kingdom, such last mentioned ships, vessels, or packets being found or discovered to have been within any port, bay, harbour, river, or creek of the United Kingdom or the Channel Islands, having on board or in any manner attached thereto,—or conveying or having conveyed in any manner, any spirits not being in a cask, or other vessel capable of containing liquids of the size or content of twenty gallons at the least,—or any tobacco or snuff, not being in a cask or package containing two hundred pounds weight of tobacco or snuff at least,—or being separated or divided in any manner within any cask or package. Sec. 236.

DETENTION OF ANY OF THE CREW OF A QUEEN'S SHIP.

When it becomes necessary to detain any of the crew⁽¹⁾ of any ship in Her Majesty's service liable to detention, the detaining officer is to give notice to the commanding officer of such ship, who is required to secure the party on board, until the detaining officer shall obtain a magistrate's warrant for bringing such person before him or any other magistrate, which warrant is to be granted to the detaining officer on his stating the grounds of detention. Sec. 237.

DETENTION OF ESCAPING OFFENDER.

In case of the non-detention of any offender at the time of committing the offence, or of his escape from custody, he may be detained at any time afterwards, and brought before a justice to be dealt with, as if he had been detained at the time of committing the offence. Sec. 238.

JUSTICES MAY ACT IN CERTAIN SMUGGLING CASES WITHOUT ORDER OF CUSTOMS.

Persons detained and brought before any justice for being found on board ships, &c., in any port, &c., of the United Kingdom, or Channel Islands (such ship conveying tobacco or spirits in packages or casks which would render her liable to forfeiture,⁽¹⁾—or, for unshipping any spirits or tobacco liable to forfeiture.⁽²⁾—or, for carrying, conveying, or concealing such spirits or tobacco,⁽³⁾—or, for aiding or being concerned in the carrying, conveying, or concealing of such spirits or tobacco—and it having appeared to such justice, that the quantity of spirits, in respect of which the party has been detained, does not exceed two gallons, or the quantity of tobacco, ten pounds weight, he may hear the case, and, without any information or direction of the Commissioners of Customs, convict the party, in lieu of any other penalty, in a sum not less than the single duty paid value, nor more than treble the duty paid value of the goods,⁽⁴⁾ and in default of payment, commit him to prison for any period not exceeding one month. Sec. 239.

(1) As to liability of ships to forfeiture, vide sec. 213, p. 212.

(2) As to liability of goods to forfeiture, vide Sec. 209, p. 207.

(3) As to permit or certificates and removals of tobacco, &c., vide last par. of note (2) p. 116; and Secs. 209 and 210, pp. 207 and 211.

(4) As to the mode of estimating the value, vide Sec. 258, p. 230.

JUSTICES MAY ORDER THE TEMPORARY DETENTION OF OFFENDERS.

If any Justice shall see reasonable cause for detaining any person brought before him, either in gaol or in the custody of the police, he may make an order for his detention, for such time as may be requisite for obtaining the order of the Commissioners of Customs or Inland Revenue,⁽¹⁾ or for preparing informations, convictions, and warrants of commitments;⁽²⁾ and at the expiration of such time, the party may be brought before such, or any other Justice, who is to hear the case. Sec. 240.

PARTIES DETAINED MAY BE ADMITTED TO BAIL

Here follows a new provision in favorem libertatis, the absence of which constituted an objectionable feature of the former law. No matter what the character, station or condition of the person detained, instead of being admitted to bail, he was liable to be at once committed to the common gaol. To remedy this, the party detained may now be liberated, on entering into a recognizance in the sum of £100, or in the amount of the penalty sought to be recovered, to appear at the place appointed for the hearing of the case. Ib.

OFFERING FOR SALE PRETENDED RUN OR PROHIBITED GOODS.

Any person offering for sale goods pretended to be prohibited or smuggled is liable to a penalty of treble the value of the goods, besides forfeiture of the latter, though neither prohibited nor dutiable. Sec. 241.

SMALL CASKS OF SPIRITS FLOATING OR SUNK TO BE TAKEN UP ONLY BY AUTHORIZED OFFICERS.

None but officers of the Navy, Customs, or Excise are to take up casks of spirits of less than twenty gallons found floating or sunk within one hundred leagues of the United Kingdom. Spirits taken up contrary to this provision together with the ship or boat in which they are found, are forfeited. Sec. 242.

⁽¹⁾ As to this order, vide sec. 301, p. 260.

REMISSION OR MITIGATION OF FINES OR PENALTIES.

The Commissioners of the Treasury or Customs may remit or mitigate fines or penalties, or release from custody persons committed under the Customs laws, on such terms as they may deem proper. Sec. 243.

SIGNALLING SMUGGLING VESSELS.

The law constitutes it a misdemeanor for any person after sunset and before sunrise, between the 1st of September and the 1st of April, or between the hours of 8 P.M. and 6 A.M. during the remainder of the year, to make or aid in making, any signal in, from, or on board any ship or boat, or from any part of the coast, or within six miles of it, for the purpose of giving notice to persons on board smuggling vessels, whether such persons be near enough to notice such signal or not. The person so offending may be arrested by any person, and brought before a Magistrate, who may commit him for trial; and, on the trial of any indictment⁽¹⁾ or information in such case, it is not necessary to prove that the ship or vessel was actually on the coast. The penalty on conviction is £100, or, at the discretion of the Court, a year's imprisonment with hard labour. Sec. 244.

The onus of disproving the intent laid in such indictment or information is upon the defendant. Sec. 245.

Any person may prevent signals, and go upon any lands for the purpose, without becoming liable to prosecution or action. Sec. 246.

ASSEMBLING TO RUN GOODS, AID SMUGGLERS, OR OBSTRUCT OFFICERS.

Persons assembled to the number of three or more for the purpose of unshipping, carrying, conveying, or concealing any spirits or tobacco, or any tea or silk being of the value of ten pounds or more, liable to forfeiture—and every person, who shall by any means procure or hire, or shall depute or authorise any other person to procure or hire, any person or persons to assemble for the purpose of being concerned in the landing or unshipping or carrying, conveying, or concealing, any goods, which are prohibited to be imported, or the duties for which have not been paid or secured, or, who shall obstruct any officer or officers of the Army, Navy, or Marines, being duly employed for the prevention of smuggling, or any officer or officers of Customs or Excise, or any person acting in his or their aid or assistance or duly employed for the prevention of smuggling, in the due seizing of any goods liable to forfeiture by this or any other Act relating to the Customs.—or who shall rescue, attempt or endeavour to rescue, or cause to be rescued, any goods, which have been duly seized—or, who shall before, or at, or after, any seizure, stave, break or otherwise destroy any goods to prevent the seizure thereof, or the securing of the same,—is, on conviction of any of the foregoing offences, liable, for the first offence, to be imprisoned with hard labour for not less than six months, nor more than twelve; for the second, for not less than nine months, nor more than twelve; and for the third or any subsequent offence, for twelve months. Sec. 247.

PERSONS ASSEMBLING ARMED TO ASSIST IN SMUGGLING.

So also, if any persons, to the number of three or more, armed⁽¹⁾ with fire-arms or other offensive weapons,⁽²⁾ shall, within the United Kingdom, or within the limits of any port, harbour or creek thereof be assembled in order to be aiding and assisting in the illegal landing, running, or carrying away of any prohibited goods, or any

(1) On the trial of an indictment under the corresponding section of the repealed Smuggling Act, it was held not to be necessary to prove, that all the parties were armed; if one or more be armed, and the others be present aiding or assisting, it will be sufficient (Rex v. Smith, Russ. & Ry. 386).

(2) Not only guns, pistols, daggers and other instruments of war, but also bludgeons, clubs, and such other things, as are not commonly used, except as weapons, are within the meaning of the statute (Rex v. Cosans, 1 Leach c.c. 42; Rex v. Hutchinson, ib.). But not a common whip Rex v. Fletcher, ib. 23), nor bats, which are long poles used by smugglers to carry tubs. (Rex v. Noakes 5 Car. & P. 226). And, where in the heat of an affray, the defendant caught up a hatchet accidentally, this was held not to be within the meaning of the statute (Rex v. Rose, 1 Leach c.c. 342).

goods liable to any duties, which have not been paid or secured.—or, in rescuing or taking away any such goods, as aforesaid from any officer of Customs, or other officer authorized to seize the same, or from any person or persons employed by or assisting them, or from the place where the same shall have been lodged by them,—or, in rescuing any person, who shall have been apprehended for any offence made felony by the Customs laws, or in preventing the apprehension of any person guilty of such offence,—or, in case any persons to the number of three or more so armed as aforesaid, shall, within the United Kingdom, or within the limits of any port, harbour, or creek thereof, be aiding or assisting the offenders,—shall be deemed guilty of felony, and be liable on conviction at the discretion of the Court to be transported⁽¹⁾ for life or for not less than fifteen years, or to be imprisoned for not less than three years. Sec. 248.

SHOOTING AT QUEEN'S SHIPS OR OFFICERS.

It is also made a felony, punishable, as under the preceding section, for any person maliciously to shoot at any ship belonging to Her Majesty, or in the service of the Revenue, or at any officer of the Army, Navy, Customs, or Excise, employed in the prevention of smuggling,⁽²⁾ and persons aiding and assisting are liable on conviction to similar punishment. Sec. 249.

(1) Nearly pari passu with the progress of this Act through Parliament, an important measure was proceeding, and ultimately found its way into the Statute-book, by which penal servitude has, in certain cases, been substituted for transportation. The Act referred to is the 16 & 17 Vic. c. 99. By this enactment it is provided, that no person shall in future be sentenced to transportation for any term less than fourteen years. Those liable to be transported for a less term are, in every instance, in which, but for the Act, that sentence might have been passed, henceforward to be sentenced to penal servitude for periods graduating according to the proportionate terms for which they might have been transported. For present purposes, it will be sufficient to state, that under the Act referred to, the punishment prescribed by section 248 of the Customs Consolidation Act may be strictly executed, that is, by transporting the offender for the term mentioned, or under section 3 of the 16 & 17 Vic. c. 99, the judge may award penal servitude for a term not less than six nor more than ten years. Applying the same graduating scale, the sentence of transportation for seven years, under section 250 and 251, would be commuted into penal servitude for four years.

(2) Provision is made for wounded officers by section 254.

PERSONS WITH MORE THAN FOUR OTHERS HAVING SMUGGLED GOODS, OR ONE OTHER ARMED OR DISGUISED.

Whoever, in company with more than four others, shall be found with any goods liable to forfeiture under the Customs or Excise Laws.—Or, in company with one other person within five miles of the sea-coast or of any tidal river, and carrying offensive arms or weapons, or disguised in any way—is, in either case, guilty of felony, and may be transported⁽¹⁾ for the term of seven years. Sec. 250.

ASSAULTING OR OBSTRUCTING OFFICERS.

Persons convicted of assaulting, resisting, or obstructing officers of the Army, Navy, Marines, Customs or Excise, duly employed for the prevention of smuggling, and on duty, are liable to seven years transportation, or, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned with hard labour for any term, not exceeding three years. Sec. 251.

VESSELS EMPLOYED IN THE PREVENTION OF SMUGGLING MAY BE HAULED ON SHORE.

Commanders, &c., of ships, engaged in the prevention of smuggling, are not to be subject to actions of trespass or other proceedings, for hauling their vessels on shore, or mooring them thereto, whenever they deem it convenient. Sec. 252.

For similar reasons, officers so engaged are privileged to patrol all parts of the coast, railways, shores and banks of rivers, creeks or inlets, (except gardens or pleasure grounds) without being liable to action or indictment. Sec. 253.

PROVISIONS FOR WOUNDED, AND WIDOWS OF KILLED, OFFICERS.

The Commissioners of Customs and of Inland Revenue, with the sanction of the Treasury, are authorized to make provision for officers of Customs or Inland Revenue, or seamen or others acting in their aid, wounded in the service, or for the widows and families of such as may have been killed in discharge of their duty. Sec. 254.

(1) Vide note (1), p. 228.

REWARDS TO OFFICERS.

The Commissioners of Customs may, in the event of any offender being convicted under the Customs laws, award to the officer or other person by whom the offender may have been apprehended, a reward not exceeding £20. Sec. 255.

Where any penalty or composition has been recovered against any person, the Commissioners may award such portion of it to the officer, who was instrumental in recovering it, as they may deem fit. Sec. 256.

The Commissioners also in cases of seizure may award to the officer such sum as they may deem fit, not exceeding, however, the value of the goods seized. The value of spirits and tobacco, is fixed by the Commissioners of the Treasury or of Customs.⁽¹⁾ Sec. 257.

In cases generally, where penalties ascertainable by value are sued for, the value is to be estimated at the current duty paid price in the market of the like sort of goods of the best quality, or the price of such goods in bond with the addition of the duties. To this rule there is an exception in respect of tobacco stalks, tobacco stalk flour, and snuff work, which, being prohibited articles, have no legal market value and are therefore directed to be taken at the duty paid value of unmanufactured tobacco. Sec. 258.

REWARDS TO OFFICERS OF ARMY, NAVY, &c.

The proportions in which rewards are to be distributed to officers of the Army, Navy, Marines or persons acting under the orders of the Admiralty, are governed by Order in Council, or Royal Proclamation. Sec. 259.

REWARDS TO PERSONS AIDING IN SEIZURES.

In the distribution of rewards for seizures, the Commissioners are authorized, where such seizures are attributable to the information, or instrumentality of persons, other than the officer, to appropriate to them such proportion, as they may deem expedient. Sec. 260.

Any person discovering spirits in casks of less than twenty gallons floating upon, or sunk in the sea, shall, on giving information to the officers of Customs, or other person legally empowered to seize such spirits, be entitled to such reward, on account of the seizure, as the Commissioners may deem proper. Sec. 261.

COLLUSIVE MISCONDUCT OF OFFICERS.

The provisions relating to collusive seizures are directed chiefly against officers guilty of any breach of faith to the service, and are of a highly penal character, the punishment being a penalty of £500 and perpetual incapacity to hold office again under the Crown. The officer incurs that liability in the following cases:—

If he make any collusive seizure,—or if he deliver up,—or make any agreement to deliver up,—or not to seize, any vessel or boat, or any goods liable to forfeiture.

If he take any bribe, gratuity, recompence or reward,⁽¹⁾ for the neglect or non-performance of his duty.

If he conspire or connive with any person to import or bring into the United Kingdom,—or the Channel Islands,—or any of the British Possessions abroad,—or be in any way concerned in the importation or bringing into the United Kingdom,—or the said Islands —or Possessions, of any goods, prohibited to be imported, or liable to duties of Customs, for the purpose of seizing any ship, boat, or goods, and obtaining any reward for such seizure or otherwise. Sec. 262.

COLLUSIVE TAMPERING WITH OFFICERS.

To discourage temptations to officers to betray their duty, persons tampering with them are also subjected to a heavy penalty.

Every person giving, offering, or promising any bribe, recompense or reward to, or making any collusive agreement with, any officer, to induce him, in any way, to neglect his duty, or to do, conceal, or connive at any act, whereby the Customs laws may be evaded, is liable to a penalty of £200. Ib.

(¹) Gratuities for ordinary duties are interdicted by section 3.

LEGAL PROCEEDINGS GENERALLY.

In treating of the former portions of the Act, but more particularly in the last chapter, the law with respect to the civil and criminal liabilities of offenders against the Customs' Revenue has been explained. Following the order of the statute, the mode of procedure to be adopted in each particular case comes next to be considered. Before entering upon this, however, the important change effected by the Act in regard to costs deserves notice.

It is enacted, that "in all Crown suits or proceedings for the recovery of any duty or penalty or the enforcement of any forfeiture under this or any Act relating to the Customs, the litigant parties shall be entitled to recover costs against each other, in the same manner, as in cases between subject and subject."⁽¹⁾

Having thus laid down the new law of costs, the Act goes on to provide, that, subject to certain exceptions subsequently provided for, all duties, penalties, and forfeitures incurred under the Customs laws, are to be sued for, prosecuted, and recovered by action,

(¹) By the rule, thus established, it would seem at first sight that the subject generally has been placed on a more advantageous footing; but, upon due consideration, it will be found, that it really improves the Crown's position; for, it appears by the evidence before the Select Committee of the House of Commons, in pursuance of whose recommendation, the reciprocal rule of costs has been adopted, that, during the preceding seven years, the Crown was successful in ninety-nine prosecutions out of every hundred, so that, had the defendants paid the costs, the Crown would have been a gainer to a very considerable amount; and assuming that the same reluctance to embark in uncertain and doubtful prosecutions which has of late years characterized the Customs Department, continue to be exercised, the benefits of the change will be felt but partially.

information,⁽¹⁾ or other appropriate proceeding in the Superior Courts⁽²⁾ of Common Law of the United Kingdom, or in the Royal

(²) In an information on the 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 53 section 44, (corresponding with section 232 of the Customs Consolidation Act), the venue being laid in Middlesex, one count charged the defendant with assisting and being concerned in unshipping goods liable to the duties of Customs, the duties for the same not having been first paid or secured. Another count charged him with harbouring and concealing goods, which had been illegally unshipped, the duties due thereon not being first paid or secured. Other counts charged the defendant with being concerned in the unshipping of goods prohibited to be imported, and which had been imported into the United Kingdom, and with harbouring goods prohibited to be imported, which had been imported, &c. It was proved on the trial that the defendant in England concerted with M. a plan for smuggling tobacco into Ireland; that, in performance of such concerted plan, he took on board his vessel on the high seas from a cutter despatched from Flushing for the purpose, a cargo of tobacco in illegal packages, sailed with it to Neath, in Glamorganshire, there took on board a quantity of culm, in order to conceal the tobacco, and sailed thence to Youghal, in Ireland, where he landed the tobacco; held, that the defendant was properly triable in England as having in England assisted and been concerned in an illegal unshipping of prohibited goods within the statute, viz., the transshipment of them from the foreign vessel to his own. Attorney-Gen. v. Catt, 3 Mee. & W. 18, 14.

In the beginning of 1832, A. then residing in England, entered into arrangements with B. for procuring a vessel for the purpose of smuggling tobacco into Ireland. The vessel was accordingly hired by them and proceeded on her voyage in June, 1832; and having taken on board a cargo of tobacco in the Flushing Roads arrived, and was unshipped at Cork on the 28th of July, 1833, without payment of the duties. An information was filed against A. on the 19th of July, 1836, founded on the 6 Geo. IV. c. 108, section 45, (corresponding with section 232 of the Customs Consolidation Act), for assisting and being otherwise concerned in the unshipping of the tobacco, the duties not having been paid; A. was not proved to have taken any part in the transaction further than above stated; held, that he was not triable on this information in England, per Lord Abinger, "it is clear that the part taken by the defendant was not in itself a participation in the act of unshipping: for the goods which he intended should be taken on board might never have been unshipped, or he might have given notice of abandoning the adventure, in which case it could never have been said, that he was concerned in the unshipping. The acts done by him were not the offence itself, but only evidence of it." Att.-Gen. v. Kenifick, 2 Mee. & W. 715.

Courts of the Islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark or Man, in the name of the Attorneys General for England or Ireland, the Lord Advocate of Scotland, or of some officer of Customs or Excise; and for the recovery and enforcement of any penalty or forfeiture, by information in the name of some officer of Customs or Excise, before any Justice or Justices in the United Kingdom, or any Governor, Deputy Governor, or Deemster, or other Magistrate in the Isle of Man or Channel Islands.⁽¹⁾ Sec. 263.

JURISDICTION, WHERE DUTIES OR PENALTIES DO NOT EXCEED £100.

Adapting itself to the spirit of a deservedly popular feature in modern legislation, and introducing into the transactions of commerce the conveniences for administering justice, which are afforded by the magistrates' Courts, the County Courts in England, the analogous Courts of the Assistant Barrister in Ireland, and the Sheriffs' Courts in Scotland, the hearing and determination of all informations, suits, or other proceedings in respect of seizures or forfeitures, where the amount claimed does not exceed £100, is withdrawn from the Superior Courts, and remitted to the Justices, County Court Judges, Assistant Barristers, and Sheriffs or their substitutes, and their jurisdiction is extended accordingly, with power to enforce or mitigate⁽²⁾ the penalties sought to be recovered. Ib.

REVESTING OF JURISDICTION IN PARTICULAR CASES BY THE CROWN.

Questions of extreme legal difficulty may present themselves, where the sum claimed by the Crown may be less than £100, and upon which it may be of the highest importance, to have the opinion of the judges of the Superior Courts, to provide for which, when such cases arise, the Commissioners of Customs are empowered to certify their opinion to the Commissioners of the Treasury, that questions of so grave a character are involved, as to render recourse to a Superior Court expedient, whereupon the Treasury may direct that course; and the substance of the Treasury order endorsed on the process of the Court, will be sufficient to restore to the Court jurisdiction to try the case.⁽¹⁾ Id.

⁽²⁾ This power of mitigation does not extend to the cases where parties are detained, as per sec. 281.

REVESTING OF JURISDICTION IN CERTAIN CASES AT THE ELECTION OF DEFENDANT.

In the same equitable spirit, the Act empowers the defendant, where the Justices' court may be resorted to by the Crown, and the amount claimed do not exceed £100, to claim the benefit of trial by a superior tribunal, in which case, all the defendant has to do, is to send his written request, either to the seizing officer or to the Solicitor of Customs; and where the proceedings have been instituted before any Justice, the latter, on notice to him by the defendant, shall adjourn the case for one week, to afford a proper opportunity for delivering such request⁽²⁾. An endorsement by the Solicitor of Customs on the process to be afterwards issued against defendant, that the latter prefers to have the case tried in the Superior Court, will be sufficient to restore jurisdiction to the latter to try the case⁽³⁾. But, where proceedings have been

(1) The form of endorsement prescribed by the Act is as follows: "By order of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury this case appearing to them to be a fit case to be tried in Her Majesty's Court of Exchequer." Vide note on next section.

(2) A case having arisen at the Liverpool Sessions under the above section, in which after a trial had been commenced and several witnesses examined on behalf of the Crown, the defendant applied to the Justices for an adjournment to afford the latter an opportunity of serving the necessary notice of his election to have the case tried by a Superior Court, upon which the opinion of the Attorney and Solicitor-General was taken as to right of the party to obtain an adjournment at that stage of the proceedings. Their opinion was as follows: "The option given by the statute must be exercised prior to the commencement of the trial before the Justices. If an information has been lodged before the Justices, the defendant may, by giving notice, insist on having the case tried in a Superior Court, but, if he allows the hearing on the information to be commenced, the reasonable and proper construction of the Act is, that the right of option is gone."

Jan. 19, 1854.

(3) The form of endorsement prescribed by the Act is as follows:—"On the requisition of defendant who prefers a trial by one of Her Majesty's Superior Courts of Law to a trial before Justices."

already commenced before any Justice, or the offender is in custody for default of bail, the proceedings are not to be so removed. It may also be observed, that the right here conferred on the defendant, of resorting to a Superior Court for trial, is not extended to cases where the proceedings have been commenced in the County, Civil Bill, or Sheriff's, Court. Sec. 264.

REMOVAL BY CONSENT FROM SUPERIOR COURTS TO MAGISTERIAL JURISDICTION.

In cases, where proceedings may have been actually commenced in a Superior Court, the Commissioners are empowered, on the written request of the defendant, to discontinue those proceedings and resort to Justices of the Peace, for which purpose the order of the Commissioners will be sufficient authority to the Magistrates to hear and determine the case. Sec. 265.

WHEN JUSTICES MAY ISSUE THEIR WARRANT TO HOLD OFFENDER TO BAIL.

Magistrates may issue their warrant and hold the offender to bail, in cases, where, if proceedings were brought in the Court of Exchequer, a capias might issue for that purpose⁽¹⁾. Information on oath, that the offence charged has been committed, is an essential preliminary to the issuing such warrant. The offender on being brought before any Justice, must enter into Recognizance,⁽²⁾ for his appearance on the day to be appointed for the hearing, in default whereof, he may, in the meantime, be committed to prison, or to the custody of the police. Sec. 266.

JUDGMENT NOT TO BE INVALIDATED WHEN SEVERAL PENALTIES ARE RECOVERED UNDER JOINT INFORMATION.

Persons may be sued jointly by one information or severally by separate ones, though they may have jointly and severally incurred

(²) By section 240, Justices are empowered to admit to bail on sufficient security by recognizance being given. Vide also Recognizance on capias, section 293.

the penalty; and in case of a proceeding against such several persons by joint information for recovery of the penalty or penalties so severally incurred by each, the penalty may be recovered, although one or other of the parties liable may have allowed judgment to go by confession or default, or, although the penalty, adjudged to be paid by one of such persons, differs in amount from that in which any other of them may be convicted, or, although any of such persons may be acquitted; and every judgment in such case shall be valid and irreversible by writ of error or otherwise.⁽¹⁾

(¹) Where several persons are charged with an offence, which is in its nature several, they will be heard at the same time if they appear, and they cannot claim to have their cases heard separately. If all do not appear, the proceeding can be ex parte with regard to those absent, and the others may be afterwards tried on the same or another information. 4 Mag. 225.

Where proceedings are taken against two or more persons for an offence which is joint and by which one penalty only is incurred, and some only have been apprehended or duly summoned at the time of the hearing, the hearing may either be adjourned, until the others are brought up (if those who are present consent to this course), or if the hearing take place, and a conviction be made, the absent parties cannot be afterwards convicted, (16 J. P. 511; 4 Mag. 225.) The omission of a particeps criminis cannot be taken advantage of by those, who are convicted. Stone's Man. 237.

It is sometimes contended, that, where the transaction is one and the same, though involving the commission of various offences, evidence can only be given of one penalty incurred. But the case of the Att.-General v. Towns has established a different rule in revenue cases. In that case the first count of the information charged the defendant with having incurred a penalty of £100, under the 17 Geo. III. c. 39 sec. 25, for being concerned in unshipping foreign glass without payment of the duty. The third charged him with having incurred another penalty of £100, under the 27th section of the same statute, for being concerned in unshipping British glass after having been shipped for exportation; and it averred the entering and shipping for the purpose of obtaining the drawback. The facts were these:—The master of the brig Unity, homeward bound, coming up the Thames from Amsterdam, was proved to have hired and sent off a boat and men, accompanied by one of his own crew, to bring away certain boxes of foreign and British glass lying on the sand below the Chapman's Head, on the Essex coast, to be landed at Woolwich, which they find lying as described, and bring as far as Gravesend, where the whole is seized by the Custom House officer. Evidence of the facts was held sufficient for the jury to bring in a verdict of the defendant being concerned in unshipping foreign glass without payment of duty, and in unshipping British glass shipped for exportation, subjecting the master of the vessel to the

This provision has been introduced for the purpose of avoiding an inconvenience consequent on the former state of the law, which involved the necessity of separate informations for recovery of penalties in almost all cases, where offenders were jointly and severally liable. Sec 267.

WHEN IMPRISONMENT MAY BE SUBSTITUTED FOR PAYMENT OF PENALTY.

In case of a verdict in any Court of Record, by which the defendant is convicted of any offence for which a pecuniary penalty is inflicted, the presiding Judge may in lieu of such penalty, sentence the offender to not less than six, nor more than twelve, months' imprisonment. Sec. 268.

PROCEEDINGS BEFORE JUSTICES.

It has been found a convenient means of facilitating the administration of justice to disentangle legal procedure from the technicalities and dilatoriness of scholastic pleading. The Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, and the Chancery Reform Acts of the year 1852, are successful examples of this laudable endeavour to do away with prolixities and subtleties, which have been found inimical, rather than auxiliary, to the just determination of a suit. The success, which has attended the adoption of a settled series of forms, annexed by way of schedule, to those important Acts, was sufficient to warrant a similar attempt at simplification of the forms in Customs proceedings and to which the following section has reference.

FORMS OF INFORMATIONS, SUMMONSES AND CONVICTIONS.

All informations exhibited before Justices for offences or forfeitures, under the Customs laws, and all summonses, convictions, condemnations, forfeitures and warrants may be in the form or to the effect prescribed by schedule B.^(*) And the form of in-penalties for both offences, though the whole was one transaction. Att.-Gen. v. Towns, 6 Price 198.

(¹) Similar powers are conferred on Justices by sections 284 and 287.

(²) The effect of this section is to simplify and shorten pleadings by formation and its various counts as given in that schedule are deemed applicable to, and sufficient with reference to any offences created by or punishable under the several sections of the Act to which they relate and in the prosecution of all such offences and forfeitures⁽¹⁾. Sec. 269.

information at the suit of the Crown in Customs cases. Under the former state of the law, these frequently extended to such a length as to create great inconvenience and perplexity to both Crown and subject, as well as to increase the expense. The evil of prolixity was not a little aggravated by the necessity for setting forth the offence charged or claim made, in a variety of counts, not easily distinguishable from each other; and all necessarily sinning against simplicity and succinctness. "The Common Law Procedure Act, 1851," superseding Wentworth and Chitty, as the pleader's guide in ordinary actions, avoids all interference with revenue pleading; that necessary reform being possibly reserved for future legislation. But the author's experience in revenue cases suggested to him that, in the preparation of the draft of the Customs Consolidation Act, a favourable opportunity presented itself for anticipating "the amending hand" of the Common Law Commission, by substituting a short and simple form of information instead of the complicated, technical, and verbose pleadings which the pre-existing law rendered essential; an evil which, unmindful of what that law required, some commentators on some recent Customs' suits have attributed to the legal department of the Customs.

(1) In every information for penalties a day certain is always fixed for the commission of the offence, but it is not necessary to prove on the trial, that the offence was committed on that particular day, it being sufficient, in support of the information, to prove the offence committed before the exhibiting of the information, and within the time limited by law. Res v. Chandler, 14 East, 274; Att.-Gen. v. Weeks, Bunb., 228; Res v. Brown, 1 M. & M., 163; Res v. Crisp, 7 East, 389; 2 Hawk. c. 23 sec. 89; How. Ex. 69. In like manner, as regards the alleged place of committing the offence, it is not necessary to prove it to have been committed at the place laid (except where the place forms an ingredient of the offence), provided it be not out of the Magistrate's jurisdiction. Charnock's case, 1 Salk., 261; 2 Hawk. c. 25 sec. 84; How. Ex. 38. The same rule applies to quantities and numbers. Certain quantities and numbers are always set forth in the information, but if a larger quantity or a greater number is stated in the information than is proved by the witnesses, the information will not be thereby vitiated; but, if the quantity and number proved are more and greater than stated in the information, the quantity and number stated in the information can only on the hearing of such information be condemned (Radford v. McIntosh, 3 T. R., 632; How. Ex. 140)—So, where an information charges an offence to have been committed in various ways, as in the case of an Excise prosecution, thus, "did tread, ram, and

WHERE SEVERAL FORMS ARE GIVEN UNDER THE SAME SECTION, THAT NEAREST APPLYING TO BE USED.

It has been observed, that some of the penal sections of the Act create a series of offences sometimes distinct in their character and degree. In this case, the count is to be used in which the offence is alleged according to the fact. Ib.

JOINDER OF COUNTS IN ONE INFORMATION.

So, where the offence consists of more than one violation of the law, the counts may be multiplied in one information, so as to set out each separate offence distinctly; and, where any offence is committed, for which no form is given in the schedule, a form of information may be adapted to the case, so unprovided for. The information in each of the foregoing cases, is to be deemed valid, that is, if it substantially follow the form prescribed, and is not in any respect materially defective, the obvious policy of the Act being to discountenance technical objections or anything tending to obstruct or prevent a hearing of the information upon the merits. Ib.

INFORMATION, &c. VALID IF OFFENCE SET OUT IN THE WORDS OF THE ACT.

Every such information, conviction, and warrant of commitment or condemnation, is to be deemed valid and sufficient, if the offence or forfeiture be set out, either in the words of the Act, or in the form of information given in the schedule; and, where the word "Customs," is used to describe Commissioners or officers of Customs, the words, "Inland Revenue or Excise," may be substituted, as the case may require. Ib.

FORMS OF INFORMATIONS, &c., IN SCHEDULE APPLICABLE IN ALL COURTS.

The next provision of this section effects an important reform in Customs revenue procedure. It is not in proceedings before the Justices alone, that the use of the short forms of Information is to be deemed sufficient. They may be used "in any Court having jurisdiction in such cases," under the Act. In other words, subject to the right to vary and adapt them, so as to set out the offence, they are to be employed in every Court of competent jurisdiction, and upheld by every such Court, as sufficiently alleging the offence. Ib.

CONVICTIONS, WARRANTS OF COMMITMENT, &C., NOT TO BE HELD VOID FOR DEFECT.

No conviction or warrant of commitment or condemnation is to be deemed void by reason of any defect therein ;⁽¹⁾ nor will any party be entitled to his discharge from custody by reason of such defect, if it be alleged in the warrant, that the party was convicted or if it be shown to the Court or Judge, that the conviction proceeded upon valid grounds. Ib.

EXECUTION OF WARRANTS BY OFFICERS OF CUSTOMS.

Every such warrant may be executed by any officer of Customs and in any part of the kingdom, without any other endorsement or sanction, than that of the Justice by whom it was issued. And no objection is to be allowed to any information, complaint or summons for any alleged defect in substance or form, or for any variance between such information, complaint or summons, and the evidence adduced on the part of the complainant. Ib.

ISSUING THE SUMMONS.

On exhibiting an information or complaint before any Justice for any offence against the Customs laws for which the defendant is not liable to be detained, or by which information any penalty or forfeiture is sought to be recovered, or any punishment of hard labour is sought to be inflicted, provided the information be exhibited within three years after the commission of the offence,⁽¹⁾ the Justice having jurisdiction in the matter, may issue his summons to the offender, stating shortly the subject of information or complaint, and requiring his attendance, at the time and place therein named, to answer such information or complaint, and be otherwise dealt with according to law. Sec. 270.

HOW SUMMONS TO BE SERVED.

The summons is to be served by any officer of Customs or Excise, or other person employed for the purpose, on the party, personally, or by leaving it at his last known place of abode or on board the ship to which he belongs or may have lately belonged⁽²⁾. Ib.

HEARING OF CASE ON DEFENDANT APPEARING.

If the party appears in pursuance of such summons, the case may be heard and determined, and on proof of the matter set out in the information or complaint, either by confession of the offender or the evidence of one or more credible witnesses, the Justice shall convict the party of the offence. Sec. 271.

HEARING OF CASE IN DEFENDANT'S ABSENCE.

If the defendant do not appear, on proof of service of the summons, the case may be heard ex parte and adjudicated upon, as if he had appeared. Sec. 272.

SUMMONS IN CASE OF FORFEITURE OF GOODS.

On information for forfeiture of goods, the Justice is to issue his summons to the owner or party from whom they were seized, requiring his attendance; (service of such summons to be effected, as prescribed by section 270,) and, on his appearance or default to appear, the matter may be heard. On proof of forfeiture, the goods may be condemned.⁽³⁾ Sec. 273.

SUMMONING WITNESSES.

Justices may summon witnesses, wherever they may be in the United Kingdom; and on failure to attend, (service of such summons being proved, as prescribed by section 270,) or, if appearing, in case of refusal to be sworn or give evidence, or, if a Quaker, to affirm or give evidence, he will, for every such offence, incur a penalty of £50.¹ Sec. 274.

JURISDICTION AS TO OFFENCES ON THE WATER.

When an offence is committed on the water, not within the limits of any county, or, if the officers have doubts as to such limits, it is to be treated, as an offence on the high seas, and for giving jurisdiction, every offence or cause of complaint is to be assumed to have been committed or to have arisen, either at the place of commission or the place on land, where the offender or person complained against may be found or be brought. Sec. 275.

JURISDICTION OF MAGISTRATES OF ADJOINING COUNTIES.

When the attendance of a Justice having jurisdiction in the county, in which the offence has been committed, cannot conveniently be procured, a Justice of any neighbouring or adjoining county, may hear and deal with the case, as if he were a Justice of the county, where the offence was, or was deemed to have been, committed. Sec. 276.

JURISDICTION OF COUNTY JUSTICES IN CITIES, &c.

In the event of the commission of any offence against the Act in any city, borough, liberty, division, franchise or town corporate, not only the Justices having jurisdiction therein, but Justices of action is tried, may certify that there was probable cause or, in other words, reasonable ground for the seizure, in which case the certificate will operate as a bar to the plaintiff's claim for damages and costs. Sec. 312.

the county, within which the same may be situate, are to have jurisdiction to hear and determine the case. Sec. 277.

JURISDICTION IN THE ISLE OF MAN AND CHANNEL ISLANDS.

As already shewn by section 263, (p. 232,) informations for the recovery or enforcement of any penalty or forfeiture in the Isle of Man or Channel Islands⁽¹⁾ may be exhibited before any Governor, Deputy-governor, Deemster⁽²⁾ or other Magistrate in those Islands, and, as a necessary incident thereto, all powers vested by the Act in any Justice of the peace are vested in, and may be exercised by the Governors, Deemsters, or other Magistrates of those Islands. Ib.

(1) There is but one Court of Judicature in the Island of Jersey, but, because matters are of more or less moment, this Court is distinguished into four classes. The first is called the Court of Inheritance, which is opened at the beginning of every term, and decides on questions arising in respect of real property. The second is the Court of Catel, or Chattels, in which actions upon simple contracts may be tried. The third is called the Extraordinary Court, and decides upon cases of arrears of rent, arrests, and distrainments. The fourth is the Saturday Court, and is subsidiary to the third. This last Court takes cognizance of mercantile causes and breaches of the peace. The four Courts thus distinguished constitute a Royal Court, having cognizance of all pleas, real, personal, mixed and criminal, treason and some other casus nimis ardui excepted, which are referred to the Queen in Council. As to the laws administered in those Courts vide Clark's Colonial Law, 701, and also the Acts of the State of Jersey, passed 1853. The Royal Court of Guernsey is thus described by the Commissioners of Inquiry in 1816, "The Royal Court is understood to have been erected by Royal Charter in the reign of King John for many public purposes. It is the sole local tribunal before which all legal controversies are carried for determination. It consists of the bailiff (named by the Crown) and twelve jurats. There are three terms in each year, each of which continues six weeks. It sits occasionally in vacation. From the decision of this Court an appeal lies to a Court called Cour d'Appel devant plus de jures."

(2) The Judges of the Isle of Man are so called from their having decided causes, as they deemed most conscientiously, by what were termed their Breast Laws. Lord Coke gives another derivation in 4 Inst., viz., that the word "Deemster" is derived from the Saxon word Dema, which means a Judge. The Deemsters are Judges both in civil and criminal cases, and their oath on entering office was to do justice between man and man, "as equally as the herring-bone lies between the two sides," in order that their daily food might remind them of their duty. Clark Col. Law, 724.

JURISDICTION OF JUSTICES OF GRAVESEND.

For the purposes of the Act, the jurisdiction of the Magistrates of the borough of Gravesend is to be deemed, as extending, on the Thames, from Yantlet Creek to Broadness Point in the Northfleet Hope, including any part of the river, within those limits. Ib.

COMMITMENT OF OFFENDERS ON NONPAYMENT OF PENALTY.

When any offender, not liable to detention,⁽¹⁾ fails to pay any penalty, in which he may be convicted, the convicting Justice may, by warrant under his hand and seal, commit such party to prison, until such penalty be paid. Sec. 278.

Such warrants may be executed in any part of the kingdom by officers of Customs, and, when hard labour is imposed, the Justice is to commit the offender to some house of correction accordingly.⁽²⁾ Sec. 279.

JUSTICES MAY MITIGATE PENALTY FOR FIRST OFFENCE.

Justices may mitigate any penalty incurred for a first offence (except in detention cases, sec. 281,) to one-fourth the amount in which the offender may be convicted. Sec. 280.

COMMITMENT ON NON-PAYMENT OF PENALTIES.

Any person liable to detention for any offence against the Customs' laws, and who, having been detained and convicted in any penalty, shall not immediately pay the same without mitigation, may be committed to prison, there to remain, until payment be made; or if it be an offence for which hard labour is inflicted, he may be committed to some house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for the period prescribed by law. Sec. 281.

PENALTIES AND FORFEITURES PAYABLE TO COMMISSIONERS OF CUSTOMS OR EXCISE.

Penalties and forfeitures recovered under the Customs laws are to be paid to the Commissioners of Customs and, under the Excise laws, to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, or to such persons as may be authorized by them, and are to be applied according to law ⁽¹⁾. Sec. 282.

(¹) By section 256, the Commissioners may award such portion of any penalties or compositions as they see fit to officers or other persons through whose instrumentality they were recovered; and, by section 257, may award to seizing officers any amount not exceeding the value of the seizure; and, by section 260, the distribution of rewards and penalties to officers or persons giving information is in the discretion of the Commissioners. As to spirits and tobacco the values are fixed by the Lords of the Treasury or the Board of Customs. The present scale is as follows:—

Damaged tobacco and snuff, not being worth the duty	per lb.	0	0 4

Ditto " Scotland	"	0	5 0
Ditto " Ireland	"	0	3 8

The following governing rule is adopted as a general criterion for regulating the rewards for seizures subject to increase or diminution, according to the merits of the officer.

Spirits, snuff and tobacco (cigars excepted)—

If the goods only be seized and condemned.	½
If the vessel or means of conveyance be seized and condemned, no person being detained	½
If, in addition to the goods and means of conveyance, one person (not being the only party concerned) be detained and convicted	½

If all parties, above the age of sixteen years, concerned in the transaction giving rise to the seizure be detained and convicted	¾

If the goods only be seized	¼ of the gross proceeds.
If the means of conveyance be seized and condemned, or any party be captured and convicted	½
Cattle and carriages	¾

Vessels and boats—

If taken into the Public Service, or broken up	¼ of the appraised value

PUNISHMENT OF OFFENDERS.

If an offender be imprisoned for non-payment of a penalty not amounting to £100, the gaoler is to discharge such offender at the end of six months from the date of his imprisonment. Sec. 283.

Where the penalty inflicted on any offender shall amount to, or exceed £100, it may be commuted into imprisonment, (if for a first offence,) for not less than six, nor more than nine months, and (if for a second,) at the discretion of the convicting Justice, for not less than six nor more than twelve months, with the addition of hard labour⁽¹⁾. Sec. 284.

In case there be no house of correction within the jurisdiction of the convicting Justice, he may commit the offender to any goal within such jurisdiction, in which the sentence of hard labour is, or can be executed, or to the house of correction, nearest to the place of conviction, for the time prescribed, whether it be for a first or second offence, as the case may be; and the Governor of such gaol or house of correction, is bound to receive the offender in obedience to such warrant and execute the sentence. Sec. 285.

In the case of females and of males labouring under physical infirmity the sentence of hard labour may be commuted into imprisonment, for the period during which the party would, but for this provision, be liable to be kept to hard labour; and in such cases the ground of mitigation is to be set forth in the warrant of commitment.⁽²⁾ Sec. 286.

By section 259, the rewards payable to officers, &c., in the army, navy or marines, or acting under the directions of the Admiralty, are distributable under Royal Proclamation or Order in Council.

⁽²⁾ In order to reduce the expense attendant upon the proof of criminal proceedings, it is provided by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, sec. 18 that, "whenever in any proceeding whatever it may be necessary to prove the trial, conviction, or acquittal of any person charged with any indictable offence, it shall not be necessary to produce the record of the conviction or acquittal of such person or a copy thereof, but it shall be sufficient, that it be certified, or purport to be certified, under the hand of the Clerk of the Court or

If, during the imprisonment, with hard labour, of any offender, it shall be made to appear, either to the convicting, or any other, Justice, that such offender had been formerly convicted of a similar offence, such Justice is to commit the offender further, for not less than nine, nor more than twelve, months from the date of the original commitment, which, for that purpose, may be amended without any special reference to its original contents; ⁽¹⁾ and the gaoler, who has the custody of the offender, is required, upon a written order of the Justice, to produce the prisoner before him. Sec. 287.

Any married woman not paying any penalty, in which she is convicted, is liable to imprisonment. Sec. 288.

MAINTENANCE OF IMPRISONED OFFENDERS.

Where any person is imprisoned, with hard labour, in any county, city, borough, liberty, division, franchise, or town corporate, the expense entailed on those places for the maintenance of such prisoner is to be paid by order of the Commissioners of the Treasury out of the Customs duties, and at such rate, as they may approve. Sec. 289.

So, in the case of a person imprisoned under Exchequer, or other process, the Commissioners of Customs may allow any sum, not exceeding seven pence halfpenny per day, for the subsistence of such person, to be paid out of the duties of Customs. Ib.

REMOVAL OF PROCEEDINGS BY CERTIORARI AND HABEAS CORPUS.

Before any offender shall be entitled to remove any proceed-other officer having the custody of the records of the Court, where such conviction or acquittal took place, or by the deputy of such clerk or other officer, that the paper produced is a copy of the record of the indictment, trial, conviction and judgment, or acquittal, as the case may be, omitting the formal parts thereof."

ings by Certiorari⁽¹⁾ or have his body brought up under a Writ of

(1) By the 5 & 6 Wm. IV. c. 83 sec. 2, the defendant's recognisance on removing indictments by certiorari is to be in such sum and with such sureties, as the Court or Judge shall endorse on the writ, and the conditions are to be the same as prescribed by 5 & 6 Wm. & M. c. 11 sec. 2, and the 8 & 9 Wm. III. c. 83 sec. 2. Where there are several defendants, a separate recognisance is required for each defendant, whose name is marked on the certiorari, as a party at whose instance it is sued out (Corner's Crown Practice, page 57).

The great distinction, in principle, between the use of the certiorari for removal of orders and summary convictions of inferior tribunals, and for removal of indictments is, that the certiorari will not, in general, lie to remove an indictment for a defect apparent on the face of it, especially after judgment, that being properly the subject of a writ of error, but as to orders and summary proceedings, a writ of error will not lie (Res v. Leighton Fort, 179; Res v. Lomas Comb., 297); and the writ of certiorari is therefore resorted to, as the only means for procuring a revision by a Superior Court.

A statute taking away the certiorari, in words, will not prevent the removal of a proceeding by certiorari, if it appear that the Justices have acted without jurisdiction, or exceeded their authority under the statute, not being then a proceeding under or justified by that statute. Per Ryder, C. J., Res v. Berkley and another. 1 Lord Kenyon, Rep. 99.

The rule for a certiorari in misdemeanors is absolute, in the first instance, and nisi in cases of felony (E. v. Spencer, 8 Dowl., 127; E. v. Worley, 1 Nev. & P., 28 n.); though sometimes in cases of misdemeanors the rule is nisi merely (Arch. Cr. Pr., 163; E. v. Bird, 2 Dowl. & L. 989.)

The practice of removing indictments by certiorari has been most materially altered and restrained by an Act of the last session, the 16 & 17 Vic. c. 80, sec. 4. After reciting that, "by reason of the establishment of a Court of Criminal Appeal, the removal of indictments by writs of certiorari is seldom necessary for the decision of questions of law, but is, nevertheless, sometimes resorted to for purposes of expense and delay." The 4th section enacts, "that no indictment except indictments against bodies corporate not authorised to appear by attorney in the Court in which the indictment is preferred, shall be removed into the Court of Queen's Bench, or into the Central Criminal Court, by writ of certiorari, either at the instance of the prosecutor or of the defendant (other than the Attorney-General acting on behalf of the Crown), unless it be made to appear to the Court out of which the writ is to issue by the party applying for the same, that a fair and impartial trial of the case cannot be had in the Court below, or that some question of law of more than usual difficulty and importance is likely to arise upon the trial, or that a view of the premises in respect whereof any indictment is preferred or a special jury may be required for a satisfactory trial of the same. The 5th section goes further, and provides, that no certiorari to remove an indictment shall issue unless the recognizance shall contain a provision binding the defendant to pay the prosecutor his costs incurred subsequent to such removal. In default of such recognizance as to costs, the trial to proceed in the Court below.

This provision as to costs applies solely to the costs of proceedings subsequent to the removal. The Court has no power to award costs in criminal proceedings in a Court below, although those costs might have been incurred by the defendant improperly suing out a certiorari, which is afterwards quashed (Res v. Higgins 5 Ad. & El., 554; 1 Nev. & P., 50: Res v. Passman, 1 Ad. & El., 603; Jones v. Davies, 1 Barn. & C., 143; Res v. Hassell, 5 Dowl., 531).

(1) The course formerly was to bring up the party into Court, but of late, where the Court think, upon hearing affidavits, that the party imprisoned will be discharged or bailed, and especially if he be unable to bear the expense of being brought before the Court or Judge, the Court of King's Bench will grant a rule to show cause, why he should not be bailed by a magistrate in the country; with a certiorari to return the depositions before them—Res v. Jones, 1 B. & Ald., 209; but where the validity of the commitment is to be discussed, the party must appear in Court, and the Court will never dispense with his presence, ex parte Martins, 9 Dowl., 194. On motion to discharge the prisoner the counsel for the prisoner should be first heard, then the counsel for the Crown, and then the counsel for the prisoner in reply. Res v. Baines, 11 A. & El., 213 n.; Carus Wilson's case, 7 Q. B., 984, new series.

By 16 & 17 Vict. c. 80, where a party is committed to prison under any criminal charge or sentence, and it may be necessary to have him examined as a witness in any cause, an application on affidavit may be made to one of the Secretaries of State or to any Judge of the superior Courts certifying the fact; and thereupon an order will be obtained, authorising his production before the Court, in which such cause is to be heard. And the prisoner so produced will, in all respects, be dealt with in the same manner as if brought up under a writ of habeas corpus.

The writ of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum runs to Jersey. A Baron of the Exchequer may in vacation time, under statute 1 & 2 Vic. c. 45 sec. 1, in exercise of the Common Law power, possessed before that statute by the Court of Q. B., issue such writ under the seal of the Court of Q. B. returnable in that Court in term time: and he may do so on affidavits entitled in the Exchequer, inasmuch as the application may be made to him as a Baron of the Exchequer, upon which application he may act in his discretion by making the writ returnable in the Q. B. Carus Wilson's case, 7 Ad. & El., 984, N. S.

In connection with the controlling power of the Court of Queen's Bench may be stated a decision of the Court, that it will not grant a mandamus to compel the Commissioners of Customs to deliver up goods placed rightfully in their custody to secure the duty, on a suggestion that the full amount of the duty has been since tendered or paid.—Per Littledale, J., his objections to the proceedings or conviction and on the return of the writ no objection, which is not set forth accordingly, is to be entertained by the court, and every information, conviction, or warrant of commitment may be amended by any Justice, before or after conviction. Sec. 290.

Another condition of the offender's removing the proceedings by Certiorari, is, that he shall give notice thereof to the Solicitor of Customs, and such notice must be proved by affidavit, before the Court can take cognizance of the return of the Certiorari. The notice must be served four clear days before the return of the writ, and four days must intervene between the date of the issue of the writ, and its return. All writs not issued in accordance with these directions, will be void. Sec. 291.

FEEs TO JUSTICES CLERKS.

Fees payable to Justices' clerks are regulated by a table, for which, see App. p. clxxxi. Sec. 292.

SUPERIOR COURTS.

EQUITY REVENUE JURISDICTION OF THE COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

In introducing the provisions of the Act, which relate to, and govern, the proceedings for recovery of penalties, as connected with the question of the jurisdiction of the superior tribunals in revenue cases, it may not be inappropriate to mention the important case of the Attorney-General v. Halling and others,⁽¹⁾ in which the question was raised, whether the equitable jurisdiction of the Court of Exchequer, in revenue cases, was taken away by the 5 Vict. cap. 5, s. 1. In that case an information in the nature of a bill was filed by the Attorney-General on the Equity side of the Court. It stated that the provisions of the then existing Customs Regulation Act, 3 & 4 Will. 4, cap. 52, required that every importer of any goods should, within fourteen days after the arrival of the importing ship, make perfect entry inwards of such goods, or entry by bill of sight. It charged the defendants and one of the officers of Customs, in collusion with them, with having made false and collusive entries, and with being indebted to the Crown in the amount of the difference between the duties at which the goods were entered, and the duties properly chargeable; and after setting forth several other transactions of a fraudulent nature, and that applications had been made to them for payment of the proper duties, which they refused, on the ground, that the goods did not belong to them, and were not imported on their behalf, it prayed a discovery, and that an account might be taken of the said duties, &c., and that a writ of subpoena might issue commanding the defendants to appear and answer and perform the decree of the Court. To this information the defendants demurred, and for cause of demurrer said, that the Court of Exchequer, wherein the said information was filed, had not any jurisdiction in, or over all or any of the matters and things in the said information set forth or referred to and with respect to which discovery and relief was sought from and against the defendants, and that no case was made to entitle the Attorney-General to such discovery or relief. The Attorney-General joined in demurrer. The case was argued at great length in Trinity Term, 1845, by James Parker and Bagshawe for the defendants, in support of the demurrer and by Jervis Attorney-General, Wray, and Wilde, for the Crown, the question discussed being, how far by the Statute 5 Vict. cap. 5, s. 1, the equity jurisdiction of the Court of Exchequer in matters of revenue was taken away. On the part of the defendant the judgment of Lord Langdale, M.R., in the case of the Attorney-General v. The Corporation of London, was relied on. The decision of the Court was pronounced by Pollock, C.B. in a most elaborate and luminous judgment. He reviewed the original jurisdiction of the Court, which he described to be exclusively a Court of Revenue, and availing itself of the forms of the Courts of Common Law and Equity, as circumstances might require. The extension of the jurisdiction by the suggestion, that ordinary suitors were debtors to the Crown and the introduction of the Writ of Quo Minus, which, in common cases, a defendant was not allowed to traverse, created a general Common law jurisdiction and by a similar fiction, bills in Equity were filed so as to make the Court a Court of equity, between subject and subject, the revenue side remaining as before and involving both pleas and equity. After tracing the subsequent history of the Court, the establishment of its Common Law jurisdiction by statute, the regulation of its equitable jurisdiction by the 57 Geo. 3, c. 18, by which the Lord Chief Baron, or, in his absence, one of the puisne barons was empowered to sit alone in equity cases, the learned Chief Baron said, that at the time, when the 5 Vict. c. 5, was passed the state of the Court was exactly this, that there was in the Exchequer a Court of revenue, held before the Treasurer, the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Barons, with equitable forms of procedure for the collection of the revenue, and a Court of revenue exercising a procedure proper to the other Courts of common law, and incidental to the general revenue Court, Courts of equity and Common Law, for its own officers and real Crown debtors.⁽¹⁾ The Lord Chief Baron, advertng to what had been done by the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 5, said, " We find by the words in the commencement, that all jurisdiction as a Court of Equity, and all jurisdiction conferred on the Exchequer by statute, is taken away. This, if taken literally, would have abolished the writ of summons, given to the Exchequer by statute, and would have reduced this Court to its ancient jurisdiction, as a mere Court of Revenue. But this is immediately restrained by an exception. It is there we are to look to find the reserved jurisdiction of the Exchequer. The first exception is of all powers possessed by or incident to it as a Court of Law, an exception in fact, out of the last branch-powers conferred by statute on the Court of Exchequer. Therefore, it has all the powers legal and equitable, which by statute or

"a mandamus to them in this case, would be like a mandamus to the Crown, which we cannot grant."—Res v. the Commissioners of Customs 5 Ad. & El., p. 381.

(1) In an information by the Attorney-General for penalties for a breach of the Revenue Laws, the Court of the Exchequer has no jurisdiction on motion by the defendant, either at common law or by statute, to direct a commission to issue for the examination of witnesses abroad: nor will it stay the proceedings until the Attorney-General consents to the issuing of such a commission. Att-Gen. v. Bovet, 15 Mee. & W. 60.

Common law, belong to the other superior Courts of common law. The second exception is of all powers possessed by it as a Court of Revenue. Now this must refer to its peculiar legal and equitable powers; for the previous reservation had already included all the powers, both legal and equitable, belonging to it by statute, as a mere Court of Common Law. If the second exception, however, had stopped there, it would have been almost as large as that out of which it was made; for the jurisdiction of the Court of Exchequer, originally exercised after the forms of Common law, and all its equity jurisdiction, arose either rightfully or by usurpation, out of its jurisdiction as a Court of Revenue. Its existing Common Law jurisdiction between subject and subject did not, and had, therefore, previously been saved. Consequently, the words on which the whole question turns, were added, "not heretofore exercised or exercisable by the same Court as a Court of Equity." What therefore do these words mean? Now, when we find that the Court of Exchequer had used its forms of equitable procedure from time immemorial, not merely for the collection of the Revenue, its proper duty, but also as a Court of Equity for its officers and Crown debtors in their ordinary affairs and further, by a suggestion not allowed to be traversed, for all the subjects of the realm, we think the only correct meaning of the whole reservation is, that the legislature take from the Court of Revenue this incidental jurisdiction, which it exercised as a mere Court of Equity, and confine its jurisdiction in future to the mere collection of the Revenue of the Crown, but with all the powers, which from time immemorial it has exercised for that particular object."

"Upon considering, therefore, all the circumstances, we have arrived at the conclusion, that the construction of the 5 Vic. c. 5, s. 1, which is the literal one, and which avoids all these inconveniences is, also the true one, and that the Court has, notwithstanding that act, retained all its actual and incidental jurisdiction, equitable as well as legal, which it has as a Court of Common Law, and has retained also all its proper jurisdiction as a Court of Revenue, for the collection of the Revenues of the Crown, whether the jurisdiction be exercised after the forms of Common Law or Equity ; but that it has lost all jurisdiction, as a Court of Equity, between its officers and crown debtors, and the other subjects of the realm, which was before incident to it as a Court of Revenue, and was exercised by it as a mere Court of equity ; and further that it has lost all its usurped jurisdiction as a Court of equity, between subject and subject, a jurisdiction which, though not really incident to it, was nevertheless at the time, when the Act passed exercised de facto by it as a mere Court of Equity in the Court of Revenue. The result is, that we have not arrived at the same conclusion, at which Lord Langdale arrived in the case of the Attorney-General v. The Corporation of London. It is due to that learned judge to say, that so far as appears from the report of the case and his judgment, these matters were never fully brought before his notice. We have, however, from respect to his authority, considered very deliberately the whole case, which very probably may not rest here, but will be carried to the highest tribunal for final determination. We cannot but think, that, if even it should turn out, that our construction is erroneous, this Court will not be left by the legislature so powerful for the charge and so impotent for the relief of the subject, as Lord Langdale's view of the statute would leave us. We think that this demurrer must be overruled and that there must be judgment for the Crown."

As to the general jurisdiction of the Exchequer in Revenue cases, it seems that, that Court will order the removal of an action into the office of Pleas, where it appears that the revenue of the Crown was concerned in the event of it (Lamb v. Gunman, Parker's R. 143, and Hammond's case, there referred to). See also note (1), p. 272.

PROCEEDINGS IN SUPERIOR COURTS FOR RECOVERY OF PENALTIES.

In any proceeding for recovery of penalties in the superior courts,⁽¹⁾ the process to be issued is to be either a subpoena or capias, as the Commissioners of Customs may elect. In either process the sum claimed by the Crown must be specified and in case of a capias the defendant is to be bound with two sureties to the party, to whom the capias shall have been directed, to appear in Court, on the day of its return, to answer any information.⁽¹⁾ He must also, at the time of appearing, be bound to Her Majesty, with two, or by leave of the Court, more sureties, to satisfy the penalties sued for, or such other sum, not exceeding such penalties, as the Commissioners of Customs,⁽²⁾ or the Judge on whose fiat the capias has been issued, may approve, in case of being convicted or yield his body to prison.

In default of giving such sureties the defendant is to be imprisoned. Sec. 293.

SERVICE OF SUBPŒNA.

Where the proceedings are commenced by writ of subpœna, in lieu of capias, the service will be good, if a copy be served either on the defendant personally, or by leaving it at his last known place of abode, or on board any ship, to which he may belong or have lately belonged. Sec. 294.

JUDGMENT IN DEFAULT OF A PLEA.

In the event of the defendant being imprisoned, in default of the required sureties, he is to be served with a copy of the information, either personally or by delivery to the goaler; and if he do not plead thereto, within twenty days from the date of such service, judgment will go by default; and, whether the judgment be obtained by default or verdict, if the defendant do not pay the sum

(1) A defendant arrested under a capias, under the statute 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 63 sec. 95 (and on the same principle under the corresponding sections of the Customs Consolidation Act), for an offence against the Customs Act, is not entitled to be discharged out of custody on the ground that no information was filed before the issuing of the capias. Attorney-Gen. v. Reilly, 12 Mee. & W., 217.

(2) In this case the amount of revenue involved is generally stated in the affidavits, and, as a rule, the Judge would naturally determine the amount of bail accordingly, though not unfrequently, on application for a fiat, the Judges have, on the suggestion of the Solicitor of Customs, fixed less amounts, though, in strictness, no legal authority for such suggestion existed.

recovered, execution⁽¹⁾ may thereupon issue, not only against his body, but against his real and personal estate, whether in his own possession or held by others, in trust for him, for the amount recovered and also the poundage, fees, and expenses of the execution. Sec. 295.

In case it shall be made to appear to the Court, that the offender has been previously convicted, the presiding judge may, under sec. 268, p. 238, instead of adjudging him to pay the penalty, sentence him to imprisonment in any house of correction for not less than six, nor more than twelve, months.

(¹) With respect to executions at the suit of the Crown, and to extents, it is to be observed, that, as against the Crown (the King not being named in the statute of frauds), an extent binds the goods from the teste of that writ; and, if the extent be tested before or on the day of the delivery to the sheriff of a writ of fleri facias, provided it be delivered before the goods are actually sold under the fleri facias. If the goods are sold under the fl. fa. it is otherwise, for by the sale the property is altered (Swain v. Morland, 1 Brod. & Bing., 370; 3 Moore, 740). The Court of Exchequer decided in the case of the King v. Wells and Alnutt, 16 East, 278 n., contrary to the decision of the Queen's Bench in that of Rorke v. Dayrell, 4 T. R., 402, and of the Common Pleas in the case of Uppom v. Sumner, 2 Blac., Rep., 1251, that if a fleri facias be delivered to the Sheriff, and after a seizure of goods but before sale, an extent be delivered to the Sheriff, tested after the delivery of the fleri facias, the extent shall be preferred. (Giles v. Grover, 1 Clark and Fin., p. 72). And in the Queen's Bench, the process sued out by the Crown against a defendant to recover penalties, upon which judgment for the Crown is afterwards obtained, entitles the Queen's execution to priority, within the statute 33 Hen. VIII. c. 39, sec. 74, before the execution of a subject, issued on a judgment recovered against the same defendant prior to the Queen's judgment, the Queen's writ, having been delivered to the Sheriff before the actual sale of the defendant's goods under the plaintiff's execution (Butler v. Butler, 1 East, 338).

The Crown is not bound by the bankrupt laws, and the appointment of assignees, has no relation to the Act of Bankruptcy so as to defeat any process awarded by the Crown previously to such appointment (Arch. B. Law, by Flather, 173). And the Crown process will be preferred, where the extent is tested on the same day as the appointment of assignees (Parker's Rep., 126; 4 Ver., 752).

Where a person is indebted by simple contract to the Crown at his death, and that debt is found upon a commission, a writ of diem clausit extremum may issue against his estate, though he was not debtor to the King by record at his death (Parker's Rep., 95).

EXECUTION MAY GO TO ANY SHERIFF.

The practice, as settled by the Common Law Procedure Act, is here adopted, authorizing the execution to be directed, in the first instance, to the sheriff of any county or other shrievalty at the request of the prosecutor, without reference to the county in which the venue is laid, or any suggestion of the issuing of a prior execution into such county. Sec. 296.

PAUPER DEFENDANTS.

Where the defendant is a pauper, he may, on verification of the fact by affidavit, to the satisfaction of the Court, have counsel and attorney assigned to defend him, who are required to act without fee. Sec. 297.

SPECIAL WARRANT TO ARREST.

On the request of the Solicitor, Assistant Solicitor of Customs, or other person acting on their behalf, the sheriff or other person accustomed to execute process, is required to grant a special warrant to the person whom such Solicitor, &c., may nominate ⁽¹⁾ by endorsement on the writ for the apprehension of any defendant

(1) In ordinary cases the appointment of a special bailiff may be proved by a written communication from the plaintiff to the Sheriff requesting the latter to grant a warrant on the writ, directed to the person named in such communication. Under the above section, no opportunity is left for debating the question of what may, or may not be, sufficient evidence of the appointment, the provision requiring the endorsement of the request of the solicitor, &c., on the process itself, being equally distinct and mandatory. Where a special bailiff has been appointed at the instance of the plaintiff, the Sheriff is not in general liable to be ruled by the plaintiff to return the writ (De Moranda v. Dunkin, 4 T. R., 119; Hamilton v. Dalziel, 2 Blac. Rep., 952). But, under special circumstances (of which notice should be given him, and an indemnity offered) he may be so ruled (Harding v. Holder, 9 Dowl., 659; 2 Man. & Gr., 914). The appointment of a special bailiff frees the Sheriff from liability to any action at plaintiff's suit for the bailiff's irregularity in the execution of the process (Pallister v. Pallister, 1 Chit. R., 614; Porter v. Viner, H., 613 a; Forde v. Leche, 6 Ad. & EL 699). And no liability in such case attaches to the Sheriff until the duty of the special bailiff is exhausted. But, the Sheriff would be liable after the duty of the special bailiff is performed, e.g., the arrest made and the prisoner delivered into the actual custody of the Sheriff (Taylor v. Richardson, against whom any capias shall have issued, and in case of neglect or refusal is liable to, on pain of incurring for default, the penalties usually incurred, in cases of default, by such sheriff or other person. Sec. 298.

Where any defendant arrested under such warrant escapes, the sheriff is to be indemnified; and where any party is so arrested, the gaoler of the proper prison is to receive and give a receipt for his body ⁽¹⁾. Sec. 299.

8 T. R., 505). These are questions between the person appointing the special bailiff and the Sheriff. To all other persons the Sheriff (as well as the plaintiff) must answer for the acts of the officer, who holds his warrant, whether under a special or common appointment. A special bailiff is subject to the same liabilities for extortion as an ordinary bailiff (Plevin v. Prince, 10 Ad. & El.): and as to liability of bailiffs, see Watson's Office of Sheriff, 44, 45.

It seems that, inasmuch as the office of bailiff is one of responsibility and trust, it cannot properly be entrusted to an infant (Cuckson v. Winter, 2 Man. & Ry., 313).

If a bailiff make an arrest before a warrant is delivered to him, he is a trespasser, nor will a warrant subsequently sealed and delivered to him legalize the arrest (Plomer v. Bull, 5 Ad. & El., 823). If the warrant be directed to one bailiff and he adds the name of another, or if the warrant be issued in blank, and the bailiff's name be afterwards inserted, the persons whose names would be so added or inserted would be trespassers for taking the defendant or his goods under such an authority (Housin v. Barrow, 6 T. R., 122, Burslem v. Fern, 2 Wils., 47). But it seems sufficient if the bailiff's name be inserted before the warrant is given out of the Sheriff's office, though after the sealing (Res v. Harris, 1 Russ. on Crimes, 513). And a mere verbal mistake does not vitiate the warrant (Williams v. Lewis, 1 Chit., 611). The authority given by the warrant, being for the administration of justice, is not to be strictly construed; therefore on a warrant to four bailiffs, jointly and severally, two may execute it (White v. Wiltshire, Palm., 52; Lashbroke's case, Hut., 127; Res v. Hobbs, Cro. Eliz., 913); but if the warrant be to several, jointly but not severally, they must all be acting in the execution of it (Boyd v. Durant, 2 Taunt., 161).

When any defendant arrested under capias gives bail to the sheriff, the bond, at the request and charge of the prosecutor, is to be assigned to Her Majesty,⁽¹⁾ the assignment being made by endorsement under the sheriff's hand in the presence of two or more witnesses, and without stamp, provided the proper stamp be affixed before the commencement of any suit upon it; and in case of forfeiture of such bond, the usual process on bonds originally made to the Crown, may issue. Sec. 300.

PROSECUTION BY INDICTMENT OR INFORMATION.

The Crown being exclusively concerned in the prevention of offences against the Revenue of Customs, reserves solely to itself the right of proceeding or suing the parties, charged with committing those offences, except as to the summary jurisdiction con-from the gaol to another place in the same county, even in the gaoler's custody, it is an escape (Williams v. Mostyn, 4 Mee. & W., 145).

It is very important, that in all cases where an arrest is made by virtue of a warrant, the warrant, if demanded, should be produced (Per Lord Kenyon, Hall v. Roche, 8 T. R., 188).

(1) The Sheriff, before the statute of 4 Anne c. 16, was not compellable to assign a bail bond taken by him on an arrest, although for refusing to assign it, the Courts would have amerced him; and, according to the old practice, the bail bond was never assigned until the Sheriff had been ruled to bring in the body (Etherick v. Cowper, 1 Salk., 99). And even after the Sheriff assigned the bond, the action must still have been brought in the name of the Sheriff, who might, of course, have released the action. But he is now bound to assign the bond to the plaintiff in whose name the action is to be brought. The 300th section of the Customs Consolidation Act varies the provisions of the corresponding section of the statute of Anne, to the extent of enacting, that no matter who may be the plaintiff on the record, the bail bond shall be assigned to the Crown in all cases.

Properly speaking, the plaintiff cannot take an assignment of the bail bond before it is forfeited (Dent v. Weston, 4 T. R., 4). The assignment must be while the original cause is pending in Court (Sparrow v. Naylor, 2 Blac. R., 876). It may be made by the High Sheriff or by the Under Sheriff, or his clerk, in the High Sheriff's name (Kitson v. Fagg, 1 Stra., 60; 10 Mod., 288, s. c.; Doe v. Brown, 5 Bar. & Ald., 248); and it must be made in the presence of two or more credible witnesses—(credible means disinterested witnesses); and an attestation by the plaintiff in the action and another person renders the assignment invalid (White v. Barrack, 2 Mee. & W., 425).

ferred on Justices in cases of detention⁽¹⁾. Every indictment or information, therefore, at the instance or suit of the Commissioners of Customs or of Inland Revenue, except in the detention cases just mentioned, must be commenced under the direction of the Commissioners of either of those departments, in the name of the Attorney-General for England or Ireland, or the Lord Advocate of Scotland, or of some officer of Customs or Excise, under the like direction⁽²⁾. Sec. 301.

So also, after the institution of any such proceeding by such Law Officer, he may, (if satisfied, that the fine, penalty or forfeiture sued for, was incurred without any fraudulent intention, or that it is inexpedient to proceed,) enter a nolle prosequi, on the indictment or information, as well with reference to any officer's proportionate share of the penalty, as that of the Queen. Sec. 302.

Every such indictment or information must be brought or exhibited within three years⁽³⁾ after the commission of the offence. Sec. 303.

(1) Vide section 239, p. 224.

(2) The mode of procedure for recovery of penalties and forfeitures has already been described in secs. 263 and 269.

(3) Upon the corresponding section of the Customs Act, 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 53, a question was raised (The Queen v. Thompson, 2 B. Rep. 832) as to whether the limitation of three years thereby created, applied to an indictment found by the grand jury of a county at the Assizes. It was held, that the section did not apply to such an indictment, but, exclusively, according to the language of the 120th section of the act, to "suits, indictments, or informations exhibited for any offence against this or any other Act relating to the Customs in any of His Majesty's Courts of Record at Westminster or in Dublin," &c. With respect to that point in the case (but which involved some others besides), the rule of the Court settled the question as to the effect of the statute of Wm. IV. in restricting the limitation to indictments in the Courts specifically mentioned. But, the above section of the Customs' Consolidation Act is framed in different terms, and with greater consideration for the subject. It substitutes for "the Courts of Record at Westminster," &c., the words "any Court;" and thereby may be construed to extend the limitation of three years to indictments found at the Assizes, as well as those found in the Superior Courts of Record at Westminster, Dublin and Edinburgh. In this respect only can any doubt exist as to the present application of the case of the Queen v. Thompson. As regards another leading point in that case (for several had arisen) viz., whether the limitation prescribed by the Act of Wm. IV. applies to an

Any indictment, prosecution or information relating to the Customs, and instituted or brought by direction of the Commissioners of Customs, may be tried in any county of that part of the kingdom whether of England, Scotland or Ireland, in which the offence was committed, in the same manner, as if it had been committed in the particular county in which the indictment or information shall be tried. Sec. 304.

EVIDENCE.

The general course of evidence is the same in Customs, as in other proceedings. In revenue prosecutions the evidence in support of the case of the Crown will sometimes happen to consist of that of accomplices or persons of depraved character, and it becomes, therefore necessary, to state the degree of confidence, which according to the best and most recent authorities, a jury may extend to such testimony. The general rule is thus stated by Mr. Starkie, in his Law of Evidence, (4th Ed., p. 821.) "A witness of depraved and abandoned character may not be unworthy of credit, where it appears that there is not the slightest motive or inducement for misrepresentation." But the doctrine is more distinctly stated by the present Lord Cranworth, in a case tried before him when one of the Barons of the Exchequer,⁽¹⁾ reiterated indictment, whenever preferred for a conspiracy at common law to defraud the Crown of duties, it is submitted, that the decision of the Court would now, as before, be in the negative.

(1) There is no law nor rule that can be laid down as to what is the quantity of infamy that is to render a person incapable of being believed, and what is the confirmation that juries ought to look to, and it is a matter from the nature of the thing incapable of regulation or definition a priori. You can only say, you must be guided, looking at the circumstances of the case, aye or no, do you feel that you can believe with confidence what he says. If you do, the circumstance of his being a man never so immoral, although he had aimed at the acme of infamy, is nothing. His infamy and the circumstances connected with his former life are only material, as being matters, that may or may not guide you to disbelieve what he says. Per Baron Rolfe in Regina v. Candy, Exchequer, MSS., May, 1843.

Another important question arose in the case just cited, viz., whether the non-production of matter of exculpation within the knowledge of the defendant ought not to be taken into consideration by a jury in weighing also by Chief Baron Pollock, in the case of the Attorney-General v. Lundy Exchequer, MSS. 1848.

There are certain matters of fact, however, with respect to which, the ordinary rules for the government of judicial testimony are modified, so as to facilitate the proofs on the trial of informations or indictments under the Customs laws.

the question of his non-liability or guilt upon this point, the following observation of Mr. Baron Rolfe in his charge to the jury, is worthy of attention.

"The Attorney-General said, if the account of the defendant is correct, why does he not produce his books, or some evidence about them? On the other hand the defendant says, why am I to be called on to prove my self innocent. It is for you to prove me guilty. This is a sort of vezata questio in all these inquiries, in all criminal inquiries, and at last only resolves itself into one of degree. When I lose my watch under circumstances that prove it pretty clear to my mind it is stolen, and a beggar in the street is found with it the next day, you may say, 'why, is he called on the next day to explain how he got it?' Why, only because the circumstances of suspicion are so strong that, if he does not explain, it, we must infer that he got it by some dishonest means. Here the question of the propriety of the observation of the Attorney-General depends on this,—Is the case on the whole, on the part of the Crown, supported by all those circumstances, and the evidence of B., such as it is, such as you can say, it satisfies me, unless the gentleman will explain it. Then, if that is so, the next step you will come to is this,—Has he the opportunity of explaining it? Because even upon suspicious testimony, if a story is told, coherent and confirmed by little circumstances, that evidently were not pre-arranged, but come out as it were accidentally; if such a story is told, and a story strongly fixing guilt on a party, I do not know that I can quite go the length of the Attorney-General to say, it is like a man that has got the pocket under his coat, and he would not choose to disclose it; at the same time I confess, under such circumstances, if I had the means of explaining it, I should feel I was bound to do so, because it is not a satisfactory mode of relying on my justification to say, 'that man is not worthy to be believed, if I have the means of clearing it up.' You must contrast the two observations with each other. If you think the story told by the Crown is really so utterly valueless, supported by testimony, which you must so entirely disregard, that you do not think anybody ought to be called on to give any answer at all to such statements, then there is no necessity for explanation. If, on the other hand, you think, bad as that man (B.) may be, but confirmed as he is by other circumstances calling for an answer, and the answer be given, it comes to be considered, whether the defendant has done all, that he can be fairly called on to do, to give the explanation."

In case of dispute, as to whether the duties have been paid on goods seized for non-payment of such duties, or, in case of any prosecution instituted for recovery of penalties, on the ground of unlawful importation or unshipment, or, where it is important to show, whence the goods were brought, the onus of proving, in the former instance, that the duties had been paid, or, in the latter, that the importation or unshipment was lawful, or, that the goods came from a particular place, lies upon the defendant. Sec. 305.

CERTAIN AVERMENTS DEEMED EVIDENCE UNLESS DISPROVED.

There are various matters, some of a comparatively formal character, and others which, as they fall peculiarly within the cognizance of the defendant, are, if not truly alleged, capable of easy disproof by him. These are when alleged in the information or proceedings to be deemed correctly stated, unless the contrary be proved on the part of the defendant, and are as follow :—

That the Commissioners of Customs or Inland Revenue have directed that any information or proceedings under the Customs Acts shall be preferred or instituted.

That any ship or boat is foreign or belongs wholly or in part to Her Majesty's subjects.

That any person detained or found on board any ship or boat liable to seizure is, or is not, a subject of Her Majesty.

That any goods thrown overboard, staved or destroyed, were so thrown overboard, staved or destroyed to prevent seizure.

That any goods thrown overboard, staved, or destroyed when chased by any ship or boat in Her Majesty's Revenue service were so thrown overboard, staved or destroyed to prevent seizure.

That any person is an officer of Customs or Excise.

That any person was employed for the prevention of smuggling.

That the offence was committed within the limits of any port.

That the offence was committed in the port named. Sec. 306.

So also where, upon any trial, questions arise, whether any person is an officer of the army, navy, or marines, duly employed in the prevention of smuggling, or is an officer of Customs or Excise, his testimony to the fact or other evidence of his having acted in that capacity is to be deemed sufficient, and, unless a case be made out by the defendant to the contrary without production of his commission or deputation; nor is the competency of such person as a witness, to be affected by any interest he may have in the whole or any part of any seizure or penalty, or by any reward to which he may be entitled on the conviction of the party charged. Sec. 307.

PROOF OF TREASURY, CUSTOMS, OR INLAND REVENUE ORDERS.

Where evidence of any order of the Treasury, Customs, or Inland Revenue is necessary, the production of such order or any letter or instructions referring to it, officially received by any officer of Customs or Excise for his government, and under which he has acted, is sufficient proof of such order.⁽¹⁾ Sec. 308.

ENTRY OF APPEARANCES AND CLAIMS BY OWNERS OF SEIZED VESSELS OR GOODS.

When, by any information the forfeiture of any seized vessel or goods is sought, no appearance or claim is to be admitted thereto, unless made in the true name of the owner, with a statement of his residence, business or profession; nor, if residing in London, Dublin, or Edinburgh, or within the liberties thereof, unless he make oath, before a Judge of the Court, in which the proceedings have been instituted, that the ship or goods belonged to him at the time of seizure; nor, if he reside elsewhere, unless his attorney, proposing to enter such appearance or claim, make oath, that he has been authorised to do so by the owner, and that to the best of his knowledge and belief, the goods were, at the time of seizure the property of the person, in whose name the claim or appearance is to be entered. In default of such proofs, the ship or goods are to be condemned and judgment entered thereon, according to the practice of the Court, in default of appearance. Sec. 309.

APPEARANCE AND CLAIMS IN CASE OF JOINT STOCK COMPANIES AND COPARTNERSHIPS.

When vessels or goods⁽¹⁾ belonging to more than five co-partners, are under seizure, it will be sufficient for any two of them, resident as above, to make the verifying oath of ownership. Sec. 310.

In like manner, where the property seized belongs to any joint stock company or partnership firm, actually carrying on trade in the United Kingdom, the claim and appearance may be entered, and the oath made, by the public officer of such company, or any one of the partners of such firm, or their agent. Sec. 311.

Parties making false oaths in the foregoing cases will be guilty of perjury, and punishable accordingly. Ib.

ACTIONS BARRED BY CERTIFICATE OF PROBABLE CAUSE OF SEIZURE.

It may sometimes happen, that an information, in respect of a seizure, cannot be legally supported; and this from a variety of causes, such as the absence or death of witnesses, between the seizure and the time of trial, failure on some technical ground, or the difficulty which is often considerable, of procuring evidence of transactions, which from their very nature are conducted with the greatest possible secrecy, although the officer may have had very cogent reasons for making the seizure. The claimant may, therefore, in such a case be successful in obtaining a verdict, and the Judge may feel bound, on the evidence, to direct a jury to find a verdict for him, although he may be of opinion, that the officer was sufficiently warranted by circumstances in making the seizure. If then the Judge, before whom the case is tried, certify on the record, that there was probable cause of seizure, such certificate will be a bar to any action or suit, which the successful claimant may attempt to prosecute against the seizing officer, and may be so pleaded.⁽¹⁾ The production of such certificate or a copy of it verified by the officer of the Court will be, in such case, sufficient evidence.

There may be also cases, in which from similar circumstances it may not be deemed expedient to proceed by information or suit, or in which, if prosecuted, condemnation of the seizure may have ensued from default of claim, &c.; in any of which cases, the facts would not come before the Court, and consequently no certificate could be given, or the case might be tried and yet no certificate be asked or given. If, therefore, any action, indictment, suit or other proceeding be instituted and brought to trial against any person on account of any seizure, whether any information shall have been brought to trial for the condemnation or not, and the plaintiff obtain a verdict, the Judge before whom such action, indictment, or other proceeding is tried is empowered to certify on the record or other written proceeding that there was probable cause for the seizure⁽²⁾ on account of which such action or indictment is brought. The effect of this certificate will be to limit the plaintiff's damages in such action to

(1) The existence of probable cause was formerly treated as a question or inference of law (Cox v. Worrall, Cro. Jac., 198). In later times it was not unfrequently treated, as a question of fact for the jury (Caudell v. London, 1 T. R., 520 s.). It is, however, now conclusively settled, that it is a question of law. "In the more simple cases," said Tindal, C.J., in delivering the judgment of the Court of Exchequer Chamber in Panton v. Williams, 2 Q. B., 169, when this question depends entirely on the proof of the facts and circumstances, which gave rise to and attended the prosecution, no doubt has ever existed from the time of the earliest authorities, but that such is a question of law to be decided by the Judge."

(2) A Judge's certificate in an action of trespass against Custom-house officers for entering the plaintiff's house, &c., and seizing his goods, "that there was a probable cause for the seizure," was held to cover the seizure only, and not to extend to damages for the deterioration of the goods seized, whilst in the officer's possession (Laugher v. Breffitt, 5 B. & Ald., 762; D. & R., 417).

twopence, and to deprive him of costs; and, on any indictment or other proceeding, it will protect the officer from any other liability than the nominal fine of one shilling. Sec. 312.

It need scarcely be stated, that such a certificate, in case of trial, will be in the nature of a direction to the jury, and the endorsement of its purport upon the record will give consistency to the whole proceedings.

ACTION AGAINST OFFICERS.

No action is to be commenced against any officer of the army, navy or marines, Customs or Excise or other person acting under the direction of the Commissioners of Customs for anything done in the execution of his duty, until one month ⁽¹⁾ after a notice in writing shall have been served on him, either personally or left at his usual place of abode, by the attorney for the plaintiff. Sec. 313.

CONTENTS OF NOTICE OF ACTION.

Every notice of such action is to contain the following particulars;

The cause of action, clearly stated.

The name and place of abode of the plaintiff.

The name and place of abode or business of his attorney or agent.⁽²⁾ The plaintiff's attorney or agent, is to be entitled to a fee of ten shillings, for preparing and serving such notice. Ib.

⁽²⁾ It is sufficient to endorse the initial of the Christian name of the attorney (Mayhew v. Locke, 7 Taunt., 63; 2 Marsh, 277). And it will suffice if the attorney describes himself of the town, where he resides, as of Birmingham (Osborn v. Gough, 3 Bos. & P., 551). There is this distinction between the above section of the Customs Consolidation Act and the Act which prescribes the contents of notices of actions against magistrates, that the latter does not require the place of the plaintiff's abode to be stated, the above section requiring the statement of both name and place of abode of plaintiff.

ACTION WITHOUT NOTICE.

If any such action be commenced, without giving the required month's notice, the defendant may call upon the plaintiff to satisfy the Court, on affidavits on both sides, that the action is brought for some act, matter or thing not done in the execution of, or

"William Wood, of Rotherhithe, in the county of Surrey, merchant," was held a sufficient description of the plaintiff (Wood v. Folliott, 3 Bos. & P., 552, note). But, notice of action against a Custom-house officer "for breaking the plaintiff's house in Cable-street, in the parish of Gr.," was held not to be a sufficient description of the plaintiff's place of abode, for the plaintiff might have removed, since the trespass was committed, or he might have had two houses and never resided in the locus in quo (Williams v. Burgess, 3 Taunt., 127).

The notice ought not to be construed with great strictness, its object being merely to inform the defendant substantially of the ground of complaint (Jones v. Bird, 5 B. & Ald., 887), so that he may have an opportunity of tendering amends (Id., Wood v. Folliott, 3 Bos. & P., 552, n.). It is quite sufficient, if it calls the attention of the defendant to the general nature of the inquiry, so that he may know, what the ground of complaint is. If it were otherwise, it would be necessary in many cases to have a notice with several counts in it (Per Bailey, C. J., in Jones v. Bird). On the other hand, it is not sufficient for a party to state in his notice, that the defendant has offended against the statute, it ought at least to show, on the face of the notice, that an offence has been committed (Towsey v. White, 5 B. & C., 183). It has been held, not to be necessary to name all the parties meant to be included in the action, or to express, whether the action is intended to be joint or several (Bas v. Jones, 5 Price, 168). But it has been held à priori that, if it be stated, the plaintiff must declare accordingly, and therefore, where the notice given, was of an action on the case for false imprisonment and assault, and the action brought was for trespass and false imprisonment, it was held, that it was not sufficient (Strickland v. Ward, 7 T. B., 681, n.). The foregoing decisions are here cited as governing the 318th section, inasmuch as, although made on questions as to notice of actions against Justices under 24 Geo. II. c. 44, the language of the latter Act, as to such notice, is substantially the same as under the 318th section of the Customs Consolidation Act.

The notice must state, with convenient certainty, the time and place of committing the act complained of, (Martins v. Upcher, 3 Q. B. 662; Jacklin v. Fytche, 14 Mee. & W. 381; Breese v. Jerdein, 4 Q. B. 585;) though it need not give a venue to every traversable allegation (Leary v. Patrick, 19 L. J. M. C. 211.)

by reason of his (the defendant's) office, in default of which the action is to discontinue. If, however, the Court be satisfied, that the action was brought for something done by the defendant in his individual and not his official capacity, the plaintiff will not be allowed on the trial to give evidence of any other cause of action than he shall have disclosed in his affidavit. Id.

EVIDENCE IN ACTION ON NOTICE.

The plaintiff is required in every such action to prove the service of the notice, otherwise the officer will be entitled to a verdict with costs. No evidence is to be adduced by the plaintiff of any cause of action, not distinctly stated in the notice. Sec. 314.

TENDER OF AMENDS.

The defendant, in every such action, may, within a month after service of notice, tender amends; and, if not accepted, plead such tender with the plea of "not guilty," and other pleas, with leave of the Court, where such leave must be obtained pursuant to "The Common Law Procedure Act, 1852,"⁽¹⁾. If upon the trial, the jury deem the amends so tendered sufficient, they are to find for the defendant, in which event, or in case of nonsuit, discontinuance, or judgment for the defendant on demurrer, the latter is to have his costs, as if he had pleaded the general issue only. But,

The omission to give a notice is not cured by a magistrate's pleading amends (and, on the same principle, an officer doing so), (Martins v. Upcher, 8 Q. B. 662).

The cases above cited were all decided prior to the passing of the Act, 12 & 13 Vict. c. 16, which provides, that no action "shall be commenced against any justice of the peace, until one calendar month at least after a notice in writing of such intended action shall have been delivered to him, or left for him at his usual place of abode, by the party intending to commence such action, or by his attorney," in which said notice, the cause of action, and the court in which the same is intended to be brought, shall be clearly and explicitly stated; and upon the back thereof, shall be endorsed the name and place of abode of the party so intending to sue, and also the name and place of abode, or business, of the said attorney, if such notice have been served by such attorney."

in case the jury find, that there was no tender of amends, or that the amount tendered was insufficient, or if they find against the defendant on any of his pleas, the plaintiff will be entitled to a verdict for such damages, as they think proper, together with costs. Sec. 315.

PAYMENT OF AMENDS INTO COURT.

If the defendant omit to tender amends, or make an insufficient tender, he may, by leave of the Court, and at any time before the trial, pay a sum into Court, as amends, and the proceedings thereon are to be regulated by the provisions of the "Common Law Procedure Act, 1853,"⁽¹⁾ which regulate the payment of money into Court and its subsequent appropriation. Sec. 316.

ACTIONS AGAINST OFFICERS TO BE BROUGHT WITHIN TWO MONTHS.

Actions against officers must be brought within two months after the cause of action arises. If it be in respect of a seizure, the cause of action is deemed to accrue the day after the trial of the information, from which date the two months are to be calculated. Sec. 317.

VENUE AND PLEADINGS IN ACTIONS AGAINST OFFICERS.

The venue is to be laid in the county or place, where the cause of action arises. The general issue may be pleaded and special matter given in evidence on the trial; in case of a nonsuit, discontinuance or judgment for the defendant on demurrer, he is to have his costs, recoverable in the ordinary course. Ib.

ACTIONS MAY BE BROUGHT IN COUNTY, &c., COURTS.

A party feeling himself aggrieved by any seizure, may, if no tender of amends has been made, as prescribed by sections 315, and 316, proceed by plaint in the County Courts in England, by civil bill in the Assistant Barrister's Court in Ireland, or by summons in the Sheriff's Court in Scotland. But, he must comply with the provisions, as to notice, section 313, and commence proceedings within the time prescribed for bringing actions in the superior Courts, by sec. 317. He must also lay the damages at an amount within the proper jurisdiction of those Courts.⁽¹⁾ Sec. 318.

VENUE AND PROCEEDINGS IN COUNTY COURT ACTIONS.

When the complaining party resorts to an action in a County Court in England, the venue is to be laid in the district, where the cause of action arises. The proceedings are to be conducted, as nearly as possible in conformity with those prescribed by the Acts and orders, which govern the procedure and practice of those Courts and with a similar right of appeal. But the County Court Judge is to hear and determine the case without a jury, unless on the written consent of plaintiff and defendant. Sec. 319.

(1) Under the above and the three succeeding sections, the Courts therein respectively mentioned have a jurisdiction conferred upon them to try actions against officers within the amount of damage limited, but this is not to be construed, as affecting the ancient right of the Court of Exchequer, to try every case, in which the officers engaged in the collection of the revenue may be made defendants, nor the right of the officers to have such case removed from the inferior tribunal for trial by the Exchequer. From the nature and constitution of this Court, it has acquired a general superintendence over Commissioners and officers concerned in raising the revenue, and an exclusive power (unless when restrained by statute) to enforce the due execution of the revenue laws. Hence, if an action be brought in any other Court against any officer of revenue, whether under process or otherwise, such action may be removed into this Court (on motion and affidavit of the facts and of service of notice of motion), on the ground that, as this Court is peculiarly conversant with all questions arising upon the construction of the revenue law, it is desirable, that the propriety of the conduct of such officer should be there determined. Nor, is it necessary that the Queen's interest should be in question. The usual order, which operates by way of injunction is, "that the action be removed out of the Court, in which it is depending into the office of Pleas, and that it be there in the same forwardness as in the other Court." (1 Ohit. Pr. 316, and the cases there cited; Siddon v. East, 1 C. & J., 12; Beningfield v. Stratford, 8 Price, 584.)

Section 263 prescribes that these Courts shall be resorted to, with certain exceptions, in prosecutions at the suit of the Crown, where the duties and penalties claimed do not exceed £100, and the jurisdiction of these Courts is therefore extended for the purpose of such suits to £100, the object of this provision was to relieve defendants at the suit of the Crown from the supposed heavier expense attendant on the prosecution of such cases in the Superior Courts, but, the jurisdiction of the Inferior Courts is not extended with reference to actions of the nature contemplated by the present section.

VENUE AND PROCEEDINGS IN ACTION BY CIVIL BILL.

When the plaintiff proceeds in the Civil Bill Court, he must resort to a General Sessions of the peace for the division of the county, where the cause of action arises, and the proceedings are to be in conformity with the practice of the Assistant Barristers' Court in ordinary cases.⁽¹⁾ But there is no right of appeal to the Judges of assize; the Chairman, Recorder, or Assistant Barrister being empowered, where, in his opinion, a question of law only is involved, and on consent of the parties, to state a special case for the opinion of a Baron of the Exchequer on the question of law, and the proceedings thereon are, as nearly as circumstances will allow, to be governed by the provisions of the Civil Bill Acts with respect to other cases of appeal, save, that the Baron shall decide on such special case without further proof of the facts. Sec. 320.

VENUE AND PROCEEDINGS IN ACTIONS IN SHERIFF'S COURT.

When the plaintiff proceeds in the Sheriff's Courts in Scotland the venue is to be laid and the proceedings conducted as nearly as may be in accordance with the several statutable provisions which regulate the procedure in those Courts.⁽²⁾ Sec. 321.

DAMAGES IN ACTIONS AGAINST OFFICERS.

As a general rule, if a plaintiff proceed by action for damages in the superior Courts, in respect of any seizure, and the damages recovered do not exceed £20 he is not to be entitled to any costs against the defendant; and it will not be necessary to enter any suggestion on the record to deprive him of costs. There are, however, some exceptions to this rule. The plaintiff will not be deprived of his costs, if the Judge at the trial certify on the record, that from the nature of the case, it could not be tried in the inferior Court; or, if the Judge shall certify that, although within the jurisdiction of the inferior Court, it was a proper case to be tried in a superior Court; or, in case there shall be no trial, as for instance, in case of judgment by default, verdict by consent, &c., the Judge may order costs. Sec. 322.

(2) 16 & 17 Vic. c. 80, Scotland.

SOLICITOR, ASSISTANT-SOLICITOR, SOLICITOR'S CLERKS, &c., MAY ACT AS COUNSEL, ATTORNEY OR WRITER TO SIGNET.

The power conferred upon the officers of Customs in the Solicitors' and other departments to act as attorneys, or writers to the Signet, in, and generally to conduct, Customs cases, is not new.⁽¹⁾ The jurisdiction in Customs cases being considerably extended, and the tribunals having cognizance of them being multiplied by the Act, a commensurate extension of the professional privilege became necessary.

The Solicitor, or Assistant-solicitor, or any clerk duly appointed to act on his behalf or under his directions, is entitled in cases relating to the Customs, or under the directions of the Commissioners of the Treasury or the Customs, to act as Counsel, Solicitor, Attorney-at-law, Advocate, or Writer to the Signet in the prosecution, conduct or defence of any such case in any Court, jurisdiction or place, in which such case may be instituted, and any such Solicitor, Assistant-solicitor, clerk, or other officer of Customs, under the order of the Commissioners of Customs, may prosecute defend or conduct any proceeding relating to the Customs before Justices.⁽²⁾ Sec. 323.

(1) Vide 9 Geo. IV. c. 25, and 9 & 10 Vic. c. 102, sec. 20.

(2) The Crown's right of reply, is reserved by the 11 & 12 Vic. c. 43, which exempts revenue cases from the operation of the Act.

RECIPROCITY OF COMMERCIAL PRIVILEGES.

The practice of entering into Conventions for guaranteeing reciprocal commercial advantages to Contracting Sovereigns and States is of ancient date, and still in considerable favour. It is not, however, so much the province of the author to discuss the policy of such international stipulations, as to state, with a view to a clear apprehension of the law on the subject, what it now is, and what legislative changes it has, from time to time, undergone.⁽¹⁾

Until very recently, whenever any proposal in favour of mutual commercial concessions between this country and any foreign state was made and accepted, the course usually adopted was, to frame a convention setting forth the conditions and particulars of the proposed contract. The convention being duly executed by the contracting parties, effect was given to it by subsequent Acts of their respective legislative authorities. Thus, in the several Acts, which were passed towards the close of the reign of Geo. III. we find a recital of the antecedent treaties or conventions on which they were based, nor was the practice, so far as concerned this country, departed from, until the passing of the 4th Geo. IV. c. 77.

(1) The use, the lawfulness, and the obligation of commercial treaties are thus generally laid down by Vattel. "As each nation is only so far obliged to carry on commerce with others, as she can do it, without being wanting to herself, and as the whole ultimately depends on the judgment that each state may form of what it can and ought to do in particular cases; nations cannot count on any thing more than generalities, such as the inherent liberty of each to carry on trade, and moreover on imperfect rights, which depend on the judgment of others, and consequently are ever certain; wherefore, if they wish to secure to themselves any definite and constant advantages, they must procure them by treaties."

By sec. 1 of that Act, Her Majesty was empowered by Order in Council, published in the London Gazette, to permit the importation into or the exportation from, the United Kingdom, or from any other portion of her dominions, of goods in foreign vessels, on payment of the same duties, and with the same drawbacks, as goods imported and exported in British vessels. But, before any such Order could be issued, proof was to be given, that the foreign country, so favoured, extended corresponding privileges to merchandise imported or exported in British vessels.

In like manner, Her Majesty was, under sec. 2, empowered by similar Order to impose additional duties upon, or withhold drawbacks from, goods imported or exported in foreign vessels, where higher duties were imposed on, or drawbacks withheld from, goods imported or exported in British vessels, than in the vessels of the foreign country; the additional duties in such case to be levied in the same manner as other duties of Customs.

Her Majesty was also empowered, by sec. 4 of the same Act, to remove or reimpose such duties or allow or discontinue such drawbacks as circumstances might render expedient.

After the passing of the above Act, a doubt arose, as to whether its provisions extended to the levying, under the authority of Orders in Council, of additional tonnage duties upon the vessels of foreign countries, withholding reciprocal relations with Her Majesty's dominions. To remove this doubt, an Act was passed in the next session 5 Geo. IV. c. 1, declaring valid an Order in Council made in favour of the United States of America under the authority of the 4th Geo. IV. c. 77, with an indemnity to persons acting under such Order and barring all actions or other proceedings. To place the matter on a more certain basis for the future, by sec. 3 of the last mentioned Act, the power to levy tonnage duties, under the circumstances mentioned, was given by express enactment with liberty to remove, or re-impose them, as might be deemed expedient.

The next Act to which reference may be made, as indicating the character of our legislation, with respect to commercial conventions with foreign states, is the 8th and 9th Vic. c. 90. By the 8th section of that Act, Her Majesty was empowered by Order in Council to direct the levying of an additional impost, not exceeding one-fifth of the existing duty, on any goods, the produce of any country, which should levy higher duties upon goods the produce or manufacture of Her Majesty's dominions, than upon goods the produce or manufacture of such country; and to impose such additional duties upon goods imported into the United Kingdom in foreign ships, as should be imposed on goods imported into such country in British ships, or, in case of higher tonnage duties being imposed on British than on the national ships of such country—thereby varying, in some respects, the provisions of the 4th Geo. IV. c. 77, and in subsequent sections, confirming the power of the Sovereign to make Orders in Council, as granted by that Act, in cases, where treaties of commerce were, or should be, entered into between Her Majesty and foreign states.

The next Act, dealing with the subject of reciprocity, was the Navigation Act,⁽¹⁾ which repealed the 8 & 9 Vic. c. 90, and which, in its turn, has been repealed by the Customs Consolidation Act, into which, however, the 10th and 11th sections have been introduced,⁽²⁾ as containing provisions peculiarly applying to the Customs Revenue, and which, without reference to the question of any previous convention, empower Her Majesty by Order in Council to restrict foreign ships, in case of similar restrictions being imposed by the foreign state on British vessels, and to impose additional duties; (does not, like the 8th and 9th Vic. c. 90,) specify the amount.

A further Act, 15 & 16 Vic. c. 47, after reciting the statutes under which the old international practice obtained, and that it was expedient to give Her Majesty in Council power, without treaty, of entering into reciprocal commercial relations with foreign states generally, provides, that, where the trade and shipping of Great Britain have been placed, in the ports of any foreign power, on a footing of reciprocity, Her Majesty may issue an Order in Council, declaring the trade and shipping of such foreign power to have the benefit of the provisions of the Act, and also of those of the 59th Geo. III., c. 54. The reciprocity sections of the "Customs Consolidation Act, 1853," re-enact the provisions of 8 & 9 Vic. c. 93, sec. 47 & 90, and of 12 & 13 Vic. c. 29, secs. 5, 6, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, but omit, without repealing, those of the 15 & 16 Vic. c. 47, which dispense with the necessity of a Commercial Treaty or Convention as preliminary to the exercise of the powers thereby given to Her Majesty in Council.

The following are the provisions of the Customs Consolidation Act on this subject.

FOREIGN SHIPS AND GOODS.

When it shall appear, that British vessels are subject in any foreign country to any prohibitions or restrictions as to the voyages in which they may engage, or as to the articles, which they may import into or export from such country, Her Majesty may, by Order in Council, impose such restrictions and prohibitions upon the ships of such foreign country, either, as to the voyages in which they may engage, or as to the articles, which they may import into, or export from, the United Kingdom, or from any British Possessions, as she may think fit, so as to place the ships of such country as nearly as possible on the same footing in British ports, as that on which British ships are placed in foreign ports. Sec. 324.

WHEN ADDITIONAL DUTIES MAY BE IMPOSED.

The authority thus reserved to the Sovereign in Council is not confined to the power of restriction and prohibition given over the foreign ship and her cargo, but extends to the right of annulling the amount of tonnage duties, established by existing Acts of the legislature. Its vindication rests upon the same doctrine of retaliation. In either case, the injury inflicted by the foreign State might be done at a time, when Parliament was not sitting, and, even if it were, might create mischiefs, which could not be remedied by the slow process of legislative enactment. With good reason, therefore, the Act provides, that, when it shall be made to appear, that British ships are subjected, in any foreign country, to duties or charges, from which the vessels of such country are exempt here; or, that duties are imposed upon articles imported or exported in British ships, which are not imposed upon the like articles, when imported or exported in vessels of such Foreign State; or, that any preference is shown to foreign over British vessels; or, to articles imported or exported in foreign vessels over those imported or exported in British vessels; or, that British trade and navigation are not placed by such country upon as advantageous a footing as those of the most favoured nation, the Queen in Council may impose such tonnage duties upon the ships of such nation, entering into or departing from any British port or any port in the British Possessions, as may countervail the disadvantages to which British trade or navigation may be so subjected. Sec. 325.

In every such Order, the ships of the countries to which it applies, may be specified; and all ships coming within such specification, are to be affected by the provisions of the order so made. Sec. 326

TRADE OF CERTAIN COLONIES MAY BE REGULATED BY ORDER IN COUNCIL.

By the like Order, Her Majesty may regulate the trade and commerce to, and from, the British Possessions on or near the Continent of Europe, or within the Mediterranean or in Africa, or within the limits of the East India Company's Charter (except the possessions of that Company) as may be deemed proper. Any goods imported or exported in violation of such order are, together with the importing or exporting ship, to be forfeited. Sec. 327.

TRADE OF COLONIES GENERALLY MAY BE REGULATED BY ORDER IN COUNCIL ON REQUEST.

Her Majesty, on an address from the recognised Colonial authorities, may, by Order in Council, permit the conveyance of goods or passengers from one part of such Colony to another in foreign ships. So also, on the joint address of the legislatures of any two or more possessions declared by Her Majesty to be for such purposes neighbouring possessions, the trade between them may, by Order in Council, be put on the footing of a coasting trade, or be otherwise regulated as may seem fit to Her Majesty. Sec. 328.

COASTING TRADE OF INDIA.

As regards the coasting trade of India, the Governor-general in Council, may regulate or permit the conveyance of goods and passengers in other than British ships. The regulations so made are to be sent to England and laid before both Houses of Parliament for approval. Sec. 329.

PUBLICATION OF ORDERS IN COUNCIL.

Every such Order in Council is, within fourteen days after it is issued, to be published in the London Gazette, and a copy is to be laid before Parliament within six weeks after it is issued, if Parliament be sitting, and if not, within six weeks after the commencement of the next session. Sec. 330.

Orders, made under the authority of the Act, may be from time to time revoked. Sec. 331.

ACQUISITION AND DISPOSAL OF LANDS.

The sections of the Act, which come next in order, are those, which relate to the acquisition of land for the service of the Customs, and the disposal or leasing of it, when no longer required for such service. These extend from the 332nd to the 345th a proportion of the Act, which may seem excessive, considering the great opportunity for abridgment afforded by the Land Clauses Consolidation Acts. Valuable, however, as these Acts have proved, it was deemed inexpedient to discard altogether the provisions of the old law, for obtaining lands for Customs' purposes. The means afforded by those enactments for the purpose were efficacious, but the machinery was circuitous. The reformation of this machinery appeared therefore desirable, as far as convenient. On reference to the Act itself, it will be observed that such portion of the "Lands Consolidation Acts," as seemed calculated to facilitate the object, has been adopted and incorporated. In these sections, the interest is strictly of a conveyancing character. The only department of the Customs materially concerned in this branch of the law is that of the Solicitor, and when acted upon, the statute itself must necessarily be consulted by the parties interested. It, however, may be proper to add, that the sections of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, which regulate the allocation of money paid into court, have not been overlooked; the improvements, which the new practice has introduced in that respect, having been unreservedly adopted. The clauses of these and other incorporated Acts, are given in the appendix.

THE ISLE OF MAN.

The provisions of the Act, which regulate the Customs' Duties and trade of the Isle of Man, are now for the first time incorporated with the general law of the United Kingdom, though brought together under a distinct head. With respect to these, it seems not a little curious, that the people of this Isle should, in these times, evince any indisposition to embrace every institution, whether commercial or otherwise, of that integral kingdom, of which it is now, though not for the first time, the property.⁽¹⁾

(1) Sharing the fate of all circumscribed sovereignties, the Isle of Man underwent many transitions. The vicissitudes through which it has passed may be briefly summed up. It was at an early period held by the Kings of Northumberland, who retained it until it was conquered by the Norwegians. In 1226 it was purchased from them by Alexander the Third of Scotland. It was afterwards held by Lord Scrope, who forfeited it to Henry IV., who, in the first year of his reign, granted it to Henry Earl of Northumberland; and on his being attainted of treason in the fifth year of Henry IV., it again reverted to the Crown, and was granted to John, Lord of Stanley and Man. In 1751, upon the attainder of James Stanley, Earl of Derby, it was conferred by Parliament upon Lord Fairfax. On the restoration, it reverted to its ancient Lords, and on the death of Charles, Earl of Derby, in 1735, it became vested in James, Duke of Athol, as heir-general of Earl James. In 1764 it was sold by Charles, Duke of Athol to the British Government, with all its rights of sovereignty, for £70,000: and, in 1792, on the ground that it had been purchased much below its value, an additional compensation of £3,000 a year was granted to the Dukes of Athol for ever.

A passion for nationality still prevails amongst the inhabitants, who regard all interference with ancient usages and establishments with impatience. The once courtly hall of Tynwald—the regal solemnities of Glánfaba, the barons, beneficed-men and deemsters, who figure prominently in the first printed ordinance of the island, have not entirely faded from the traditions and affections of the Manx men. Antiquated pretensions and venerable claims of right continue to be pleaded against the policy and advantages of incorporation. With pretensions of so innoxious a character,⁽¹⁾ and especially, when unattended with any decided inconvenience to the trade of the kingdom, it has not been deemed necessary to interfere, and with the exception of being made part of the United Kingdom for revenue purposes, every venerated, though nominal, right and privilege of the island as subsisting at the time of the passing of the Act, has been respected. The Act, however, goes far enough to reverse the dictum of Lord Coke, that the Isle of Man is no part of the realm of England."⁽²⁾ The distinction between the duties chargeable in that island and the mother country, though materially altered by the new Tariff, still survives, and separate tables are assigned to each; though, by the Customs Consolidation Act, the Isle of Man is declared to be part of the United Kingdom, for Customs purposes. Sec. 346.

WHAT GOODS MAY NOT BE IMPORTED INTO ANY OTHER PART OF THE UNITED KINGDOM FROM THE ISLE OF MAN.

1. No foreign goods chargeable with a higher duty on importation into Great Britain or Ireland, than into the Isle of Man, (after delivery out of the charge of the Customs for consumption or otherwise in the Isle of Man) are to be carried, waterborne or shipped to be conveyed into Great Britain or Ireland.⁽³⁾
2. Nor shall such goods, though not so cleared and delivered, be conveyed thence into Great Britain or Ireland, unless duly cleared for the purpose by the proper officer of Customs.

⁽³⁾ Vide note ⁽²⁾, p. 152.

3. Nor (unless reported for removal in the same ship and in continuation of the voyage to some port in Great Britain or Ireland) unless security be given by bond or otherwise for the delivery thereof at some place in Great Britain or Ireland. Goods, dealt with contrary to the above provisions, will be liable to forfeiture; and every person concerned in so dealing with them will be liable to a penalty of treble the value of the goods, or £100, at the election of the Commissioners of Customs. Sec. 347.

WHAT GOODS MAY BE IMPORTED INTO GREAT BRITAIN OR IRELAND FROM THE ISLE OF MAN DUTY FREE.

The following goods may be imported into Great Britain or Ireland from the Isle of Man free of duty of Customs.

1. Goods, the growth of the Isle of Man.
2. Goods manufactured from materials the growth of the said isle.⁽¹⁾
3. Goods made from materials, upon which the duty has been paid in Great Britain or Ireland, no drawback thereon having been granted.

But, the above goods are to be charged, with such proportion of such duties as shall countervail the Excise duties⁽²⁾ payable on the like goods, the produce of that part of the United Kingdom, into which they shall be brought.

Any articles, either wholly or in part, manufactured in the said isle from materials upon which a higher duty is paid on their importation into the United Kingdom, than into the Isle of Man, may be brought into Great Britain or Ireland on payment of the duties payable in that part of the kingdom, into which they are brought. Sec. 348.

CERTIFICATE OF PRODUCTION.

On the importation, from the Isle of Man into Great Britain or Ireland, of goods, the growth of that isle, or made from materials the growth of that isle, or from materials not subject to duty in Great Britain or Ireland, or upon which the duties have been paid and not drawn back in Great Britain or Ireland, a written declaration of the fact is to be made, to the satisfaction of the collector or comptroller of Customs, at the port of shipment, describing and identifying the goods and stating the name of the intended shipper, who, within a month⁽¹⁾ afterwards, shall also make and sign a further declaration before the same officers, that the goods, to be shipped, are the same, whereupon those officers shall give the master of the export ship a certificate⁽²⁾ of such proof of produce or manufacture, describing them and stating the name of the party, the master of the ship and the destination of the goods. Sec. 349.

EXCISE DUTIES AND DRAWBACKS NOT TO BE AFFECTED.

The foregoing provisions are not to affect the laws and regulations in force as to duties and drawbacks of Excise on goods removed to the Isle of Man. Sec. 350.

STORES OF MANX SHIPS.

Ships, &c., from the Isle of Man to Great Britain or Ireland

are not, on pain of forfeiture of the goods and ship, to carry more than the following stores.

In ships or decked vessels, for each seaman, half a gallon of spirits and one pound of tobacco and for the whole crew, two pounds of tea. In open boats, for each seaman, one quart of spirits and half a pound of tobacco and for the whole crew one pound of tea. Sec. 351.

TREASURY MAY RESTRICT IMPORTS TO THE ISLE OF MAN.

The Commissioners of the Treasury may, at any time, by their order, restrict or limit the importation of foreign goods into the isle to such quantities per annum, as they may think necessary; and determine the ports, into which such goods may only be imported. Sec. 352.

MANAGEMENT OF CUSTOMS IN THE ISLE

The Customs' Duties on imports into the Isle of Man are to be under the management of the Commissioners of Customs, and (deducting the charges of collection and accounting) are to be, from time to time, paid into the Exchequer, distinct from other branches of the revenue, but to form part of the consolidated fund. But, the collectors of the Isle are to retain monies, under the direction of the Commissioners of Customs, to defray the expenses of the government, the administration of justice and other usual charges. Sec. 353.

EXPENSES OF THE GOVERNMENT OF THE ISLE TO BE RETAINED.

The expenses of the government of the Isle, together with £2,300 per annum, are to be retained out of the Customs' duties, and paid to the Receiver General of the said Isle, to be applied, under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 94, for the purposes of the Harbour Commissioners. Sec. 354.

ALLOWANCE FOR PUBLIC WORKS IN THE ISLE.

In addition to the foregoing sums, one-ninth of the amount of the duties collected, is to be applied by the Commissioners of the Treasury in improving the harbours and other public works in the Isle, the former taking priority. The Court of Tynwald is to determine, subject to the veto of the Lieutenant Governor, what works are to be undertaken. Sec. 355.

MISCELLANEOUS CLAUSES.

The Act concludes with the three following clauses of general application.

ANNUAL PUBLICATION OF GENERAL CUSTOMS ORDERS.

The general Orders of the Commissioners of Customs of each year regulating the service, are to be printed as early as convenient after the expiration of each year. Sec. 356.

INTERPRETATION CLAUSE, &c.

The legal construction to be put on various terms used in the Act, is declared by an interpretation clause, for which vide Appendix, Sec. 357.

REPEAL CLAUSE.

The pre-existing enactments repealed by this clause, are enumerated in Schedule A, ⁽¹⁾ to which it refers. Sec. 358.

REGISTRATION OF THE ACT IN THE CHANNEL ISLANDS.

The Act is directed and authorized to be registered in the Royal Courts of the Channel Islands.⁽²⁾ Sec. 359.

DATE OF OPERATION AND TITLE OF ACT.

The Act is declared to come into operation from the day of the passing⁽³⁾ and is to be cited by the short title of "The Customs Consolidation Act, 1853." Sec. 360.

CHAPTER VII.

CUSTOMS TARIFF ACT, 1853.

THE reasons for giving precedence to the provisions of the Customs Consolidation Act, have been stated in the preface. Those of the Act for consolidating the duties of Customs, as distinct from the more general law, relating to their management and collection, are few in number. That portion of the public, who are conversant with the pre-existing laws, cannot have failed to observe, that the tables to the duties' Acts and to the various amendments thereof, have been almost invariably prefaced with a repetition of clauses properly constituting parts of the general Acts for the regulation of the Customs, the collection of the duties, and warehousing of goods, on which payment of the duties is deferred by the importer, &c. By the present scheme of consolidation, all the general regulations affecting importation and subsequent dealings with goods, from their first arrival in port to their final discharge from the custody or supervision of the Crown have been embodied as standing clauses in "the Customs Consolidation Act, 1853," applicable, as general provisions, to any impositions of duty, present or future, thereby avoiding, as far as practicable, the inconvenience of reference to more than one Act for the laws and regulations, which affect the transactions of the mercantile body with the Customs—hence it will be seen that the Customs' Tariff, 1853, with the exception of a declaratory clause and a special provision, not of general application, affecting only the mode of assessing the duty on a particular article, sugar—contains nothing beyond the necessary preamble, and the formal declaration, that the new duties, and drawbacks shall be substituted for the pre-existing ones.

In pursuance of the desire of the Government to present at one view the whole of the articles falling within the provisions of the law, the tables to the various pre-existing Duties' Acts have been combined in one consolidated Tariff, though in two divisions, headed A and B, the former having reference to Great Britain and Ireland, and the latter to the Isle of Man. This combination comprises (subject to the changes consequent on the repeal of some duties, and the reduction of others,) the contents of no less than eleven tables of nine separate Acts now repealed.

The majority of the articles enumerated in this Tariff consists of free goods; and, primâ facie, it might appear that brevity and general convenience would have been better consulted by the enumeration of those goods only, upon which duties are retained, or by arranging the various articles under the two heads of Dutiable and Free, but, it must be borne in mind, that very elaborate statistical returns are required by Parliament, for general commercial purposes, to which much importance is attached, and the present classification has been adopted, as the most conducive to that object, whilst the alphabetical arrangement of goods liable to duty, with those declared free, has been considered, best calculated to afford the importer the readiest information for due entry of his goods.

IMPOSITIONS OF NEW DUTIES AND DRAWBACKS.⁽¹⁾

The Act commences by abolishing all pre-existing duties and drawbacks, payable in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and

⁽¹⁾ INLAND REVENUE DUTIES AND DRAWBACKS.—It is proper here to notice that there are also the following Inland Revenue, and countervailing duties and drawbacks charged or allowed; but, as to spirits, only on removal from bonded warehouses.

STANDARD SAMPLES OF CLAYED SUGAR FOR ASSESSING DUTY.

For the assessment of duties, upon white clayed sugar, or sugar rendered by any process equal to that article, with respect to colour, grain and saccharine matter, and upon brown clayed sugar, or sugar rendered by any process equal in quality to that article, the Commissioners of Customs are to provide samples by which such sugars, when entered for home consumption, are to be tested. The Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury are empowered, from time to time, to make orders for the remission of the duty, of £15 per cent. imposed by table B. on unenumerated articles, for such period, as they may deem expedient⁽¹⁾ and to revoke such orders, when they may think fit. Sec. 5.

Spirits, rectified. On removal to a Customs' warehouse for exportation or shipment, as stores, per gallon, proof, from England 7s. 11½d., from Ireland 3s. 5½d., and from Scotland 4s. 9½d. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 122 secs. 11, 13, 14, 16 and 21.

Under the same Act, section 15, 16, & 17, spirits can only be removed into a Customs' warehouse for exportation, and, when there, are subject to the same rules and regulations as foreign spirits.

For Customs' Drawbacks, vide note ('), p. 160.

(¹) The Treasury exercised this power by Order of 27th August, 1853, remitting the duty until further orders.

NOTICE OF TREASURY ORDER.

Every order made in pursuance of the preceding authority, is to be notified by advertisement in the London and Dublin Gazettes; and copies of such orders are to be laid before both Houses of Parliament, if sitting, within six weeks after the date of such order; but, if not sitting, within six weeks after the commencement of the next session. Ib.

FREE GOODS.

Goods described as free, in table A. are to be admitted without payment of duty into the United Kingdom; and those described as free, in table B. are to be admitted into the Isle of Man, without payment of duty. Sec. 6.

METAGE DUES ON FRUIT.

This provision is merely to guard against any interference with local interests which might inadvertently arise from the operation of a general statute. The metage dues payable on fruit imported into London are therefore not to be increased by reason of the duties being levied by the bushel. Sec. 7.

The Act is declared to commence from the time of its passing⁽¹⁾ and is to be cited by the short title of "The Customs Tariff Act, 1853." Sec. 8.

10. And whereas his late Majesty King George the Third, by his royal proclamation bearing date the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and one, was pleased, with the advice of his privy council, to order and appoint what ensign or colours should be borne at sea by merchants ships or vessels belonging to any of his Majesty's subjects of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the dominions thereunto belonging, thereby charging and commanding all his Majesty's subjects whatsoever that they should not presume to wear in any of their ships or vessels his Majesty's jack commonly called the union jack, nor any pendants nor any such colours as are usually worn by his Majesty's ships, without particular warrant for their so doing from his Majesty or his high admiral of Great Britain, or the Commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral for the time being, and also commanding his Majesty's subjects that without such warrant as aforesaid they should not presume to wear on board their ships or vessels any flags, jacks, pendants or colours made in imitation of or resembling those of his Majesty, or any kind of pendant whatsoever, or any other ensign than the ensign described in the margin of the said proclamation: Be it therefore enacted and declared, that from and after the passing of this Act it shall not be lawful for any of Her Majesty's subjects whomsoever to hoist, carry, or wear in or on board any ship, vessel, or fishing boat, or any other vessel or boat whatever, whether merchant or otherwise, belonging to any of Her Majesty's subjects, Her Majesty's jack, commonly called the union jack, or any pendant or any such colours as are usually worn by Her Majesty's ships, or any flag, jack, pendant, or colours whatever made in imitation of or resembling those of Her Majesty, or any kind of pendant whatsoever, or any ensign or colours whatever, other than those prescribed by the said proclamation; and that if any person or persons shall nevertheless presume to hoist, carry, or wear in or on board any ship or vessel, fishing boat, or other vessel or boat whatever, belonging to any of Her Majesty's subjects, whether the same be merchant or otherwise, Her Majesty's jack commonly called the union jack, or any pendant or colours such as are commonly worn by Her Majesty's ships, or any jack, flag, pendant or colours whatever made in imitation of or resembling those of Her Majesty, or any kind of pendant whatever, without such warrant as aforesaid, or any other ensign or colours than the ensign or colours prescribed by the said proclamation to be worn, then and in every such case the master or other person having charge of such ship, vessel, or boat, or the owner or owners thereof being on board the same, and every other person so offending, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding five hundred pounds, to be recovered, with costs of suit, either in the high court of admiralty of England, or in any vice-admiralty court in Her Majesty's colonies, or in any of Her Majesty's courts of Queen's Bench or Exchequer at Westminster or Dublin, at the suit of Her Majesty's attorney-general, or in the Courts of Session or Exchequer in Scotland respectively; and that it shall be lawful for any officer of Her Majesty's navy or marines belonging to any of Her Majesty's ships or any officer of the Customs or Excise to enter on board any ship, vessel or boat so hoisting wearing or carrying any jack, flag, ensign, pendant, or colours prohibited by the said proclamation and by this Act to be hoisted, worn, or carried, and to seize and take away the same, and the same shall thereupon become forfeited.

None of Her Majesty's subjects to hoist in their vessels the union jack or any pendants &c., usually worn in Her Majesty's ships, and prohibited to be worn by proclamation of 1st January, 1801, under a penalty not exceeding £500.

Certain articles herein mentioned not to be landed coastwise until the dues of the City of London are paid.

124. And for the purpose of enabling the mayor commonalty, and citizens of the city of London, and their successors, to ascertain and collect the amount of the dues payable to them upon the several articles herein-after mentioned, brought coastwise into the port of London, be it enacted, that if all or any of the goods of the description hereinafter mentioned, (that is to say,) firkins of butter, tons of cheese, fish, eggs, salt, fruit, roots (eatable), and onions, brought coastwise into the port of the said city, and which are liable to the said dues, shall be landed or unshipped at or in the said port before a proper certificate of the payment of the said duties shall have been obtained, such goods respectively shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of her Majesty's Customs empowered to seize any goods landed without due entry thereof; and such forfeiture may be sued for, prosecuted, and recovered by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information in any of her Majesty's courts of record at Westminster, in the name of the chamberlain of the said city, on behalf of the said mayor, commonalty and citizens.

Goods landed in docks liable to claims for freight as before landing.

51. And be it enacted, that all goods or merchandize which shall be landed in docks, and lodged in the custody of the proprietors of the said docks, under the provisions of this act, not being goods seized as forfeited to her Majesty, shall, when so landed, continue and be subject or liable to such and the same claim for freight in favour of the master, owner or owners, of the respective ships or vessels, or of any other person or persons interested in the freight of the same, from or out of which such goods or merchandise shall be so landed, as such goods, wares, or merchandise respectively were subject and liable to whilst the same were on board such ships or vessels, and before the landing thereof; and the directors and proprietors of any such docks at or in which any such goods or merchandise may be landed and lodged as aforesaid, or their servants or agents, or any of them, shall and may, and they are hereby authorised, empowered and required, upon due notice in that behalf given to them by such master or masters, owner or owners, or other persons as aforesaid, to detain and keep such goods and merchandise, not being seized as forfeited to her Majesty, in the warehouses belonging to the said docks as aforesaid, until the respective freights to which the same shall be subject and liable as aforesaid shall be duly paid or satisfied, together with the rates and charges to which the same shall have been subject and liable, or until a deposit shall have been made by the owner or owners, or consignee or consignees, of such goods or merchandise, equal in amount to the claim or demands made by the master, owner or owners, of the respective ships or vessels, or other persons as aforesaid, for or on account of freight upon such goods or merchandise, which deposit the said directors or proprietors of such docks, or their agents respectively, are hereby authorised and directed to receive and hold in trust, until the claim or demand for freight upon such goods shall have been satisfied, upon proof of which, and demand made by the person or persons, their executors, administrators or assigns, by whom the said deposit shall have been made, and the rates and charges due upon the said goods being first paid, the said deposit shall be returned to him or them by the said directors or proprietors, or their agents, on their behalf, with whom the said deposit shall have been made as aforesaid.

41. And whereas by an act passed in the thirty-ninth year of the reign of his Majesty King George the Third, intituled, "An Act for rendering "more commodious and for better regulating the port of London," and also by several subsequent Acts, certain rates or duties of tonnage were imposed on ships or vessels frequenting the port of London, to be applied in manner therein directed : And whereas by the said Act, and by several subsequent Acts, certain sums of money were advanced out of the Consolidated fund upon the credit of the said rates or duties for the purposes of the said Act ; And whereas the said sums of money so advanced out of the Consolidated Fund under the said Acts have been fully paid and replaced : Be it therefore enacted, that from and after the passing of this Act, so much of an Act passed in the fourth and fifth years of the reign of his Majesty King William the Fourth as directs that the duties imposed by that Act shall be under the management of the Commissioners of his Majesty's Customs, and shall be received and recovered in the same manner as any duties of Customs are or can be received or recovered, shall be repealed.

Collection of certain dues under 39 Geo. 3. c. 69, &c., by the Customs repealed.

42. And be it enacted, that the said duties shall, from and after the passing of this Act, be managed, paid, received and recovered by the mayor, commonalty and citizens of the City of London in such and the like manner as any other duties, rates or dues may be managed, paid, received and recovered by the said mayor, commonalty and citizens of the City of London : and the said duties (the cost and expense of collecting and controlling the same being first paid) shall be applied by the mayor, commonalty and citizens of the City of London in the manner and for the purposes directed by the said Act, passed in the fourth and fifth years of the reign of King William the Fourth.

Tonnage duties to be under management of corporation of London.

43. And whereas, by certain local Acts for establishing or regulating docks, officers appointed under such Acts respectively are empowered to cause goods brought into such docks to be landed and warehoused as therein mentioned : Be it enacted, that no goods which shall be brought into any such docks shall be landed and warehoused without due entry thereof.

Goods brought into docks not to be landed or warehoused without due entry.

13 & 14 Vict. c. 95.

14. And whereas by an Act passed in the session of Parliament holden in the ninth and tenth years of the reign of her present Majesty, intituled, "An Act for consolidating and amending the Laws relating to Wreck and

Acts recited in 9 & 10 Vic. c. 99, sec. 1, to remain

Scotland.

"Salvage," certain Acts, and parts of Acts therein mentioned, are thereby repealed: And whereas by the said Act it is enacted, that the same shall extend to all parts of the United Kingdom except Scotland: And whereas doubts are entertained whether such Acts, and parts of Acts, are still in force as regards Scotland: Be it therefore enacted and declared, that the said Act, and parts of Acts, mentioned and recited in the said Act shall, so far as the same are applicable to Scotland, be deemed to be and continue in full force and effect.

Sections 7, 8, 9, 17, 18, 19 and 20 of 12 & 13 Vic. c. 29, having exclusive reference to the Registry Laws, the subject of a consolidation now in progress, and in no way affecting the provisions of the Customs Consolidation Act, it is not necessary to give them here, though saved clauses.

6. And all the goods described as free in the said Table (A.) shall be exempt from duty on the importation thereof into the United Kingdom, and those described as free in the said Table (B.) shall be exempt from duty on the importation thereof into the Isle of Man.

(¹) The Act above referred to was passed for the purpose of reducing the duty on rum and rum-shrub, the produce of, and imported from, certain British possessions in the East Indies, into the United Kingdom. The conditions entitling such rum or rum-shrub to the reduction granted by this Act are as follow :—1stly. The reduced duties in question are not to take effect unless satisfactory proof be given to Her Majesty in Council that rum and rum-shrub, the produce of any foreign country or of any British possession into which foreign sugar or rum may be imported, have been prohibited to be imported into any British possession within the limits of the East India Company's Charter. 2ndly. As a condition of admitting such rum or rum-shrub at the reduced duties, it was necessary that an Act should be previously passed by the Governor-general in Council of India, for the prevention of the fraudulent adulteration of such rum or rum-shrub. 3rdly. To entitle such rum or rum-shrub to be entered at the reduced duties, it was made incumbent upon the master of the ship importing it, to produce to the chief officer of Customs at the port of importation, a certificate of origin under the hands of the Collector of Customs at the port of shipment, authenticating the locality of production, the quantity, strength, number, and denomination of the packages, the name and master of the exporting ship, and also to make a declaration as to the truth of the certificate and the identity of the articles so imported.

*"Now for the Laws of England (if I shall speak my opinion of them "without partiality either to my profession or country), for the matter and
"nature of them, I hold them wise, just and moderate laws: they give to God,
"they give to Caesar, they give to the subject what appertaineth. It is true
"they are as mixt as our language, compounded of British, Saxon, Danish,
"Norman customs. And surely as our language is thereby so much the richer,
"so our laws are likewise by that mixture the more complete."*—LORD BACON.

MR. SERJ. STEPHEN'S NEW COMMENTARIES ON THE LAWS OF ENGLAND.Third Edition.

Now published, in Four Volumes, 8vo., Four Guineas, cloth, (DEDICATED, by permission, to HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.)

NEW COMMENTARIES ON THE LAWS OF ENGLAND, in which are interwoven, under a new and original Arrangement of the general Subject, all such parts of the Work of Blackstone as are applicable to the present times; together with full but compendious Expositions of the Modern Improvements of the Law up to the latest period; the original and adopted Materials being throughout the Work typographically distinguished from each other. By HENRY JOHN STEPHEN, Serjeant at Law. Third Edition. Prepared for the press by JAMES STEPHEN, of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law, and Professor of English Law, &c. at King's College, London.

"For hoping well to deliver myself from mistaking, by the order and perspicuous expressing of that I do propound, I am otherwise jealous and affectionate to recede as little from antiquity, either in terms or opinions, as may stand with truth, and the proficience of knowledge."—Lord Bac. Adv. of Learning.

From the Law Magazine.

"We have long regarded this as the most valuable law book extant. We make no exception. We believe, moreover, the labour saved to the Student by this work to be invaluable. Nor are we sure that any amount of labour could give him the same comprehensive insight to the science he is about to enter upon. It is the grammar of the law. It is sheer nonsense to talk of the worth of Blackstone nowadays. We undertake to say that the Student who should read him now would have to unread half the work contains, and add as much more to his information when he had exhausted all that Blackstone knew. This results not merely from the changes which have since taken place, but from the diffuse and often verbose style in which Blackstone wrote his very faulty work, which it has been the fashion of a comparatively illiterate age to laud and extol. We venture to suggest to Serjeant Stephen to discard Blackstone altogether, and to re-write the passages he has modestly but injudiciously interpolated in his own infinitely superior composition. We may here allude to the great care taken by Mr. James Stephen, to whom much credit is due for the intelligent zeal and diligence he has evinced in preparing this edition of Stephen's Commentaries for the press."

From the Law Times.

"Assuming that all prudent Practitioners and Students will wash their hands of the past and begin to form small practical libraries entirely of the recent law, they could not find a better foundation than this third and new edition of Serjeant Stephen's Commentaries, which has been moulded throughout to the present state of the law and comprises all the recent alterations. Every lawyer knows the worth of this famous work as it came from the hands of its Author; we can assure them that it has lost none of its value in the hands of his Son, who has performed his laborious task of editing all and rewriting much, with the same care, the same industry, the same mastery of the principles of our law, and in the same clear and graceful style, that recommended the compositions of his father to popularity, even more than the fulness of learning, without its parade, that distinguished these Commentaries.

"In this manner Mr. James Stephen has yet further improved upon the work of his Father. He has presented the law as it is now with all its many changes, so that the Student may read it with confidence that he is not mistaking the old law for the new, and the Practitioner will find the double duty of unlearning as well as learning, which is now imposed upon him, much facilitated by the comprehensive view which such a work as this will give him of the entire domain of the law of England, changed, modified, reformed, improved, botched and tinkered as it has been by skilful and unskilful hands; by practical and by unpractical men, by those who would improve as well as by those who would destroy the goodly fabric. We heartily recommend these Commentaries as beyond measure the best book that has ever appeared to form a foundation for the study of the law of England."

From the Justice of the Peace.

"To speak in terms of approbation of a work on which the fiat of public opinion has so unmistakably set its stamp would be altogether an act of supererogation. Every one knows that the last four or five years have been a stirring time in the way of legal reform. He will, therefore, be quite prepared to learn that the present edition of the New Commentaries bears the mark of alteration, either in text or note, in almost every chapter throughout the work, if not in every page. We honestly and heartily advise him to turn to the work itself, and he will find that it not only contains the latest information upon almost every subject he may require to be informed upon, but that as in former editions, so in this, whatever is handled is treated in that perspicuous and scientific manner which has hitherto contributed to extend the reputation of the New Commentaries."

From the Legal Observer.

"We welcome a new and third edition of Mr. Serjeant Stephen's Commentaries on the Laws of England, founded on the text of Blackstone. In this edition the learned author has been ably assisted by his son Mr. James Stephen. They have, with great diligence and accuracy, digested the chief alterations in the law since the last edition of the work—a task of great difficulty, requiring no ordinary knowledge of the law as it was and as it is, with an extraordinary power of condensing and arranging the changes which have been effected in nearly all departments of our judicial system from year to year. The arduous task of this new edition has been ably performed. We know not any work which, taken as a whole, can be compared with the Commentaries as the first introduction to the Study of the Laws of England, whether for the use of the lawyer, the legislator, or the private gentleman."

V.

QUESTIONS ON MR. SERJ. STEPHEN'S NEW COMMENTARIES.

QUESTIONS for LAW STUDENTS on the THIRD EDITION of MR. SERJEANT STEPHEN'S NEW COMMENTARIES on the LAWS of ENGLAND. By JAMES STEPHEN, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law, and Professor of English Law, &c., at King's College, London.

"Stephen's Commentaries is the Student's Text-book; for it is a Blackstone improved—Blackstone as the author would have written it had he lived in our day. Now the best mode of learning law is to read carefully, and then either to question yourself or to be questioned by another, as to what you have read. Thus you find out what you have mastered and in what you are deficient. But few are fortunate enough to possess friends competent to this task; and to such, a volume that plays the part of a friend, and supplies the questions, will be of great value. The Student should write his answers, and then compare them with the text; and for this purpose references are given to the page where the answers to each will be found. Mr. James Stephen has done good service to his father's fame by thus extending the usefulness of the best law book for Students."—Law Times.

SHELFORD ON THE LAW OF RAILWAYS.—THIRD EDITION.

Just published, royal 12mo. 30s. cloth.

THE LAW OF RAILWAYS, including the Three General Consolidation Acts, 1845, and the other General Acts for regulating Railways in England and Ireland, with copious Notes of Decided Cases on their Construction, including the Rights and Liabilities of Shareholders, Allottees of Shares, and Provisional Committee-men, with Forms, &c. By LEONARD SHELFORD, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law. Third Edition.

"Mr. Shelford has long since established implicit confidence in the accuracy, fullness and practical utility of every book to which his name is attached. His Law of Railways has long been among the best of his performances, and a careful examination of this edition will fully warrant his announcement that the new matter is important and extensive."—The Law Magazine.

"Mr. Shelford was one of the first to reduce this new law to the form of a treatise, and that his labours have found favour with those who are most competent to judge of their value is proved by the fact that already it has attained to the dignity of a Third Edition. It is not necessary now to describe a book that must be so well known to all our readers,—enough to state that this New Edition embodies the very latest Law, all the New Statutes and the multitudinous Decisions, so that the Volume presents, in a form conveniently arranged for reference, the entire Law of Railways as it is at this moment."—The Law Times.

"We can readily indorse Mr. Shelford's assertion, that the new matter introduced into this edition is extensive and important. This, added to the number of forms, of considerable importance, and cases, of which there are some 1200, an ample table of contents and a very copious index, conduce to make the work all that could be desired. Those who are interested in the law on which it treats may refer to it not merely with a certainty of being able to find what they are looking for, but of finding the general law on the subject carefully collected, explained and illustrated, by a reference to almost every decision which bears upon the point at issue."—The Justice of the Peace.

"The work has now been expanded to 800 pages, comprising every statute and decision of importance. The work is valuable not only to all engaged in behalf of railway companies, who may form a comparatively small part of the Profession, but to all who have dealings with or claims upon railway companies, and in this respect the public in general and the Profession at large are interested in ascertaining as well the provisions of the Legislature as the construction put upon the enactments which affect the individual members of the community."—Legal Observer.

"Not only to the Profession but to shareholders, allottees of shares, provisional committeemen and others is this goodly digest a necessity, but all who contemplate incurring the liabilities or seeking the rights and profits accruing to railway office, may consult with advantage Mr. Shelford's pages. It is the best arranged digest of Railway Law of the time."—Morning Advertiser.

CRABB'S CONVEYANCING.—FOURTH EDITION, BY CHRISTIE.

Just published, 2 vols. royal 8vo. 2l. 2s. cloth.

A COMPLETE SERIES of PRECEDENTS in CONVEYANCING, with Common and Commercial Forms, in Alphabetical Order, adapted to the present State of the Law and Practice of Conveyancing, with Prefaces, Observations and Notes on the several Deeds. By GEORGE CRABB, Esq., Barrister at Law. The Fourth Edition. By J. T. CHRISTIE, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law.

"The original work needs no commendation; it is a standard book of the highest reputation and of indispensable utility. In this new edition Mr. Christie has endeavoured to curtail the work as much as possible without diminishing materially the number of precedents, and has altered those which are retained that they may be similar to the forms of drafts now in use. He has revised the Prefaces to the different Precedents according to the various changes made in the law. He has retained the alphabetical arrangement, and has not diminished the variety of subjects on which the Precedents are given. All this must largely enhance the value of the work not merely to Conveyancers but to all practical men. The new Forms are drawn with admirable precision, and reflect great credit on Mr. Christie, who is entitled to the thanks of the profession for a really valuable addition to our working libraries."—Law Magazine.

"Mr. Christie has not only ably revised this Fourth Edition of the late Mr. Crabb's work, but very materially improved it by amending, and in many instances curtailing, the length of the original precedents, and adapting them to the established forms of the present day. The introductory statements of the law relating to each class of drafts are concise and highly useful, particularly to the articulated clerk and young solicitor, who it is obvious should strive to unite an accurate knowledge of the principles of law applicable to the various kinds of legal instruments with the practical forms by which the intentions of the parties are to be carried into effect, and by which means he will soon become master of his profession. The Editor has with great care in the Prefaces to each class of Deeds, and the notes thereon, noticed the various alterations in the law, which have taken place since the former edition of the work."—Legal Observer.

"Crabb's Conveyancing is so well and favourably known to all conveyancers, as well as those persons generally connected with the transfer of property, that a new edition would have perhaps attracted less attention, were it not that the present is edited by so excellent a conveyancer as Mr. Christie. The circumstance of his editing the work stamps it at once with the profession as the best groundwork existing. The arrangement, the forms, selection of precedents, and general treatment of the subject were so well given in Mr. Crabb's original work, that an editor could mould them to the form and spirit of the present day, retaining all the valuable portions, and rendering them applicable to practical purposes, as altered by the statutes passed since Mr. Crabb wrote. We must award our warmest praise to Mr. Christie for producing a work so much required by the profession, and which he has given in so perfect a form, that no lawyer will feel his library to be complete without it."—Bell's Messenger.
